CAPTAIN WILLIAM SLATER, No. 27 Granville Street, Halifax, N.S.

H. WASHINGTON, M. D., Throat and Lung Specialist, Toronto.

DEAR SIR,—When you visited me in the latter part of January of this year I had been given up to die of consumption by a consultation of physicians, Drs. Redd and Oliver, prominent physicians of Halifax who considered that my recovery was simply impossible. I had no hope myself, nor had my family. When you expressed a hope of my recovery it was received with a doubt. Confined to my bed, very low, weak, wasted, night sweats very bad, troublesome cough, raising large quantities of matter—in fact every appearance of a speedy death. After using your Respirator and Spiropneter and medicine I began to recover very fast, so much so that during three hard winter months I have gained from 20 to 25 lbs., and was able to walk out on Easter Sunday. My strength is daily increasing, and I shall be able soon to be at work. To you I owe a deep sense of gratitude, and am anxious for others who are suffering as I was to consult you. You can make what use of this letter you see fit, and thanking you for what I consider a most wonderful treatment,

I remain, yours truly,
CAPT. WM. SLATER.

Later,—Fully recovered and at work.

FIVE MILLION POUNDS.

By T. WESTWOOD REID.

(CONCLUDED.)

As my gentlemanly guide of the entrance to Shakespeare's box, consisting the customary half-crown, left me, pocketing coin to stand on. In the prow of the boat was a telegraph messenger, Branksome, Fosdyke and I stood side by side, leaning over the bulwarks of the yacht and awaiting the approach of the little craft. There was none of that joyous excitement which usually prevails on board a vessel entering port after a voyage. Our tongues were silent, and our faces showed too clearly the anxiety that possessed our minds. Above us the leaden cloud of fog hung like a pall. Its desolation and gloom seemed to have taken possession of our hearts.

We heard the measured beat of the oars as the boat drew near, and we could see the features of the men occupying it. To me there was a familiarity in the air of the principal figure in the boat who stood up and unconcernedly; and, as I looked, I recognized in the passenger of Alsen, while standing we dreaded.

The gangway had been lowered and the customs and health officers came quickly aboard, saluting us as they did so. They were followed immediately by the telegraph messenger.

"Mr. Fenton here?" I snatched from his hand the envelope he held towards me and without waiting to see if he had any message for Branksome and Fosdyke I turned away to read that addressed to myself.

It was from the chief constable at Barton and was brief. "Thanks for message. Shall be glad of personal interview at earliest convenience."

I felt relieved. After all there was nothing very terrible in this despatch, nothing to justify the dark forebodings of Branksome. Yet with the feeling of relief was mingled a sense of disappointment. I had hoped that possibly I might have received a message from Daisy.

I turned to look for Branksome but could see nothing either of him or Fosdyke. At that moment one of the persons who had boarded us in the customs boat came up to me and entered into conversation.

"Perhaps you would like to see the evening paper, sir. I got it just as we left the landing stage. You will find in it the latest news about the Great Lorton mystery. But, by the way," he continued, as though a sudden light had broken upon his mind, "the Golden Hawk was the name of Mr. Mauleverer's yacht, was it not? Is it possible that you are a friend of his? Have you heard?—"

In an agony of impatience I interrupted him, and asked him to allow me to look at the newspaper.

"You will see the latest telegram there," he said, indicating a particular spot, as I took the sheet into my hands.

I easy at once that "the Great Lorton mystery" was the leading feature of the issue. It filled a column of the paper—a column bordered with big type and striking head lines. I carefully ran my eye downwards, not taking in the sense of the words I read, until I came to the piece indicated by the man, and found the following:

"LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

"ARREST ON SUSPICION.

"BARTON, Friday morning.

"This morning Mr. Eastwood, chief constable of Barton, acting on information received, proceeded to Great Lorton Hall, and there arrested Miss Daisy Sandcliffe, niece of Mr. Maulerever, on suspicion of being concerned in his murder. Miss Sandcliffe, it will be remembered, was the only known relative of the deceased, and attended his funeral on Monday as chief mourner. She is said to be a young lady of remarkably engrossing appearance. It is rumored that evidence of a very startling kind will be laid before the magistrates in support of the charge against her. The prisoner will be brought before a special sessions at Barton this afternoon; but it is understood that on this occasion only formal evidence will be tendered."

I read it all. The words burned themselves into my brain never to be effaced; and then—I suddenly grew sick and cold, the objects about me seemed to be spinning round, and immediately all was blank. For the first time in my life I had fainted.

As I slowly recovered consciousness, Branksome's voice was the first that I heard.

"He is coming round. Take him below."

In obedience to the curt command, I was carried down to the main saloon and laid upon a sofa. In a moment Branksome followed me. He waved aside the sailors who had attended me.

"Well," he said, "you understand now, I suppose?"

His face was almost as white as I felt that mine was.

"No; I understand nothing," I answered in faint tones.

"Do you not see, Fenton," he said, in a hurried whisper, "what it is that you have done? You have put an idea in the heads of those fools at Barton and the consequence is the arrest of Daisy."

"You cannot believe that," I said, with more energy. "Surely you do not charge me with having caused her arrest! Is some hideous mistake on the part of those clumsy Yorkshire policemen. We shall have it put right immediately. I shall go to Barton this afternoon, and—"

"Stay, my young friend," said Branksome, speaking in measured tones and a softened voice, "your eyes are closed to the truth. If you had never hinted at such a thing as murder, Daisy would never had been suspected. But you have lighted the match, and you cannot now prevent the explosion."

I shrank back from him in horror. "Why, you speak as though you might be guilty."

He shook his head slowly, mournfully.

"Did I not tell you that I feared for the consequences when a girl like Daisy, proud, passionate, sensitive, is subjected to such persecutions as those which she had to suffer at Mauleverer's hands?"

"But they were over! Do you not remember the letter you had from her at Bodoë Besides, the thing is ridiculous. Daisy a murderess! I shall believe that you and I are particles sooner than suspect such a thing."

"Yes," he said, thoughtfully, "I knew I should shock you. But for Daisy's sake, as well as yours, it is better that you should know the worst. You and I have got to save that poor girl, for remember it is you who have brought her into peril."

I was overwhelmed with a grief such as I had never known before. Very hurriedly we made arrangements as to the future, for I felt that we must work together if anything was to be done. He meant, he said, to go to Great Lorton the next morning. For my part I was thankful when I landed to find that there was a train by means of which I could reach Barton that night.

Barton is a pleasant agricultural town, boasting a big market place, where once a week the cattle from the surrounding districts are offered for sale, a good hotel, an old church, a jail and a sessions house. It was ten o'clock at night when I reached the end of my journey. I hurried to the hotel and deposited my portmanteau, and then I took the porter who had carried it as my guide to the police station.

Mr. Eastwood, the chief constable, I was told had gone home. If I had very particular business with him, I might possibly see him there, but the officer on duty supposed that I had better call the next morning at ten o'clock, when I would be certain to meet him.

Judges' Criminal Court.

A sitting of the above court was held by His Honor Judge Weller at the Court house on Tuesday afternoon. The charge against Nelson Parks of feloniously shooting and wounding William Hubble of Methuen, enlarged from last week, was heard. It was shown that Nelson Parks, who owns a farm in Methuene, went out to his orchard to pick apples, taking a gun with him. William Hubble and John Nixon entered the orchard evidently to help themselves, when Parks fired at them, some of the shot striking Hubble. His Honor found the defendant guilty and sentenced him to imprisonment for one week. R. E. Wood appeared for the crown and John Burnham for the defendant.

Reception to the Lieutenant-Governor.

A joint meeting of the committees of the Central Exhibition directors and of the town councillors, appointed to receive the Lieutenant-Governor on his visit to Peterborough on Wednesday next, was held in the council chamber Tuesday evening. It was decided that the joint committee should meet at the station on the arrival of the Lieutenant-Governor, to receive him, when the committee and the Governor's party will proceed to the Oriental for lunch. At 1.30 His Honor will be escorted to the Exhibition Grounds, where he will be presented with addresses from the Town Council and the Society. Arrangements were also made to drive the Lieutenant-Governor around town and show him the extent and importance of its manufacturing industries, etc.

The Ennismore Picnic.

The fall picnic in connection with the Ennismore Roman Catholic Church, better known as Father Keilty's picnic, was held at the Bridgenorth Park on Tuesday. Owing to the unpropitious weather, the attendance was not as large as it otherwise would have been. However, hundreds of people from all over the township, augmented by numbers from the surrounding townships, villages and from town, were present, and a very happy day was spent, all enjoying themselves to the fullest extent. An excellent dinner was provided by the ladies of the congregation, which received the liberal treatment it deserved, after which, sports and games, and dancing were engaged in till evening, in which the young people participated with an energy peculiar to Ennismore picnics. The majority of the picnicers remained for tea, when they drove home, evidently satisfied with the days amusement.

A Shocking Affair.

The Break of R. B. McKee's Hardware Store Described—Peterborough's Piece of Wriggins' Earthquake.

On Tuesday evening, as a gentleman was leaving Mr. R. B. McKee's hardware store, on stepping on the iron plate at the door sill, he suddenly received a severe painful shock, rubbed his shin to remove a sudden cramp that caught him, and walked away. A well known citizen who holds very decided views as to the education of boys, entered the shop on a brisk walk. On stepping on the magic plate he doubled up like a jack-knife. He complained to Mr. McKee that some infernal Institute boy with malice afore thought, had drawn a barbed wire across the door step and tripped him up. A loafer leaned lazily against one of the iron protecting rods in front of the plate glass windows, when presto, he changed his position with alacrity, at the same time objecting to Bob Ingersoll's view on future punishment. Mr. Craig entered the shop, but being more inquisitive than his predecessor, he made an investigation and ascertained that the whole of the iron front of the shop was charged with electricity, a veritable electric battery. The electric light wire which touched the wet awning above the doorway, provided the electric power, it is supposed carrying the current down the iron supporting pillars, to the little iron plate which electrified every person who put his foot on it. The news of the phenomenal battery spread with the speed of electricity, and a crowd drew a crowd. The electric current was fitful and the shocks came and went like small earthquakes. Scores of small boys and men of all ages, sizes and complexions, stopped with the crowd to get a shock. Strategy was resorted to to inweigh the unwary into a shock by getting him to put his foot on the plate, touch the iron bars or supports, or shake hands with a party connected with the current. Excitement ran high and everybody enjoyed a shock more or less,—considerably less of more than more of less. The crowd at times grew so large that the police had to make the shocked move on to give the unshocked a chance. It was ascertained that by striking and rubbing the window bar a small electric light was produced, while shaking the water trough at the side of the window made a similar light on a larger scale. The phenomenal battery was patronized till the current was cut off, at 12 o'clock. Persons who wore rubbers and those who had imbibed Moxie Nerve food were bad subjects and the electric current did not effect their nerves, so they said.

Fall Millinery Openings.

Deadly Trimmed Bonnets, Delightful Bounets, and Handsome Hats, Displayed in Endless Profusion.

Adjusting to custom and without regard to or consideration of earthquakes or other terrestrial disturbances, the majority of the millinery establishments in town with their usual enterprise held their formal fall openings to-day, and will continue to exhibit till the remainder of the week in some instances. The ladies with an eye for the beautiful and a second one for style, patronized the show rooms in large numbers, and of course were delighted with the brilliant displays made. From reliable authority it is ascertained that tostumes will form the chief article of head gear for the coming seasons, while hats and bonnets trimmed with fur, feathers and birds, will also be fashionable. Knit Tam O' Shanters are also stylish. A profusion of plush will be used, gray being the leading fashionable shade. Astrachan trimmings in wool and silk is the latest and newest trimming on the market. In mantles the English and German patterns lead, while short Jersey jackets, long and short dolmans and sling sleeve jackets are all the rage. It is feared the last named article will not take well, as the wearer's arms will not be as free as they might be, and as one is sometimes required to be. Silk seulettes, with real seal "frogs" or "eats" to match, are popular. Altogether the exhibitions of trimmed and untrimmed millinery, mantles, etc., are extremely beautiful, comfortable looking, and the ladies and those interested in the milliners' art should not fail to see what is to be seen.

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 20th, 1886.

GENTLEMEN,—Being over 70 years of age, and over 30 years ruptured, looked upon my case as hopeless, considering as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two specialists from New York State, costing me $60. Nothing would retain my Hernia. I have worn your truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort; even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down, it holds me perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. B. HALL.

This new Spiral Spring Pad has taken 20 years to make it perfect; is guaranteed to hold the very worst case during the hardest work or severest trials. In will cure every child here; and 95 out of every 100 of adults. Be sure and don't waste your money on useless appliances, but send stamp for our Treatise; it contains full information, your neighbors' testimony, price list and directions how to measure. THURSDAY SEPTEMBER 30, 1886.

AN INDIAN UPRISING.

THE NORTHWEST BLOODS REPORTED TO BE ON THE WARPATH.

Ottawa, Sept. 29.—Word has been received from the Department of Mounted Police from the Crow Creek Agency, Northwest Territory, that the Blood Indians from that reservation have gone on the war path and are devastating about there in revenge for the killing of six of their band recently by the Gros Ventres.

They left their reservation, as the report states, Monday morning after a war dance, and went south to Hudson, N. W. T., where they came on a small settlement of whites some sixteen in number, of whom ten were women and children. These were all killed and scalped, the besieging party carrying off the scalps as trophies on poles. They then continued on their way toward the Gros Ventres settlement. Along their tracks were many farm houses of settlers. These were all laid in ashes and the inhabitants killed and scalped. Not less than one hundred whites have so far fallen victims to the red devils' knives. Among the killed are two Roman Catholic missionaries at the Crowfoot agency whose bodies are said to have been terribly mutilated.

The whites at the reservation, including the Indian agent, have been killed. After leaving the agency about thirty miles toward the American border the Crowfeet met with about sixty Gros Ventres, and a desperate fight ensued. The killed and wounded on each side cannot be estimated correctly, but it is believed the Crowfeet lost nine killed and thirty wounded, while over fifty fell belonging to the Gros Ventres tribe. One hundred and fifty ponies were captured by the attacking party as well as a large amount of clothing and ammunition.

It is estimated by the department that at least $25,000 worth of property belonging to settlers has been burned and otherwise destroyed, while the loss of life cannot be accurately calculated.

Two detachments of the mounted police have been ordered to put down the rising, but it is expected that the whole force, some 1,500 men, will be necessary, as the Rockies and Canada Sioux will join the uprising. Crowfoot, the chief of the rebellion, is now on his way here, and cannot be expected to use his influence to put down the uprising.

Minister of Militia Caron will call out a force of at least 3,000 infantry and cavalry to go to the scene of the trouble and assist the mounted police. In the meantime, until they reach the scene, hundreds of lives may be sacrificed and any amount of property destroyed. A general rising of the Indians is feared.

A Bogus Rising.

Winnipeg, Sept. 29.—The editor of the Fort MacLeod Gazette telegraphs that no massacre by the Indians has occurred in the Northwest. Everything is quiet there, the Bloods being on their reserve. He adds that the rumor probably originated from the killing of a few Bloods in Montana some time ago.

CROWFOOT IN MONTREAL.

A Chief That is Truly Loyal—His Opinion of the Riel Rebellion.

Montreal, Sept. 29.—The great Blackfoot Chief Crowfoot and his brother Three Bulls, accompanied by Rev. Mr. Lacombe, arrived here to-day and were met by a large concourse of citizens at the C.P.R. depot. They were at once conveyed to the Richelieu Hotel. Being asked about the Northwest rebellion, Crowfoot said: "Having seen years ago what sufferings the Sioux rebels on the American side had to undergo, I was not disposed to run the same risk for myself and the tribe. Moreover, I had no complaint to make against the white men and I am glad that I promised them my friendship and kept it. The others tried hard to get me on their side and they often sent me tobacco for that purpose, but I always returned their tobacco."

Father Lacombe here added: "You can say that there never was in the Dominion as loyal an Indian as Crowfoot, or one more beloved by his subjects or who has rendered more valuable service to the white men."

Three Bulls is 47 years old. Crowfoot is a man of medium height, 56 years old, with dark piercing and intelligent eyes, pronounced aqueline nose, thin lips, very prominent cheek bones and long and heavy dark hair. His countenance is not fierce but smiling and attractive, though determined.

Mr. L'Heureux leaves to-morrow for Regina to bring ears four other chiefs who, with Crowfoot and his brother, will take part in the celebration of the unveiling of the statue of Brant at Brantford on October 13.

The Sealing Seizures.

Ottawa, Sept. 29.—The Dominion Government has pointed out to the Imperial Government that in a convention signed at St. Petersburg between England and Russia one of the articles guarantees to British subjects from whatsoever quarter they may arrive, the right to forever enjoy the privileges of navigation and fishing in the Pacific Ocean or any part thereof. It is therefore argued that the United States could not have received from Russia the right to exclusive navigation or fishing or sailing privileges in Alaskan waters.

Tory Rally at Ottawa.

Ottawa, Ont., Sept. 29.—A grand Conservative rally will be held here on October 8. All the Cabinet Ministers and W. R. Meredith, M.P.P., are announced as speakers. Sir John will speak on the labor bureau question, Mr. Costigan on home rule and Mr. Chapleau on the Riel question.

About Time He Died.

Brantford, Sept. 29.—Andrew Lucas (colored) died this morning at the supposed age of 128. He was born in slavery in Tennessee and was Gen. Jackson's servant. In Canada deceased was highly thought of by all who employed him.

Citizen's Day at Hamilton.

Hamilton, Sept. 29.—To-day was Citizen's Day at the Great Central Fair. Between four and five thousand people were present.

The Cattle Plague in Chicago.

Chicago, Sept. 29.—A morning paper says that although the health inspectors at the stockyards deny the report, it is known that two or three lots of cattle have come in recently afflicted with Texas fever. Saturday last, it is stated, there arrived at the stockyards 21 cars loaded with Colorado cattle. Several head were pulled from the cars dead, while many were "downers." The cattle called "downers" were quickly bought by scalpers, and sent to the slaughter houses in Bridgeport.

They United Against the Police.

Belfast, Sept. 29.—There was desperate fighting to-day between Protestant and Catholic workmen at Barbour's foundry in this city. The police interfered, when the fighters joined forces and stoned and routed the police. The cavalry were then summoned, who charged upon and dispersed the mob. Scores of rioters and several policemen were injured.

Mr. S. H. Newman, of Owen Sound, has a plum of the Pond Seedling variety which girths seven inches one way and seven and a-half inches the other, and weighs over a quarter of a pound.

BULGARIA IN ARMS.

THE CZAR BY GEN. KAULBARS ASSUMES A DIRECTORATE.

Sofia, Sept. 29.—The Regency has posted notices for a grand zobranje which is to elect a successor to Prince Alexander. Gen. Kaulbars, the Russian special agent, threatens to have the notices removed. A rupture between Bulgaria and Russia is imminent.

Gen. Kaulbars has removed M. De Klindoff, the Russian consul here, because of his lack of firmness in dealing with the Bulgarian Government, and has appointed in his place M. Uglestrom, Russian consul at Philippopolis.

The Iron Heel of the Autocrat.

Sofia, Sept. 29.—Gen. Kaulbars has sent a violent circular to the Russian consuls in Belgium with the request that they inform the people of the circular's contents. The circular makes twelve points, several of which the Bulgarian Government declares Russia must know to be false. It begins by stating that "The time for mere words has ended. The Czar can now be convinced only by acts. Only then will he offer this country internal and external protection." The circular accuses the Bulgarians of acts of indiscipline in buring flags and the insignia of St. George. The Bulgarian Government denies the latter accusation. The circular declares that Russia cannot allow Bulgaria to try the kidnappers of Alexander, and that it is impossible to allow Alexander and his family to return to Bulgaria. It is understood that owing to this circular the Government will resist the demands of the Czar's ultimatum brought by Gen. Kaulbars.

The People Revolt.

Sofia, Sept. 29.—Several distributers of Gen. Kaulbar's circular have been maltreated, especially a subaltern from the Russian consulate, who was roughly expelled from a cafe where the circular had been read.

THE FIREY BOULANGER'S BOMB.

He Asks Twenty-Five Million Dollars for its Adoption by the French Army.

Paris, Sept. 29.—Gen. Boulanger, desiring to secure from the Government an appropriation of $25,000,000 for some explosive bombs, recently invited the Budget Committee to witness the experiments he was carrying on in private. The experiments were made with a monster mortar designed as a type for the destruction of fortifications. The missile thrown explodes with exceedingly destructive effect. It is charged with a new explosive, of whose composition Gen. Boulanger and his associates alone possess the secret. The compound, however, is admitted to have all the powers of gun cotton with none of its defects, and is said, in addition, to be easily transported and not to be liable to explode. It is stated that the committee were not very highly satisfied with the result, but promised to fully support Gen. Boulanger's demand for the special appropriation.

WHO SHALL JUDGE?

An Irish Priest's Indirect Incentive to Murder.

Dublin, Sept. 29.—Father Cantwell, a Catholic priest, is reported to have used the following language while addressing a league meeting yesterday: "Sparing a landlord who has unjustly evicted a tenant is straining to the utmost limit the order which tells us not to murder any individual. [Cheers.] Still it is always morally wrong to commit murder.'

What the Tenants Ma be Driven to.

London, Sept. 29.—Mr. J. P. O'Connor, speaking at Shore Ditch to-night, said he hated crime but cruel landlords might drive the Irish peasantry to desperation. If coercion followed it would probably prove a short road to Irish autonomy.

THE LING CHI EXECUTION.

A Young Girl of 18 Officially Chopped Into a Thousand Pieces.

At Canton on Aug. 27 a Chinese girl, aged 18 years, underwent the Ling Chi execution, which is that one piece after another of the victim's body is cut away until the body is divided up in exactly one thousand pieces. The victim, as in this case, always dies from loss of blood before the horror is completed. The woman here mentioned was charged with having poisoned her husband and three relatives. Although it was shown on examination that she was innocent of the crime the people of the district insisted upon her execution, which the Viceroy finally ordered.

THE THREE BALLS IN CHINA.

Forty-six Employes of a Pawn Shop and the Proprietor Murdered.

San Francisco, Sept. 29.—Hong Kong advices says a band of discharged Chinese soldiers made a descent on a leading pawn shop in Huchong on August 13. They murdered the proprietor and forty-six of his employes. The robbers were all arrested.

French Interests in Egypt.

Paris, Sept. 29.—The Paris newspapers unanimously endorse the firmness of Premier De Freycinet's language. Le National says: "We have no concern with Tripoli and will not go there? Our interests lie in Egypt and nowhere else, and we will enforce our rights." M. De Freycinet arrived at Montpelier to-day and was enthusiastically received by the people.

The Chambers Made a Mistake.

Paris, Sept. 29.—The Journal des Debats, referring to the advice of the Berlin National Gazette that France annex Tripoli, says: "It is very natural that the National Gazette should wish to send us to Tripoli. It is equally natural that we should resist the temptation of following its disinterested advice. Regarding Egypt the English are deluded if they believe that France is disposed to sell so cheaply her claims there. It is her indisputable right to forbid any maritime power from definitely seizing Egypt. French feeling must not be judged by the refusal of the chambers to co-operate with England in Egypt in 1882. The public opinion of France has since recognized that the chambers then made a mistake. The annexation of Tongnin has created another interest for France, rendering the neutralization of the Suez Canal necessary."

Racing at Brighton Beach.

Brighton Beach, Sept. 29.—First race, ¾ mile—Glendon won, May W. second, Glenbar third; time 1.17¼. Second race, ¾ mile—Charm won, Boreas second, Ventilation third; time 1.17¼. Third race ¾ mile—Big head won, Cato second, Burgundy third; time 1.31. Fourth race ¾ mile—Saluda won, Franz second, Della Bench third; time 1.16½. Fifth race, 1 mile—Ferg Kirk won, Elizabeth second, Treasurer third; time 1.43½. Sixth race, 1 mile—Mamie Hunt won, Harasan second, Lord Lorne third; time 1.44½.

The Mayflower and Galatea.

Marblehead, Mass., Sept. 29.—Edward Burgess, the designer of the Mayflower, who was aboard of the yacht to-day, says when the yachts got out to starting point there was a good whole-sail breeze, and the Galatea headed over as much as he had seen her. Still Lieut Henn did not think there was wind enough. He says if the race is not sailed Thursday, the Mayflower will be laid up for the winter.

SPROULE MUST BE EXECUTED.

The Privy Council Restores the Sentence—Petitions in His Behalf Insufficient.

Washington, D.C., Sept. 29.—Sproule, the American who was convicted in British Columbia of murder and whose sentence of death was suspended pending an appeal to the courts at Ottawa and afterwards to the Privy Council of Great Britain, will probably be executed on October 16, the day to which he was respited. The State Department has exerted itself in his behalf but has to-day been informed from London that the representations in Sproule's behalf have not been considered sufficiently weighty to overturn the verdict or to longer postpone the execution.

UNIVERSITY FEDERATION.

Things Moving Along Very Satisfactorily—A New Convocation Hall.

Toronto, Sept. 29.—Dr. Nelles and Dr. Potts are organizing for a regular campaign to raise the necessary money for Victoria College. Already Mr. Potts has secured one hundred thousand dollars, or one-fifth of the required amount. He proposes to raise enough money in Toronto to put up the buildings, and this seems fair enough. Their magnitude and character will therefore depend on the generosity of our citizens. Of their doing the right thing Dr. Potts has no doubt. He is brimful of energy for the work, and he has the hearty support of Principal Nelles, the faculty, and even Dr. Sutherland.

The site, it is understood, will be that part of the Park whereon Mr. J. K. Kerr's residence stands and the land both north and east of it. The main building consequently will be at the head or rather turn of the driveway running past Mr. Christie's house. It will be about five hundred yards northeast from the new Parliament Buildings.

Toronto University is badly in need of a new hall, and at last there appears a probability of a suitable one being erected. The Local Government is expected and will do something, the University itself will have to supply a portion of the funds, while a number of prominent citizens have promised to assist. Between them all the finest hall in the city ought to be erected and one of which the University and the Province ought to be proud.

Hanlan and Beach.

Here is a verbatim report of part of the scene on board the steamboat Fuchsia, which was following the Nielsen-Largan race, between Hanlan and Beach:

"Hanlan—I have come to England expressly to row you, and I hope you'll give me a chance.

Beach—You're too late, my friend; I've been waiting several months for you, and, having fulfilled all of my engagements, I shall not row here again. I will row you in Australia, and bet £1000 to £800 that I beat you on the Parramatta.

Hanlan—I couldn't come in the early part of the summer; I was in poor condition and unfit to row a race. I sent you a challenge as soon as I possibly could after I regained my form.

Beach—I have received no challenge from you.

Hanlan—Well, come to America, I will give you £2000 to begin with, and you can make any amount more while there.

Beach—I shall certainly do no such thing.

Hanlan—Then give me £1000 and I will go to Australia.

Beach—I should rather think not. The Australians treated you well when you was there, and yet you afterward complained of ill-treatment at their hands.

Hanlan—No, I didn't.

Beach—Well, the American newspapers say you d'd.

Hanlan—You shouldn't believe all they say. They said the other day that you had called me a fool.

Beach—I didn't say that, but I did say you was a gasbag.

Hanlan—Why did you say that?

Beach—Because you have bragged so much and done so little since our last meeting.

Hanlan—You're a mighty poor sort of a champion, refusing to accept a challenge made, as you know, in good faith. I will row you on the Nepean River.

Beach—I will row on the Paramatta or not at all.

Beach—Oh! bosh."

Hanlan bit his lip and turned away, appealing to by-standers, as he did so, to say whether he hadn't done all that a man could do to make a match with Beach.

Beach has greatly lowered himself in English opinion by his conduct.

"THERE'S TROUBLE IN THE OLD MAN'S MIND."

Sir John is grievously cornered. In all his political career he seems never to have been in so tight a place as he is now. Hitherto his craft has enabled him to wiggle out of some very nasty corners. What he could not defend he could excuse, and his ingenuity and assurance were equal to bringing him up-top—in more or less disorder—but he was still a-top. Now disaster threatens him, defeat stares him in the face, and of all the tricks the sly old fox had in his bag, not one will avail. He is forced to eat crow of his own cooking. He falls back upon repudiation. He has ostensibly repudiated the Mail, but that is only a trick, so transparent the dullest cannot help seeing through it. There is no doubt, however, that his repudiation of his pet iniquity, the Franchise Act, is genuine. He has instructed his pet organ, the Mail, to announce Sir John's intention of repealing the Act the next session of Parliament. His determination only justifies the opposition the Liberals have shown against the Franchise Act ever since it was introduced. Sir John would listen to no reason. He forced his followers to pass the bill. But it has not done what he anticipated it would do. Haldimand by-election showed him he could not depend on the Act. Now, after putting the country to half a million dollars expense to prepare lists, under the Act, he decides—when the existence of the Act will not assist him in retaining power—he decides on the repeal of an Act, passed only last session. At the same time he decides on a characteristically Tory trick, that of stealing Liberal principles. Expansion of the suffrage has always been one of the cardinal principles of the Liberals. The Ontario Government has been steadily advancing along that line towards manhood suffrage. The last legislation effected in the Ontario Legislature upon the subject was a long stride in that direction, and as rapidly as prudence and caution would warrant it, Hon. Mr. Mowat was progressing in the direction of manhood suffrage. All these things and many others indicate the straits in which Sir John finds himself placed. Sir John will do anything, but honestly, administer the affairs of the country, in order to retain his hold upon office. His becoming honest would be a more startling and wonderful performance than his combined somersaults, implied in his repudiation of the Orangemen, his repudiation of the Mail, his flop-over on the temperance question, and his weakening on the Franchise Act. The horizontality of the old man's head on political matters is not up to the mark.

THE Toronto World remarks:—"Reasons for the esteemed Mail's change of tone are as plentiful as flies in August, but it does appear to have occurred to anybody that the chief object is to stimulate a sluggish circulation."

SIR JOHN is to make his promised special address to the workingmen of Canada. Perhaps he will tell them why he still keeps in his cabinet Hon. Frank Smith, who showed his high regard for the workingmen by calling the Knights of Labor a "lot of thieves."

THE Mail says:—"The St. Catharines News, like other Reform papers, thinks there is some deep game in the stand taken by the Mail." That is where we differ from our namesake, says the Toronto News and the Reform press. The Mail's game is so shallow that it is very easily seen through.

HON. MR. GLADSTONE has discovered that English Tories are in the respects touched upon, just like Canadian Tories. In the pamphlet issued by the "Grand Old Man" on the Irish question since the elections, he shows that the Tories on five important occasions after voting down Liberal measures, turned right round and passed them, in one or two instances making them more radical than they were in the first place. From this Mr. Gladstone argues that there would be nothing at all out of the common if the Tories should proceed to pass a measure, giving the Nationalists Home Rule on the lines laid down by the Gladstone Government.

FIVE MILLION POUNDS.

By T. WILLIS HEAD.

"My duty is pressing," I said. "I must see him to-night."

So I set forth on a walk of half a mile to the chief constable's private residence. On our way to it, the porter, who was still my companion, pointed to a high dead wall as we were passing one side of one of the lanes through which we passed.

"That is the private, sir," he said.

I looked at the grim, forbidding wall with a shudder. Daisy was within that awful enclosure—a prisoner, made such through my innocent eagerness to suspect others and to meddle in business with which I had no concern. The thought was enough to drive me mad. I expelled it from my mind by an effort that was almost heroic. I must keep my mind clear now even from the pangs of unavailing remorse. If I was to be able to do anything on behalf of the woman I loved.

But I seemed to be in the midst of some hideous nightmare, some black phantasmagoric vision, conjured up by a diseased brain, when I heard the voice of my companion announce the name of the chief constable of the district. I was ushered into a [illegible] room, furnished in the usual style of middle-class households in provincial towns—rickety walnut and faded green rep being the prevailing features of the furniture. Almost before I had time to observe the thoroughly respectable-plain character of the room, the chief constable himself appeared.

"I am glad to see you, sir," he said, "I hope I shall have good news from you all to-day." He pointed to the fireplace, which was still occupied by the gilded shavings which had done duty in the summer. "I am afraid you will find it rather cold, sir. If you do not mind stopping here my sanctum, we can perhaps settle our business more comfortably there."

The "sanctum" was a snug little room at the back of the house, furnished with a big arm-chair and a bigger couch, a large writing table, and a bookcase. It was clear from the perfume that still filled the apartment, that when I arrived I had interrupted Mr. Eastmead in the middle of a cigar. His first step on installing me in the big arm-chair was to produce a cigar box. But I was far too sorely agitated to think of indulging in "the sad man's comforter."

"If you will excuse me," said the officer, "I shall light my pipe. I always think more clearly when I am smoking. And now, sir, I am at your service."

"I was shocked to see that you had made an arrest this morning in connection with the matter about which I telegraphed to you." I could not bring myself to mention my darling's name.

Eastmead's face grew grave. "Yes, we have arrested Miss Stancliffe, Mr. Maulever's niece. I never had a piece of work to do in my life that I liked less; but it had to be done."

"But she is innocent," I said, trying to speak calmly. "It was not she—I never even thought of her when I telegraphed to you. The thing is quite impossible."

He looked at me keenly for a moment, and then said quietly, "I think we had better not discuss Miss Stancliffe's arrest at present, Mr. Fenton. I wished particularly to see you before I wished to know your reasons for telegraphing to the front Norway as you did. What, in short, made you suspect foul play in the case of Mr. Maulever?"

"Tell me first," I cried imploringly, "how Miss Stancliffe is. You have seen her. How does she bear this frightful calamity? Forgive me, but I am deeply interested in her."

"I am afraid I must not answer many questions, Mr. Fenton," he responded; "but I think I may tell you that the young lady is well in health, and that she bears her misfortunes with courage. She was a little upset at first, and did not seem to understand what had happened; but she was a great deal better before I left her in charge of the matron of the prison."

I covered my face with my hands to try to control the emotion that I felt. It is not in words to describe what I suffered. There was one question I longed to put to the chief constable—and dare not. That was whether Daisy's arrest was due to the hint I had given him.

"Now, Mr. Fenton," he resumed, "I think we had better get to business. I have asked you to tell me frankly what it was that put it into your head that Mr. Maulever died of poison."

I told him hurriedly all that I knew—or rather that I had suspected. I thought that if I laid everything before him, he would see with me how impossible it was that Daisy could be implicated in the horrible charge, and how strong was the evidence against Flinter. Yes, when I had told my story, I was but too conscious of the weakness of my [illegible] case. What [illegible] amount to! That a [illegible] lines in the railway train, and [illegible] I knew nothing, had [illegible] was about [illegible] done at [illegible] I had found on board the Golden Hawk a [illegible] which had evidently been used for the purpose of studying the symptoms of poisoning by strychnia.

Eastmead listened to me with close attention while I told my tale, but if was not until I mentioned strychnia that his interest seemed to be really awakened.

"You said nothing about that in your telegram to me."

"No, I only thought it necessary to give you a general warning."

"And have you heard—has anybody told you the result of the post mortem?"

"I have heard nothing beyond the bare fact of Miss Stancliffe's arrest."

"Ah; then I do not know whether you will or will not be surprised to hear that the autopsy has shown that Mr. Maulever undoubtedly died from poisoning by strychnia."

"I," said, bravely, "do you not see by that it is that Flinter must be the guilty person?"

"You jump to conclusions in a surprising manner, sir. Why, Flinter, by your own showing, was somewhere up in the Arctic ocean at the time the poison was administered to Mr Maulever. As for the book, you have not even shown that it belonged to him. Grosvenor he may have been an accomplice of the real murderer; but for that murder was not found to him, but on board the Golden Hawk, but at Great Lorton Hall or in the immediate neighborhood."

"And was there nobody else whom you could suspect, without inflicting this degradation upon a woman for whose innocence I could vouch with my life?"

"I see you are deeply interested in the lady, Mr. Fenton, and certainly she is a beautiful creature—as bonny a lass as I ever saw. I felt real sorry for her this morning. But I am afraid I must tell you we have not arrested Miss Stancliffe on mere suspicion."

"In heaven's name, what do you mean!" I demanded.

"Well, you have been quite frank with me, Mr. Fenton, and I shall be equally frank with you. We have discovered, first, as I have told you, that Mr. Maulever was poisoned by strychnia, and next that Miss Stancliffe had poisons of that description in her possession shortly before his death."

"But even so—granting that she had the poison, of which I know nothing—it must have been not for some innocent purpose."

"On that is a matter of opinion on which we are not likely to agree. When you are going to poison one of your friends, you don't go the chemist's and say: 'Give me a dose of strychnia that I may get rid of old Brown.' It is always rats that you want to kill for." Miss Stancliffe was like everybody else. Why she bought the poison she bought it for the benefit of the rats."

"But I assure you, I myself knew that Lorton Hall swarmed with rats. I heard it from Miss Stancliffe's own lips while I was there."

"Backward, turn backward, O Time in your flight,
Make me a child again, just for to-night!"

is the exclamation, in thought, of many a man who has suffered through a long life, from some distressing disease, that he might have cured with a few bottles of medicine like Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery," which cures all blood and skin diseases, as well as consumption or scrofula of the lungs. If he were "a child again," he would know enough to have a bottle of the Discovery "to-night," and in old age would not implore Father Time to "fly backward" for his restoration to health. Be wise to-day. Go to nearest druggist and get a bottle of the same at once. dfw39

Plenty of Necessities -Few Luxuries.

New York city has 10,000 licensed saloons and 2,000 that are unlicensed. She has 1,055 bakeries, 2,015 meat shops, and 4,126 grocery stores.

Demonstrated.

Sometimes it costs hundreds of dollars to convince a man; very often less is required, but in the case of Polson's Nerviline, that never-fail remedy for pain, 10 cents foots the bill, and supplies enough Nerviline to convince every purchaser that it is the best, most prompt and certain pain remedy in the world. Nerviline is good for all kinds of pain, pleasant to take, and sure to cure cramps and all internal pains. It is also nice to rub outside. In fact it is an agreeable stuff, quite unlike not many other preparations, which are positively disagreeable to use. Try it now. Go to a drug store and buy a 10 cent or 25 cent bottle. Polson's Nerviline. Take no other. 6dw39

The last issue of the Prince Albert Times states that about forty of the Mounted Police and a number of citizens of that place are ill of malarial fever.

Of Vital Importance

It is just as important that the human body should have pure blood, as that a tree or plant should have to say nourish and invigorate its growth. Nearly all our bodily ills arise from unhealthy blood. Burdock Blood Bitters purifies this fountain of life, and regulates all the vital organs to a healthy action. 2w38

A certain Cure.

A cure for Cholera Morbus.—A positive cure for this dangerous complaint, and for all acute and chronic forms of Bowel Complaint incident to Summer and Fall, is found in Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberries; to be procured from any druggist. 2w38

A Dreadful Wish Expressed.

It is to be hoped that the next convulsion of nature will strike Wiggins in his parts of speech and paralyze them.

In Season.

It is now in season to warn our readers against the sudden attacks of Cholera, Cramp, Colic and the various Bowel Complaints incident to the season of ripe fruit, vegetables, etc. Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is the grand specific for those troubles. 2w38

A Proper Definition.

"Can't you tell me what a smile is?" asked a gentleman of a little girl. "Yes, sir; it is the whisper of a laugh."

A Word of Explanation.

The liver secrets bile to move the bowles; the kidneys secrete urine to carry off uric acid, which would poison the blood; the stomach secretes gastric juice to digest or dissolve the food, etc. Burdock Blood Bitters acts upon these organs and purifies the blood by cleansing all the secretions of the system. 2w38

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1886.

LOCAL NEWS.

Volunteers

of the several companies of the City Battalion are requested to meet at the drill shed to-night for preparatory drill for the Lieut.-Governor's reception.

Runaway.

About eleven o'clock this morning a horse from White's livery ran from Brodie's mill, going down George street, to its stable on a lively run. The vehicle attached to the horse was slightly damaged.

Soldiers in Command.

Capt. Copel and Cadet Carrel, of the local branch of the Salvation Army, are in Toronto attending the public jubilee held in honor of the visit of Gen. Booth, and the soldiers of the Army take turns in leading the forces and meetings.

Fruit Thieves at Work.

A resident of the north ward laid heavy hands on a number of juvenile grape thieves the other night. The boys confessed that they had an organized gang, gave the names of their colleagues, and were allowed to go, after taking a warning and warming. Owing to family relations they were not prosecuted. Grape growers should look out for them.

To the Ladies.

Miss E. Delaney's grand fall millinery and mantle opening will take place on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Sept. 29th, 30th and Oct. 1st. The latest designs in bonnets, hats and mantles will be displayed, likewise a beautiful assortment of feather trimmings, plushes, mantle cloths, dress goods, etc. All are cordially invited. No circulars. 7d72-1w

Special Drill.

A special drill of members of the 57th Rangers, who have been selected to form a body guard for the Lieutenant-Governor on his visit to town next Wednesday to open the Central Exhibition, will be held in the drill shed this evening. The guard will be composed of fifty of the best drilled men from the several companies, who will be of as near the same size as can be secured.

Annoying.

A gentleman who resides at the north end of George street complains of undue attention from some unknown friend. Every night during this week his large gate composed of a single iron rod, is taken out and laid on the roadside, while his lesser gate, composed of an iron chain, is regularly tied in a tight knot. He can't find out who his annoyer is, and he would like George Washington to confess.

General Booth to Visit Town.

General Booth, the organizer and patriarchal leader of the Salvation Army, who is at present in Toronto, it is understood will visit Peterborough on October 18th. A grand jubilee will be held in honor of his visit, and as Peterborough is the only place in the district which the General will visit, it is expected that soldiers from the surrounding towns and counties, (from Belleville to Coboconk, will gather here to welcome the General. A big time may be expected.

Excursion To-morrow.

If you are going to Kingston, Montreal, or Quebec on the excursion to-morrow or following day, be sure and go via the Grand Trunk Railway, which is by far the most desirable route to these cities. The scenery along Lake Ontario and the St. Lawrence at this season of the year is extremely pleasant, and tends to relieve the monotony of railway travel. Fares as follows: Kingston, $3.65; Montreal, $7.00; Quebec, $9.00. Tickets good to return until the 11th October, and may be procured either from Mr. Thomas Menzies, or at the G. T. R. station.

A Successful Season.

The Riverside Lacrosse Club, which was organized this summer with the determination of keeping up the reputation of the town in the national game, has been very successful in its object. On Wednesday the club played the last match of the season, adding another victory to their list. Out of seven matches played the club has won six, the majority of which were won by "three straights." Only three goals were lost during the entire season, two to the Beaverton "Checkers" and one to the Madoc "Athletics." This is a very creditable showing for a new club, and the boys are to be congratulated on their success.

Exhibitions and Prizes.

For the next few days the making of exhibitions and the struggle for prizes will occupy the people's mind, and the awards in all cases will not give satisfaction. Already, however, one prize has been awarded that gives universal public satisfaction. Mr. M. Carton, of the Bon Marche, has been unanimously voted the first prize for low prices and for his magnificent exhibit of cheap goods in the line of groceries, household supplies and other goods. The Bon Marche exhibition is always open and the public are daily winning prizes in the big bargains they secure. Don't forget to call at the Bon Marche; it is the cheapest shop on the continent. If you don't believe it, try; if you try you will be convinced.

Riversides Again Victorious.

They Defeat the Madoc Athletics by Three Goals to One.

The Riverside Lacrosse team were again victorious in their match with Madoc on Wednesday, by three goals to one. The team arrived in Madoc about 11.30 on Wednesday, and were met at the station by the Athletics of that village, who escorted them to Moon's hotel, where they put up. It being exhibition day, the town was decorated with evergreens, bunting, etc., while the streets were crowded with sight-seers. Shortly after two o'clock the two clubs marched from the exhibition hall, headed by the band, to the grounds, where a large crowd had assembled. Before the match a number of athletic contests were engaged in. As a prelude to the lacrosse victory, A. Rose and J. Bagley, of the Riverside team, took 1st and 2nd places in the half mile race. The match was started, with eleven men on each side. The first game was of very short duration, the ball only passing centre once, and was taken by the Athletics in about a minutes. The second game the Riversides stirred themselves up and took the goal in 10 minute, Fakenham making the shot. The third game after 40 minutes play, and several stops was also taken by Fakenham. In the fourth and final game, two of the Athletic's were accidentally injured and had to retire, two of the Riversides going off to even the sides. It was won by J. Begley after an exciting struggle. Time 20 minutes. The Riversides were entertained by the Athletics and remained in the village over night. They returned to town this morning.

The Riversides were represented by Joe Phelan, goal; E. Rogers, Walsh, T. Mahar, T. Giroux, F. Larose, F. Peotcenham, A. Rose, J. Bagley, H. Neil, F. Scots.

The boys say the Athletics played a stronger game than they did in Peterborough, although they had not their best man, Sinclair, on.

The Hastings Ironsides tried to induce the Riversides to remain at that village to play, but the boys were unable to accommodate them.

A Double Accident.

A Yoke of Oxen Fall into a Well 45 Feet Deep, and After Three Hours, are Drawn Out Alive.

An accident of a strange and startling nature occurred on lot 10, Ennismore, on Wednesday evening. Mr. Daniel Shannahan, of Ennismore, better known as "Yankee Dan," went to Bobcaygeon with a grist, leaving orders with his son, aged about nine years, to bring a yoke of oxen to Shannahan's landing on Rice Lake shore. The boy started out with the oxen as directed. When he came to Shannahan's house, on the Old Winter road, the animals ran to a dry trough by a pump on the roadside. When they found no water in the trough, one crowded the other over on to the well platform, which, being rotten, allowed the heavy animal to fall through, where it hung by the yoke, struggling with all its gigantic strength. Miss Shannahan, who saw the accident, ran to the well and tried to knock the key out of the bow to prevent the other ox from following its mate. She was unsuccessful in her endeavours, and after a minute of terrible struggling, the second animal was drawn headforemost into the water, 24 feet below. The plunging of the animals in the water was terrific. Runners were sent in several directions for help. Mr. T. Crowley, of Harvey, and several others came to the rescue. A line was fastened around the body of the boy Shannahan, who was lowered into the well. Here, with great difficulty and considerable danger, he fastened a logging chain around the necks of each animal, fastening it with a claw so that it could not slip. Four horses were hitch to the chains, and one by one the oxen were drawn from their perilous position, the first animal drawn out and the last to go in, as soon as it reached the solid earth, although it had lost a horn in its dive, went off grazing. The other had evidently had the worst of the plunge and contented itself by lying down for a rest. The accident caused great excitement and is the gossip of the neighborhood.

The Newest and Best.

Battery Practice at Port Hope.

The camp for shooting practice for Toronto, Ottawa, Gananoque, Kingston and Durham batteries, opened on Wednesday at Port Hope, in Mr. John Helm's field on the Cobourg road, by the lake shore. Ottawa and Toronto shot on Wednesday, Gananoque and Kingston to-day, and the Durham Battery will shoot to-morrow. The Peterborough contingent of the Durham Battery will leave for Port Hope to-morrow morning, and will be composed as follows:—Sergeant Major Metherall, Sergeant Snyder, Bombadiers, T. Maultain and W. Hamilton, and Gunners, W. Metherall and W. Errett.

W. C. T. U.

The meeting of this Union opened on Monday, Sept. 27th, with singing, prayer by Mrs. Fife, and concert reading of 144th psalm. President in the chair; members, 13. Miss Stenson, Secretary, being absent, Mrs. Kendry, by request, read the minutes of last meeting, which were adopted. The Treasurer's report was read and adopted. Mrs. Wand reported a very generous response to request for bandages, which have been forwarded to the Nicholls Hospital. The President read a paper from the minutes of the Michigan State Union convention, which contained many helpful suggestions, and which clearly showed that it is not by might or by power, but by the Holy Spirit, that good work is accomplished. Mrs. Price, Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Alexander were appointed to wait upon the ministers of the different churches and request them to hold monthly temperance prayer meetings. The meeting closed with the usual devotional exercises.—[Com.

Good Advice Without Charge.

The fact that orders for new furs are pouring in thus early in the season so rapidly that our staff is kept busy, is a sign that should not be overlooked.

We therefore take the opportunity of reminding our many customers who may want furs repaired or altered, to lose no time. Later in the season we shall be so crowded with orders as to make repairing an impossibility, as orders for new goods are of first consideration. Wm. Lech & Sons.

N. B.—All parties indebted to the late firm are requested to call at once, as all outstanding accounts must be paid in order to balance books through the change in business.

This is a fine opportunity of securing desirable sites for summer residences or suburban homes.

Zion.

From Our Own Correspondent.

The picnic of 16th inst. was all that drowned hopes could expect on such a day. Our joyous excitement changed that morning to miserable expressions of "Heigh! Ho! The rain and the weather!" About 1 p.m. the firmament nearly failed in making an ill-judged apology. It was not long till the Coldsprings Football club, the steamer "Beaver," and an increasing crowd were all busy in making the best of a bad day.

The football match was not very satisfactory, except that the visiting club a few times joyously realised that "a miss is as good as a mile." At the expiration of an hour neither side had won a goal. The fresh showers again very obligingly descended before we got home—to cool any pleurisies. Our Football club have been challenged by the Beaufort F. B. C. to play them at Beaufort, 5th prox. Our club have not decided to go yet.

The Belfast Royal Commission will commence to sit on October 4.

A SNUB FOR THE CZAR.

HIS REPRESENTATIVE ABRUPTLY TREATED IN BULGARIA.

SOFIA, Sept. 30.—Gen. Kaulbars to-day received a deputation of prominent Bulgarians who endeavored to induce him to withdraw or modify his circular. The deputation was composed of 114 of the most important and influential citizens of the principality and was headed by Dr. Voultcheff, who acted as spokesman. He stated that the circular had surprised the Bulgarian people and asked the general to reconsider some of the Russian demands, particularly that for the postponement of the elections two months. In addition to this modification the doctor said that the people desired Russia to withdraw her demand for the immediate raising of the state of siege and also the demand for the instant release of the prisoners in custody for complicity in the late plots. Dr. Voultcheff said that if the prisoners were released as demanded the probabilities were that the people would kill them in the streets, such was the popular indignation against the implicated men. The Government thought the imprisoned officers should be tried first and subsequently offered clemency. In conclusion the deputation assured Gen. Kaulbars that Bulgaria was thankful to the Czar for his past protection, but maintained that the laws of the country [illegible] no other ministry than [illegible] could extricate the [illegible] present crisis.

[illegible] finally said the Bulgarians [illegible] the Czar had their prosperity [illegible] confide in the Czar and carry out his wishes. Dr. Voultcheff interrupted Gen. Kaulbars at this point, and said: "If that is all you have to say we will retire." The deputation then withdrew.

Austria Will Intervene.

PESTH, Sept. 30.—Prime Minister Tisza replying to interpellation for the Government in the lower house of the Hungarian Parliament to-day said that Austro-Hungary intended to prevent any single power from establishing a protectorate over Bulgaria. "We want independence among the Balkan States," he continued, "without having any covetous designs towards any of them. No community of interests exists in the Balkans. The Austro-German alliance commands guarding the mutual conditions of existence without endangering the peace. Austro-Hungary will not allow any single power to make armed interference in Bulgaria."

The Prime Minister's declaration that Austro-Hungary would not permit any foreign power to establish a protectorate over Bulgaria was loudly applauded. The Unterhaus presented a lively appearance during the Prime Minister's speech. Every section of the chamber was occupied and the galleries were crowded. He rejected the assumption that Austro-Hungary had either planned, or had been aware, or in the slightest degree had approved, of the plot to depose Prince Alexander. Neither was Austro-Hungary aware, continued she, Tisza, that Prince Alexander [illegible] and [illegible] by the telegram [illegible] [illegible] has shown us nothing but kindness in direct from the Czar, or that Prince Alexander made his stay in Bulgaria dependent on the Czar's consent. "No agreements whatever exist," Herr Tisza said, between Austro-Hungary and Russia regarding the exertion of their respective influence either in the western or in the eastern portion of the Balkan states. Austro-Hungary firmly adheres to the Berlin treaty, which whilst it is upheld sufficiently corresponds with Austro-Hungary's interests. Austro-Hungary has taken no steps on behalf of the kidnappers of Prince Alexander. She has merely warned Bulgaria in her own interest against the adoption of any hasty resolution and the results that would be sure to ensue therefrom."

"As regards Austro-Hungary's alliance with Germany," continued the Premier, "we stand with Germany on the old basis. We regard the treaty of Berlin as still in force, although it has been violated in certain cases, the most serious of which occurred last year in Eastern Roumelia. Austro-Hungary adheres to her repeatedly declared opinion that should Turkey claim the right accorded in the Balkan Peninsula, no other power would be entitled to resort to armed intervention or to the establishment of a protectorate there. Also that no change in the constitutional or territorial relations of the Balkan countries can be effected without the consent of the powers signatory to the treaty of Berlin."

All the deputies were displeased by the Premier's statement. Deputy Haroath maintained that Hungary did not want such a peace as that which the German alliance secured. Others asserted that Russia had violated the treaty of Berlin. A proposal to reopen the discussion was rejected.

The Reply Postponed.

SOFIA, Sept. 30.—The Bulgarian Ministry have decided to postpone their reply to Russia's note. The ministers are not willing to finally refuse Russia's demands and have resolved to depute [illegible] to confer with Gen. Kaulbars, with the view of finding some other method of settlement.

Russia's Will Must be Obeyed.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 30.—The Russian newspapers generally express themselves as satisfied with the speech of Gen. Kaulbars in Bulgaria. The Novoe Vremya says: "Nothing remains for the Bulgarians requests but to bow to Russia's will unless it be to force Russia to requests which are impossible for her to accede to to prevent Russia's wishes from being realized. The election of a new prince in Bulgaria will be impossible until the proper relations which should exist between Gen. Kaulbars and the Bulgarian Government be established."

Austria in Firm.

VIENNA, Sept. 30.—Diplomats here believe that since the return of Count Kalnoky, Austrian Minister for Foreign Affairs, from Pesth, Austria's attitude against Russia's occupation of Bulgaria is more pronounced. This is partly accounted for by the belief that Austria fears that if Bulgaria is occupied by Russia King Milan will be deposed in Servia and Servia and Bulgaria will be both Russianized. This, it is argued, would cause disorder in Bosnia and probably a conflict with Montenegro.

[illegible]

MADRID, Sept. 29.—The trial of Father Cayetan Galeote, the assassin of Mgr. Izquierdo, Bishop of Madrid, is proceeding in this city. Immense crowds [illegible] the palace of justice [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1886.

HOW IT IS REGARDED.

The reclamation of the Mail to total abstinence is so remarkable that those sincerely anxious for the promotion of the cause of temperance are naturally anxious to secure the secret of such a wonderful conversion. Among others, the Canada Presbyterian, in a tone of incredulous irony, discourses concerning the transformation act of the Mail on the prohibition question. It says:

"A considerable amount of interest has been created in journalistic and, we presume, whiskey circles, by the conversion of the Mail to Prohibition. We say conversion because, though our contemporary is a young convert, we have no right to suspect the genuineness of the profession so frankly, if so suddenly, made. It is the duty of prohibitionists to receive the young convert in all charity and hopefulness, and to believe that the conversion is genuine until the contrary is shown. It would be interesting if the Mail would give its readers a short account of the circumstances that led up to and culminated in its conversion. We have read with much interest and not a little curiosity its first articles on Prohibition. We find nothing there that we have not met a thousand times. The arguments advanced in favor of Prohibition, and our contemporary's method of meeting objections, are as old as Prohibition. Perhaps the Mail would have no objection to state the arguments that influenced its mind most when about to make the turn. Its experience might be very useful to others. The arguments that wrought conviction on our neighbor might convince any number of anti-prohibitionists. Then our contemporary might state how these arguments came to have so much weight just at this particular time. In fact, it would be a good thing all round if the Mail would rise up and tell its experience. Meantime we welcome our contemporary to the temperance ranks, and hope it will do good service and manifest that modesty which is so becoming in a young convert."

The "becoming modesty" of the "young convert" may not admit of its furnishing the recipe demanded. The opening line, however, of the "young convert's" confession of its new faith, furnishes the key—"The Mail has decided to cast in its lot with the prohibition party." "Cast in its lot" is good. The sporting editor would have said, "take chances." The Mail means that it will "take chances" of the new move being a paying one—that it is not hampered by principles, but governed by expediency. The argument that "converted" the organ was the argumentum ad crumenam—it would pay as a political investment. "To guard the camp" means to keep a sharp look out for the spoils.

SIR JOHN is trying to repudiate his repudiation of the Orangemen—through his organs. The Chieftain is repudiating everything, but his sins

THE Globe, in referring to the plethora in its educational institutions, remarks that "Toronto has outgrown everything."—Yes, everything but the native cheek of its newspapers.

THE Mail takes the occasion to remark that Crowfoot, the North-West chief, now on a visit to the east, is not a Christian, and adds that great care must be taken to keep him from the "character-stealing" side of politics. "Character-stealing" is merely a typographical error for "charter selling." The organ's anxiety is fully justified.

THE Port Hope Times is of a very hopeful disposition. It indulges the hope that Sir John will be the leader of the Conservative party when Edward Blake becomes old enough to die. The Times foreshadows another act of repudiation on Sir John' part—he apparently contemplates repudiating the "debt of nature."

THE opening of Murray Canal, a national work, paid for by the people's money, is to be made the occasion of a political demonstration. Sir John and his colleagues are to open it on Wednesday, October 6th. The Belleville Intelligencer calls the occasion a "Conservative Demonstration." No doubt the travelling expenses of Sir John and his hangers-on will be paid out of the public purse. Yet it is a "Conservative demonstration." This is not the first time Sir John has used the public funds to promote his political ends. No one would object to the people paying for a formal and official opening of a government public work, but when the people are compelled to pay the expenses of "Conservative Demonstrations" it is a little too much. The Tory Boodle Brigade are not the only political foot-pads who lay felonious hands on the public purse.

FIVE MILLION POUNDS.

By F. Warrington Baden.

Perhaps you think it is my extravagance that is to cost you £5,000? Mr. Mackenzie, who has been kind enough to think it advisable to consult with a friend before concluding this deduction. I shall be very glad if the poor young lady can be proved innocent. As for the story you have told me, I think we must now try and lay hold of Gregson. He may not be a prophet, but at all events we must admit that he made a lucky hit when he declared that murder would be done at Great Lorton."

"That may be not have been a case of suicide?"

"No," replied the chief constable, with emphasis. "I have thought it all over, and I cannot make it into suicide. You may depend upon it that it is a case of murder if it is anything at all."

The night was now far advanced, but I could not leave him until I had learned something as to the possibility of my being allowed to see Daisy. He told me that, if she herself desired it, he thought an interview between us might be managed without difficulty, and he promised to do everything in his power to further my wishes. I left him with an exhalted belief in my darling's innocence, but oppressed by the conviction that the evidence against her was strong, and that it was upon my wretched head that the responsibility for her present position must rest.

I passed a night of sleepless agony at the hotel. And here let me say that if I utterly fail to bring home to the mind of my reader all that I suffered and continued to suffer after learning the news of Daisy's arrest, it is not because I failed to realize my own share in that terrible event, nor because I was not bowed down to the earth with grief and remorse at the thought of the injury which I had unwittingly done to her. But my duty now is not to dwell upon my own feelings or to tell how I grew prematurely older in a few hours; how before Daisy was brought to trial my hair was streaked with white, and my haggard face was hardly to be recognized by those who had known me before. I have to continue the story of that strange series of events which must be forever connected in my memory with the great tragedy of our lives. Let the reader, then, try to understand, without further words of mine, that I was well-nigh mad with grief and horror at this period of my career, and that I should undoubtedly have been quite mad if it had not been for my overpowering consciousness of the fact that I had one paramount duty to discharge—the duty of rescuing my darling from the web of evil circumstances in which she had been enveloped.

It was not until I had spent two days of suspense at Barton that Mr. Eastmead brought me the glad news that Daisy, having received the letter which I addressed her on the morning after my arrival in the town, had successfully applied to the magistrates for an order admitting me to the prison.

I found my beautiful darling in the office of the governor, for her position, her sex, and the fact that as yet she had not been committed for trial, enabled the prison officials to exercise a considerable degree of leniency in their treatment of her.

She was terribly changed since I had seen her last on that happy night when we plighted our troth in the garden at the old hall. The color was gone from her face, the beautiful lines of which had grown painfully sharp; her lovely eyes had the strained look which one sees in some noble animal of the desert when it is in confinement; and her figure, clad in the simple black dress, looked very frail and unsubstantial.

With a cry that went up from the very bottom of my heart I ran to her and clasped her in my arms, heedless of the presence of the jailors. We were in a prison; she a captive lying under the most terrible of all accusations; I, the man who had been the wretched cause of her being brought there. Never surely in this world before did two lovers meet each other under circumstances so tragical. And yet I can declare before high heaven that in all my life there has been no hour more full of bliss than that which we spent there, in the mean room of the jail, under the hard eyes of the female warder, clasped in each other's arms and hardly speaking, save to exchange some word on my side of passionate devotion, on hers of a love as true and deep as mine, though a thousand times more pure and tender.

We were in prison.

Ah, let it pass, let it pass. I cannot put down here in cold blood all that transpired in that hour of holy joy, when our souls met and mingled together under that awful shadow of death which each would gladly have borne alone, if only the other might have been saved from it.

But before we could part on that day when, if ever in the pure eyes of the angels, two souls were made one under the awful bar, then of sorrow, there was one task which I was compelled to discharge. A harder one was never laid upon me.

"My darling, you do not know everything." I said. "You do not know how I have wronged you; you can never imagine the great injury I have done you."

She looked at me with a smile as proud and bright and loving as that which a mother turns upon her first-born babe.

"Wronged me, Cyril! And you here, by my side, not afraid to share the pain and degradation in which I have been plunged! Do you think I could ever believe evil of you—even though you were your own accuser!"

"But—dearest—listen!" My voice was hoarse and low. "It was I who first suggested that your uncle had been poisoned. It was I who telegraphed to the police from Norway urging them to inquire into the matter."

For a moment she seemed puzzled, and then a smile that almost might be called one of gayety lit up her face.

"Ah, I see what you mean. But surely that is not what you can mean when you speak of having wronged me. You did what was right—what I myself would have done in your place. You suspected there had been foul play, and you behaved like an honest man. Ah, if I had only had your wit, do you think I would not have done as you did?"

"But oh, my love, my love! Do you not see that you might never have been here if I had not acted as I did?"

"Yes; and then I would never have known the real nature of the man with whose love God has blessed me. I would never have known that to one can who hurried across me and tried to deter me in my hour of trouble, and who was not afraid even of the shadow of shame, so long as he could share it with me."

The mercy of God is infinite; and sometimes it is breathed in its highest and purest form through the dear voice of a woman.

"Backward, turn backward, O Time in your flight,
Make me a child again, just for to-night;"

is the exclamation, in thought, of many a man who has suffered through a long life, from some distressing disease, that he might have cured with a few bottles of medicine like Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery," which cures all blood and skin diseases, as well as consumption or scrofula of the lungs. If he were "a child again," he would know enough to have a bottle of the Discovery "to-night," and in old age would not implore Father Time to "fly backward" for his special benefit. Hence, "Be wise to-day, 'tis madness to defer." Get a bottle of the nearest druggist. d&w39

Demonstrated.

Sometimes it costs hundreds of dollars to convince a man; very often less is required, but in the case of Polson's Nerviline, that specific remedy for pain, 50 cents fools the bill, and supplies enough Nerviline to convince every purchaser that it is the best, most prompt and certain pain remedy in the world. Nerviline is good for all kinds of pain, pleasant to take, and sure to cure cramps and all internal pains. It is also nice to rub outside, for it is an agreeable smell, quite unlike so many other preparations, which are positively disagreeable to use. Try it now. Go to a drug store and buy a 10 cent or 25 cent bottle. Polson's Nerviline. Take no other. 6dw39

It Rides the Cloven Foot.

Plain soda with a clove in it is now alleged to be the fashionable Scott Act beverage in Georgetown.

Of Vital Importance

It is just as important that the human body should have pure blood, as that a tree or plant should have to say nourish and invigorate its growth. Nearly all our bodily ills arise from unhealthy blood. Burdock Blood Bitters purifies this fountain of life, and regulates all the vital organs to a healthy action. 2w38

A certain Cure.

A cure for Cholera Morbus.—A positive cure for this dangerous complaint, and for all acute and chronic forms of Bowel Comp aint incident to Summer and Fall, is found in Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberries; to be procured from any druggist. 2w38

Discounting the Dictionary.

A little girl defined "nervous" as "being in a hurry all over." What dictionary ever told it better.

In Season.

It is now in season to warn our readers against the sudden attacks of Cholera, Cramp, Colic and the various Bowel Complaints incident to the season of ripe fruit, vegetables, etc. Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is the grand specific for those troubles. 2w38

A Word of Explanation.

The liver secrets bile to move the bowles; the kidneys secrete urine to carry off uric acid, which would poison the blood; the stomach secretes gastric juice to digest or dissolve the food, etc. Burdock Blood Bitters acts upon these organs and purifies the blood by cleansing all the secretions of the system. 2w38

DEAR SIR,—When you visited me in the latter part of January of this year I had been given up to die of consumption by a consultation of Physicians Drs. Reid and Oliver, eminent physicians of Halifax who considered that my recovery was simply impossible. I had no hope myself, nor had my family. When you kindly sent a bottle of your remedy it was received with a doubt. Feeling so low, weak, wasted, night sweats very bad, troublesome cough, raising large quantities of matter—I had every appearance of a speedy death. After using your Remedies and Spirometer and medicine I began to recover very fast, so much so that during three hard winter months I have added from 20 to 25 lbs., and was able to walk out on Easter Sunday. My strength is daily increasing, and I shall be able soon to be at work. To you I owe a deep sense of gratitude, and am anxious for others who are suffering as I was to consult you. You can make what use of this letter you see fit, and thanking you for what I consider a most wonderful treatment.
I remain, yours truly,
CAPT. WM. SLATER.

From the wonderful power of this remedy this terrible fatal disease, when first offering this now celebrated remedy to the public, Dr. Pierce thought seriously of calling it his "Consumption Cure," but abandoned that name as too limited for a medicine which, from its wonderful combination of tonic, or strengthening, alterative, or blood-cleansing, anti-bilious, pectoral, and nutritive properties, is unequaled, not only as a remedy for consumption of the lungs, but for all Tobacco Burglar.

On Wednesday night the shop of Mr. J. Coughlin, on the corner of Charlotte and Aylmer streets, was entered by some thief who carried away with him a box of cigars and 15 pounds of chewing tobacco. The burglar made his entrance and exit through a window, and it is supposed in the light of an electric lamp, suspended over the street not fifty yards away.

The Central Exhibition.

It is in one sense extremely gratifying to note that all the available space in the exhibition building is now taken, and that twice as much could have been occupied, as far as exhibiters are concerned. These facts will encourage the directors in their efforts to make the exhibition worthy of the town and district, and will be their warrant to go on and complete the buildings according to the plans, and will also encourage others who, doubtful of success, have hitherto withheld their support, to lend their aid to assist the exhibition.

An Ennismore Farmer Burned Out.

The dwelling, barns and stables of Mr. P. Bricks, of the 7th con., Ennismore, together with the greater part of their contents, were on Wednesday destroyed by fire. The fire broke out in the second storey of the house, a brick one, and spread with such rapidity that all efforts to extinguish the flames were fruitless. The devouring element fastened on the barns and sheds and soon reduced them to ashes. A quantity of furniture was successfully removed from the house, while the farming implements, vehicles and stock were also saved. A defective chimney is supposed to have been the cause of the fire. Mr. Brick's loss will be very heavy, and is partly covered by $2,500 insurance.

Go to Oormon's for your Oysters and Fish.

The Fire Brigade Band will be in attendance at the Lansdowne Rink to-night. They will march from the postoffice corner to the rink.

Fell From a Scaffold.

A[illegible] fell from the [illegible] under construction at the gas works, this morning fell from the scaffolding on which he was working to the brick bottom of the giant well, a distance of 16 feet. Fortunately, the force of his fall was broken by a board projecting from the scaffolding supports about half way down. A sound about as large as an ordinary shoe-brush are said he was stunned for a while by the fall. Dr. Brennan attended Eastland's injuries, which are not as serious as would be expected from the fearful fall he took.

Returning Not to Depart.

Rev. A. H. Munro on Thursday evening returned to town from a visit to his home in Gloucester, Mass., where he has spent a happy holiday. His many friends in town gave him a hearty welcome. He will conduct the Bible Class in the Murray street church this evening, at the conclusion of which he will administer the rite of baptism to several applicants. To-morrow he will leave for his new field of labour in St. Thomas, where he will preach to his new congregation on Sunday. He will carry with him the good wishes of his many friends in town.

Exhibitions and Prizes.

For the next few days the making of exhibitions and the struggle for prizes will occupy the people's mind, and the awards in all cases will not give satisfaction. Already, however, one prize has been awarded that gives universal public satisfaction. Mr. M. Carton, of the Bon Marche, has been unanimously voted the first prize for low prices and for his magnificent exhibit of cheap goods in the line of groceries, household supplies and other goods. The Bon Marche exhibition is always open and the public are daily winning prizes in the big bargains they secure. Don't forget to call at the Bon Marche; it is the cheapest shop on the continent. If you don't believe it, try; if you try you will be convinced.

Civic Holiday.

In accordance with the resolution of the Town Council, His Worship Mayor Stevenson has issued a proclamation setting apart the afternoon of Wednesday, October 6th, as a civic holiday, in order that all citizens may have an opportunity of taking part in the reception of Hon. John Beverley Robinson, Lieutenant Governor of Ontario, who has kindly consented to open the Peterborough Central Exhibition in his official capacity, on the day named. Manufacturers, merchants, and business men generally are requested to close their respective places of business, so that their employes may join in the public welcome.

Cavanagh's Grays Take the Prize.

Mr. T. Cavanagh, who has a provincial reputation as as judge of horses, and who shows his judgment by always keeping a fine span of spirited steeds in his stables, has received another evidence that his opinions of horse flesh are not far astray. On Tuesday he sent his splendid span of grays to the Lindsay Central fall fair, and has since received a message from his driver that his team took first prize in the carriage class. The team now owned by Mr. Cavanagh bids fair to be as successful prize-winners as the grays owned by him last year, which took the red ticket at all the fairs in the district.

Matrimonial.

During the past few months Peterborough has been invaded by young men from all over the world, who have wooed and won as many fair young ladies of the town, and who have, in due course, married and carried away the choice of their hearts. But the tables have been turned, and on Wednesday, the day which seems specially set apart for such occasions, witnessed the marriage of Mr. W. Sailsbury, one of Peterborough's brisk young business men, to Miss Mary Gilbard, one of Cobourg's most estimable and amiable young ladies, the ceremony being performed, at the bride's home, by Rev. Dr. Roy. The happy people have gone on a wedding trip, but are expected in Peterborough next week. Congratulations.

Evangelist Schiveras.

Many persons in Peterborough will be interested in the movements of the evangelist, Schiveras. To-night he opens the evangelistic services in Galt, beginning a course of two weeks' services. The following fortnight he will spend in Cobourg. During the month of November he will occupy the Presbyterian Church of Rev. R. Wallace, Toronto, father of Rev. P. H. Wallace, B.D., town, conducting services. The first fortnight of December he will labor in Port Hope, spending the remainder of the month at home. The first two weeks of January are assigned to Lakefield, leaving only two weeks of his evangelistic season without engagement. Efforts are being made to secure his presence in Peterborough for that time. Any persons wishing to communicate with Mr. Schiveras with a view of securing his services may do so through Geo. B. Sprvule, Esq., Peterborough.

Good Advice Without Charge.

The fact that orders for new furs are pouring in thus early in the season so rapidly that our staff is kept busy, is a sign that should not be overlooked.

We therefore take the opportunity of reminding our many customers who may want furs repaired or altered, to lose no time. Later in the season we shall be so crowded with orders as to make repairing an impossibility, as orders for new goods are of first consideration. Wm. Lech & Sons.

N. B.—All parties indebted to the late firm are requested to call at once, as all outstanding accounts must be paid in order to balance books through the change in business.

St. Luke's Temperance Society.

The third annual meeting of the Church of England Temperance Society in connection with St. Luke's Church, was held in St. Luke's school room on Wednesday evening. There was a good attendance. After devotional exercises and singing, the president, Rev. W. C. Bradshaw, addressed those present on the need of temperance work; his remarks were based on Romans 14th chapter and 15th verse, and he gave some solid reasons why the society should not only continue its operations, but work more earnestly in future. The annual reports were read by the Secretary and Treasurer, showing the work done by the society during the year, and also showing its finances in a satisfactory state. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President.—Rev. W. C. Bradshaw, ex officio.

Vice-Presidents. — Messrs. Henderson Nesbitt, F. Hall and R. B. Rogers.

Secretary.—Mr. J. J. Rooney.

Treasurer.—Mr. W. Manioce.

Organists.—Mrs. Jackson and Miss Eva Tivey.

Committee.—Mrs. Bradshaw, Mrs. Jackson, Miss Smith, Miss L. Graham, Miss A. Chrow, Miss E. Tivey, and Messrs. B. Everett, W. Wallbrook, J. M. Ellenborough, John Chrow and T. H. Adams.

It was decided that the society should assemble fortnightly, as heretofore, and the meeting was dismissed in the usual manner.

Mr. Bert. M. Tate Banqueted.

On Thursday evening a number of the friends of Mr. Bert. M. Tate assembled in a room in the building occupied by the Real Estate Investment Company for the purpose of giving a complimentary banquet to Mr. Tate, on the eve of his departure for Detroit, and which purpose was fully carried out. Mr. Fred. E. Bell was elected chairman, while the guest of the evening occupied the seat of honor. When the appetites of the company had been appeased, the toasts, usual on such occasions, were proposed by the chairman. "The Queen and Royal Family" was responded to by Kelsey Hall, "The Governor-General" by W. E. Sherwood, and "The Army and Navy" by T. G. Haultain. "The Guest of the Evening" was toasted with avidity, bringing Mr. Tate to his feet, who, in feeling terms, thanked his friends for their kind complement and expressed the regret he felt in leaving town, where he had spent so many happy days in such pleasant associations, and concluded by stating that although he was about to leave Canada he would ever remain a Canadian at heart. Mr. E. Pearce responded for the "Press" and Rev. Stevenson for "the Mayor and Corporation. "The ladies" found an able advocate in Mr. A. V. R Young, who in praising them, took the opportunity to laud the many excellent qualities of the guest, which qualities he attributed mainly to the good influence the young ladies of Peterborough had over him, in whose honor the banquet was given. On behalf of the ladies, (and also on his own) he expressed deep regret at the departure of Mr. Tate, his friend and office companion, whom he was confident would by his ability and energy rise to a position of influence and affluence, well merited and most desirable. A vote of thanks to the Chairman, "Auld Lang Syne" and "God Save the Queen" brought the banquet to a close.

Pasteur and the Physicians.

The Discovery of Eradication in Hydrophobia Still a Matter of Doubt.

Washington, Sept. 29.—Dr. Reyburn, one of the late President Garfield's physicians, who has returned from a visit to the laboratory of Prof. Pasteur in Paris, says Pasteur told him that out of 1200 natives treated for the bites of rabid animals only 3 died, and of 600 foreigners who came from a long distance only 15 died. "This," says Dr. Reyburn, "would be a good record if it were certain that all who thought they were had been bitten by really rabid animals. But people are apt to think a dog mad that bites them, and in nine cases out of ten they are mistaken. It is hard to tell just how much faith to put in inoculation. I find on talking with physicians in Paris that they feel about as I do about it. They are not quite convinced yet, but are willing to be."

Terrorism in Maine.

Harmony, Me., Sept. 29.—The terrorism caused by incendiary fires in this town is extending to neighboring towns. In Athens, Hartland, St. Albans and other villages the people jump out of their beds at every rustle in the night, and sleep with rifles standing by their bedsides. There is a general fear that the villains who have been ruining Harmony will set fire to some of the neighboring places. On Monday the alarm had become so great that the postmaster here did not dare to have the mail come or leave in the night for fear it would be robbed.

Canada Must Calm Down First.

New York, Sept. 30.—The Tribune's London special says: "The American Government while desirous to come to some amicable understanding on points in the fishery dispute, is understood to consider the present an unfavorable time for entering upon the discussion. When Great Britain shall have brought Canada to reasonable views, and when Canadian irritation has subsided a good understanding between the two countries may be embodied in a suitable treaty.

An Earthquake, but a Volcano.

City of Mexico, Sept. 29.—The predicted earthquake did not arrive to-day, but the volcano of Colima is again in eruption. A huge white cloud overhanging the summit is causing terror among the inhabitants of the neighboring villages. Heavy rains have fallen in this section.

A Fiend and His Family.

Brooklyn, Sept. 29.—James Doherty of Tillery-street last night pounded his wife until she fled, leaving her children. This morning Doherty set fire to his apartments, locked the door on his children and went away. The children were rescued.

SATURDAY OCTOBER 2, 1886.

The Lakefield Exhibition.

Both Outside and Inside Exhibits Excellent—Large Attendance of Visitors—The Prize List.

The annual exhibition of the Smith, Ennismore and Lakefield Agricultural Society held at Lakefield on Thursday and Friday was, in spite of the unfavorable state of the weather, one of the most successful of the series.

The first day, of course, the attendance was not very large, and it was principally devoted to the placing of exhibits in the P. C. A. Hall. In the evening the hall was thrown open to the public, and a large number, principally the villagers, availed themselves of the opportunity of admiring the many handsome articles placed on exhibit. The Lakefield band was in attendance and added fair music to the other attractions.

THE SECOND DAY.

On Thursday night the elements contributed their share towards spoiling the second day's exhibition by a brisk downpour of rain, but this did not prevent a most successful day's exhibit being held. Up to noon the prospects were not very promising, but at that hour the people began to arrive in large numbers, and it was not long before the streets and hall were thronged and crowded with visitors, and, in fact, at no other exhibition of this Society has there ever been a larger attendance. The exhibit of live stock was a very creditable one. In horses especially the farmers, like Mark Tapley, "came out strong." There was a very numerous exhibit of horses of all grades and the quality was in pretty fair correspondence with the quantity. It will not be amiss to allude more particularly to the "Grille" colts shown by Mr. J. G. Galvin. One especially, a finely proportioned two-year-old, which weighed (from ordinary grass pasture) the large amount of 1,398 pounds. The cattle pens were well filled, the exhibits being largely grades, and in this class were some very fine animals. There was an excellent show of thoroughbred Durhams, more noted for the excellence of the specimens than for the number of entries. Sheep were well represented, and there was a very fine collection of swine, both Suffolk and Berkshire being well represented. The poultry class was well filled, and a very fine exhibit of fowls of pure blood was made. Manufactures were almost solely represented by Messrs. Smith, McWilliams and Isbister, who showed handsome and well-made farm waggons and buggies.

THE INSIDE EXHIBITION

was, taken altogether, exceedingly good. There was a fine display of various kinds of grain of splendid quality. Roots and vegetables were uncommonly well represented, especially potatoes, and in these the splendid and varied collection of Mr. H. J. Daubes attracted great attention. He showed a huge case where, snugly reposing in cotton cushioned compartments, lay 61 distinct varieties of potatoes. The farmers' wives made a fine spread of bread and butter, while the Domestic Manufactures department showed that there were still some housewives in the land. The ladies' fancy work department was exceedingly elaborate. The display both in extent and quality of work was a splendid one. The show of fruit, especially apples, was excellent. Among other exhibits in the hall, Mr. Thos. Gordon showed two finely-finished cedar canoes, while Mr. Percy Strickland showed a beautiful collection of curiosities in red cedar. Altogether, both the inside and outside exhibits were excellent, and the directors are much gratified with the success of this year's exhibition.

DOES FUEL-RAISING PAY.

Places Where Trees Can Be Raised With Profit for the Purpose of Producing Fuel.

This depends on circumstances. It is not economical to raise trees for fuel on land worth from $50 to $100 per acre, especially when coal is abundant and cheap. In most cases land is not worth $50 per acre for agricultural purposes except in places that are near a large town and where there are good facilities for transportation. In such localities almost everything produced on farms will have a market value, and coal will be comparatively cheap. It will accordingly be the best economy to raise stock, grain, vegetables, or fruit, to sell them in town, and to purchase coal with a portion of the money received. It takes several years for quick-growing trees, such as willows, poplars, and whitewoods, to reach a size that they will afford good fuel. At least twenty years are required to raise hardwood trees of a size that will afford good cordwood. During this time crops of corn, potatoes, grass, and small grains could be produced on the land that is devoted to the production of trees. The product of ten acres of good land would in twenty years produce a fund the interest of which would keep a family supplied with coal for all time.

But on many farms which are worth $50 or upward per acre there is considerable land that is not suitable for cultivation. Some of it is quite certain to be broken, rocky, subject to washing, quite low, or having a soil that does not produce paying crops. This land will produce trees if the proper varieties are selected. The cultivated crops will only grow on fruitful soil, that can be worked to advantage with ordinary implements. But little can be realized from a crop of grass produced on very poor and uneven land. It costs much to cut and cure it for hay, and unless much labor is expended on it the land will not be profitable if devoted to grazing purposes. Still, this land will produce good trees. Observation shows that the land that is the most suitable for cultivated crops is not the best for forest trees. The latter will live and thrive on land that will not produce paying crops of any sort of grain or vegetable. Some of the finest forests in the country shade soil that is unfit for cultivation. Cultivated plants rely for their sustenance on soil within a very few inches of the surface of the ground, but trees send their roots so deep into the earth that the condition of the surface soil is a matter of small importance.

The best disposition to make of land on any farm that is unfit for cultivation is to plant it to trees. If it is too moist to plow or to produce good grass it is quite likely that some varieties of the ash, poplar, willow, or larch will succeed well on it. If it is high, broken, or rocky all kinds of nut-bearing trees, maples, and evergreens will grow well upon it. The trees will improve the farm to some extent, will hide the portions of the soil that had an uninviting appearance, and will beautify the place. The production of the trees will cost very little, as the ground they occupy is useless for other purposes. The trees will supply fuel after a certain number of years, and will reduce the cost of warming the house. Wealthy farmers can enjoy the luxury of an open fire during the winter season if they produce the wood to keep it up on their own places, and can cut and prepare it with the help they ordinarily keep. The open wood fire deserves to rank with the greatest comforts of life, but it can be enjoyed almost without expense by persons who raise trees on their farms. The branches that are removed by pruning a few acres of timber trees will afford fuel enough to support at least one fire.

With little doubt it pays to raise trees to produce fuel in portions of the country where land is cheap, and where coal is dear on account of the remoteness of the mines or the great cost of transportation. The cost of hauling coal over the poor roads that are common in newly settled portions of the west is considerable. It often happens that a great amount of suffering takes place in consequence of getting out of coal when the common roads are impassable on account of the snow or the railroads are prevented from moving heavy freight. In many places during the past few winters farmers living quite a distance from a railway station have been compelled during the prevalence of long storms to burn corn, of which they had but a small amount, in order to keep from freezing. With only a few acres of trees on their places they would have been comparatively comfortable, notwithstanding the severe cold and the bad condition of the roads. A good wood-lot near the dwelling insures a supply of fuel at the time when it is the most needed.

Farmers living a long distance from a good market have to study how they can supply themselves with the necessities and comforts of life without spending much money. If they can raise trees they can have fuel for cooking their food and warming their dwelling without expending money for coal. Wood is the best fuel to use in keeping up a fire to do cooking during warm weather. Especially is this the case when the house is small, as it is likely to be on farms that are not well improved. It requires but little labor to prepare wood for burning in the old-fashioned air-tight or common box stove. Hard coal is scarcely ever used in the west outside of large towns. The choice is between wood and an inferior sort of soft coal. The former is greatly superior for cooking, especially in summer. It is also much better for heating a room that is well finished and furnished, as it is cleaner to handle, while it produces scarcely any smoke. A good wood lot saves the expenditure of money, prevents anxiety, and adds greatly to the comfort of a family.

According to the report of the surgeon general, there were only two cases of variola oid and one of small-pox in the United States army last year. Vaccination was carried out with great regularity.

A Pretty How-D'ye-Do.

A well-known and wealthy manufacturer, Dubot, of Paris, has had a young clerk in his employ for two years, with whose services and behavior he has been greatly pleased. In fact, so much had the young man endeared himself to his employer that he was taken into the family circle, and permitted to enjoy the society of his daughter, a blooming miss of seventeen summers. Some time last month M. Dubot sent for his trusted clerk, and said to him confidingly: "You are a handsome, clever, and industrious young man. My Minnie is but 17 years old, and you please her much. She has a dower left her by her deceased mother of 100,000 francs ($20,000.) If you have a mind to marry her we will arrange the wedding before Lent."

The young clerk, known to his employer as Ernest Lamotte, turned pale at this kind proposition, and was silent. Upon recovering himself he inquired: "Have I satisfied you in the performance of my duties during the two years I have remained with you?"

"More than satisfied me," replied the manufacturer, enthusiastically.

"Well, whatever the consequence may be," he began, hesitatingly, "I must now intrust you with my secret. My name is not Ernest, but Ernestine. I have passed through a commercial course of instruction, fitting me for any position in which a man would receive 240 francs per month ($50.) In female apparel I could earn but 40 francs. This explains all."

M. Dubot, of course, was duly astonished. Taking his worthy clerk by the hand he reassuringly replied: "I hope to be able to console Minnie in her disappointment. Her husband, I see, you can not be; but what would you think of the proposition of becoming her step-mother?"

It was now the turn of Ernestine to show astonishment. Requesting a day for consideration, the friends under new relationships parted.

Representatives Smalls and O'Hara, the two colored members of the lower house of congress, are thus described by the Washington correspondent of a southern paper: "The intelligence of Smalls is that of an African improved by contact with higher civilization, while that of O'Hara is rather the intelligence of the Caucasian with an infusion of barbaric blood in his veins. Small looks, moves, acts, and talks like a negro preacher and revivalist. He has a dark skin and iron-gray hair. O'Hara is much lighter in color and more elegant in bearing. His skin is of the shade of well-tanned and seasoned leather. His mustache and whiskers are kept carefully trimmed. He smokes cigarettes. He is tall, and carries himself well; and the bald spot on the top of his head is cut after an aristocratic pattern. O'Hara has a positive taste and some talent for legislation. Smalls manifests his strength wholly in his Mosaic character as a "leader of his people.

Invisible But Instantaneous.

All pains or aches will be instantly removed by a few drops of Fluid Lightning applied over the affected parts. No time lost; no nauseous medicine needed; no poulticing or using greasy medicine. It will not blister or discolor the skin. Sold at 25 cents per bottle by druggists. Sufferers from Neuralgia assure us that they never fear it when their house contains a bottle of Fluid Lightning. eodw30

Rather a Singular "Kicker."

It is somewhat singular that the first platform stand in Canada against the Ulster Delegates should have been made in the old Orange city of Kingston, by a gentleman who was facetiously nicknamed, when in legislature, "Orange Bill."

"Backward, turn backward, O Time in your flight,
Make me a child again, just for to-night;"

is the exclamation, in thought, of many a man who has suffered through a long life, from some distressing disease, that he might have cured with a few bottles of medicine like Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery," which cures all blood and skin diseases, as well as consumption or scrofula of the lungs. If he were "a child again," he would know enough to have a bottle of the Discovery "to-night," and in old age would not implore Father Time to "fly backward" for his special benefit. Hence, "Be wise to-day, 'tis madness to defer." Get a bottle of the nearest druggist. d&w39

THE BELFAST STUMPERS.

So rotten is the record the Dominion Government has made during the past eight years, that it regards with dread the approach of the general elections. It dares not meet the country on its merits, and it, therefore, adopts the most extraordinary means to distract public attention from the issues upon which the coming battle must be fought. One of the expedients adopted is to set one section of the people of Canada against another, with the aim and hope of reaping political advantage. When Sir John found that he had alienated his French supporters, he set about to counteract the effect of the loss of their support To effect this, the Mail, his chief organ, was instructed to institute a crusade of villainous abuse and incendiary menace against the Canadian French. How well its instructions were carried out the columns of that journal bear witness. Simultaneously the organ was ordered to mount the "Protestant Horse" and to read the Roman Catholics out of the party, with the hope of securing the solid Protestant vote in Ontario. If this could be done it would offset the defection of Sir John's French supporters. The most inflammatory appeals were made by the chief Tory organ to the prejudices and passions of its readers. No expedient was left untried that promised to engender strife and malice between Canadian citizens. All that could be done in this direction was done; and it is due to the good sense and moderation of the people that serious disturbances were avoided. Not trusting alone to this expedient, a companion trick was concocted, but its fulfillment has been so timed as to follow a certain recent act of repudiation in such a way as to rob it of the appearance of premeditation. The Mail's frantically incendiary appeals to race prejudices, its energetic efforts to stir up religious rancour and enlist religious bigotry in the cause of its party, were not so successful as was desired. Therefore a supplementary scheme, which is at present being carried into execution, was hit upon. In strict consistency with the undying hostility of the Tory party to any Imperial legislation tending to the amelioration of the condition of the great mass of the Irish people—to granting our Irish fellow-subjects a measure of the political freedom that Canadians enjoy, the bitterest and most bigoted faction in opposition to the granting of free institutions to Ireland, was polled to select two firebrands to stir up that religious strife in Canada, which the Mail had, with the best intentions, only partly succeeded in doing. The services of Dr. Kane, of Belfast, and Mr. Geo. Hill Smith, of Armagh, ostensible representative of the Ulster Anti-Repeal Union, but in reality, electioneering agents of the Dominion government party, were secured. That they are now stumping the country in the interests of the Government, with Mr. Wm. Johnston, Orange Grand Master of Eastern Ontario, as advance agent and stage director, does not admit of doubt. By the way, Mr. Grand Master Johnston denies with considerable warmth that the Delegates are stumping Canada, under the auspices of the Loyal Orange Association. They are in charge, however, of Mr. Johnston. If Mr. Poobah Johnston is not managing the Delegates as Grand Master, he must be managing them as a Government official, as it would be interesting to know if his salary as Inspector of Weights and Measures goes on while he is "running" the Dominion Government crusade through Dr. Kane and Mr. Smith. Sir John has, for motives of policy repudiated the Mail, but Dr. Kane, Mr. Smith and Grand Master Johnston are nobly carrying on the work of stirring up the sectarian strife the Mail has done its little best to promote. The Delegates may claim that their tour is a work of of pure loyalty, undertaken in the interests of the unity of the Empire. But the bogus nature of their pretended loyalty is shown by the intention of Dr. Kane to "kick the Queen's crown into the Boyne," should she dare to sign a Home Rule Bill. From every platform they preach covert rebellion, and their speeches abound with adroitly worded appeals to sectarian bitterness. The object of their mission is too obvious to deceive. On behalf of the Dominion Government, they are seeking to inflame the passions of the Protestants against their Roman Catholic fellow-citizens, to set sect against sect, and thus to secure the solid Protestant vote for the Tory party. But the Liberals will not be so foolish as to fall into the trap. They will decline to become a party to establishing, on Canadian soil, the bitter, religious animosities that are a perennial source of strife in Ireland, and which are regarded as, to a great extent, the cause of the unhappy condition of that unhappy land. They will judge the Dominion Government by its record; they will condemn it for its long course of corrupt and extravagant administration; they will refuse to shut their eyes to its misdeeds and blindly follow the wily lead of Sir John Macdonald,

CHAPTER XII.

AT THE BAR.

I need not dwell upon the events that immediately followed Daisy's arrest. Too soon I was compelled to admit that the web of circumstantial evidence woven against my darling was only too close and complete. There were two examinations before the magistrates, in addition to the preliminary one; but I shall not delay my story by referring more particularly to them. At the end of the last examination Mr. Blake was committed to the Assizes at York for trial on the capital charge.

I had been constantly at my client's side during these terrible times, and along with Dr. Branksome, I had adopted every method of obtaining evidence on her behalf that presented itself to me. But all our efforts had been in vain. We could not adduce a single fact that tended to break down that dreadful chain of incriminating testimony which was woven against her by witnesses both willing and the reverse.

It was after Daisy's final committal that Branksome and I quarrelled. Up to that moment I had been constantly with him and had taken his advice in every matter concerning the trial. He on his side had treated me with a gentleness and frankness which had strengthened his hold upon my feelings. He had never referred directly to the fact that it was my action at Trondheim which had set the fatal engine of the law in motion, yet had even listened to me with grave attention when I openly declared my belief that Flinter was at the bottom of the mystery and that he had probably worked through some accomplice at the hall. When he had asked me where that accomplice was to be found, I had told him of my meeting with Gregson and had suggested that if we could lay hands upon this man we might perhaps obtain some clew to the real origin of the tragedy.

He was evidently surprised by my account of what Gregson had said to me on my journey by rail to Great Lorton Hall; and, after considering the matter for some time, he admitted that the first step to be taken was to discover this man and learn the meaning of his declarations. The finding of Gregson was a part of our common task, which Branksome took into his own hands. He knew something of the man, he told me—had known him, in fact, when he was in the employment of Mr. Maulererer in Australia—and he had no doubt about his ability to discover him.

Once I ventured to ask Branksome by what right this fellow had followed and persecuted Daisy on the occasion of my first meeting with her. But on this subject he could give me no information, any more than he could with regard to the man's sinister predictions regarding the murder at Great Lorton Hall.

Up to this point, I say, I had worked in the most perfect harmony with the doctor. But now, when Daisy had been committed to take her trial at the assizes, we quarrelled, and quarrelled bitterly and irrevocably.

"I have thought everything over carefully," he said to me, as we sat together in the hotel on the night after the examination was closed. "I have weighed all the evidence, and the position of the poor girl, and I have come to the conclusion that there is only one course to be taken."

"And what is that?" I asked, eagerly.

"She must plead guilty, in which case I have no doubt that we shall be able to save her life."

I could scarcely believe my ears. For a moment I was stunned by this unexpected suggestion.

"Guilty!" I cried, when I found my voice. "You suggest that she should confess to this horrible crime—you, Dr. Branksome, who have stood in the place of a father to her, and who ought to know her innocence and purity as well as I do myself! You are jesting, surely."

He shook his head, and those deep dark eyes of his looked fixedly into mine.

"We have done our best, my friend," he said, "and we have failed. Don't let us deceive ourselves as to the truth any longer."

"Speak for yourself, sir," I cried, in a moment freeing myself from the influence which the man had so long exercised over me. "If you choose to adopt the monstrous falsehood—yes, it is a falsehood, and you know it—that Daisy is guilty, then go your way, and join the band of her persecutors and bring her to the gallows if you can! but don't ask me to join you in the infernal work."

"Be calm, sir," said Branksome, sternly. "You compel me to remind you how it is that Daisy's life has been endangered."

I sprang to my feet, exasperated beyond endurance by that fatal recollection.

"Dr. Branksome, I owe you much in connection with this matter, and I shall try to remember my debt. But there is one thing I shall never forgive—never while I live—and that is that you should have been ready to desert Daisy in her hour of sorest need."

I left the room in hot indignation, and from that time we met no more as friends. I obtained an interview with Daisy—though it was more difficult to do so now that she had been committed—and procured from her the full authority which I needed to enable me to take charge of her interests during her trial. The good people of the prison pitied both her and me. Her beauty, her youth, the tie which bound us to each other, had seemed to awaken in the hearts of the officials a feeling of sympathy and good-will toward us. Even the chief constable, Eastmead, was friendly in his manner, and quite willing to do what he could to assist me in the task I had undertaken as Daisy's champion. In the little town of Barton, where the Maulererer poisoning case was for weeks the sole topic of discussion, everybody knew the story of Daisy and myself and I was conscious that as I walked through the streets I was followed by the pitying glances of the passers-by. But alas, no comfort was brought to my soul by all this outflowing of generous sympathy. For in my heart of hearts I knew that all these people believed my darling to be guilty—believed it all the more certainly now that it was known that even her guardian, Branksome, had deserted her. I, and I only, knew her to be free from blame; and until I found some way to expound her able to convict either of the two.

There was one thing I could and did do for Daisy. I procured for her at my own expense the best legal assistance that was to be obtained. Mr. Daniel O'Connor, whom I deemed to be retained by Daisy, was by common consent the great leader of the criminal bar. His silvery tongue and polished manner, combined with an unrivalled acuteness in detecting the weak points and merely to an university's credit, but to the panoply of virtue in which every British jury is clad, had raised him to a position which very few men are able to attain even at the English bar. I never paid my money with greater satisfaction in my life than when I discharged the amount necessary to permit of Mr. Shilcock's brief being marked with a fee of five hundred guineas and a "refresher" of one hundred guineas a day.

As second to Belmore I selected my friend Harding, with whom I had been associated at Scarborough at the time when Daisy and I first learned to love each other. His name had been mentioned to me among those of several other rising juniors on the circuit by the attorney whom I had consulted, and I instantly selected him, believing that he would give me the assistance of a friend as well as of an advocate. And now I waited with such patience as I could summond for the day when my darling would be placed on trial for her life, and when, as I hoped, her innocence might be fully established. I did not of course relax the efforts I had been making to obtain counter-evidence on her behalf. Three special points engaged all my attention. I desired, first, to discover how strychnine had been administered to Mr. Maulererer on the night of his murder; secondly, what had become of the poison which Daisy had undoubtedly procured shortly before the murder was committed; and, thirdly, where Gregson—whose connection with the mystery was, I felt sure, so intimate—was now to be found. Alas! when the day of the trial opened I was still without satisfactory information on any of these points.

Sometimes it took hundreds of dollars to convince a man; very often less is required, but in the case of Polson's Nerviline, that sovereign remedy for pain, 10 cents foots the bill, and supplies enough Nerviline to convince every purchaser that it is the best, most prompt and certain pain remedy in the world. Nerviline is good for all kinds of pain, pleasant to take, and sure to cure cramps and all internal pains. It is also nice to rub outside, for it is an agreeable smell, quite unlike so many other preparations, which are positively disagreeable to use. Try it now. Go to a drug store and buy a 10 cent or 25 cent bottle. Polson's Nerviline. Take no other. 6-tw39

Of Vital Importance

It is just as important that the human body should have pure blood, as that a tree or plant should have to say nourish and invigorate its growth. Nearly all our bodily ills arise from unhealthy blood. Burdock Blood Bitters purifies this fountain of life, and regulates all the vital organs to a healthy action. 2w38

Must Toe the Mark.

Mr. Justice Proudfoot, of the Chancery Division of the High Court of Justice, issued a mandamus calling upon Judge Wood, of Kent County, to reverse certain decisions he gave which were adverse to the Liberal party.

In Season.

It is now in season to warn our readers against the sudden attacks of Cholera, Cramp, Colic and the various Bowel Complaints incident to the season of ripe fruit, vegetables, etc. Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is the grand specific for those troubles.

China intends to issue a loan for $50,000,000 for the construction of railways in the Empire.

A Word of Explanation.

The liver secrets bile to move the bowles; the kidneys secrete urine to carry off uric acid, which would poison the blood; the stomach secretes gastric juice to digest or dissolve the food, etc. Burdock Blood Bitters acts upon these organs and purifies the blood by cleansing all the secretions of the system. 2w38

CAPTAIN WILLIAM SLATER, No. 57 Granville Street, Halifax, N.S.

N. WASHINGTON, M. D., Throat and Lung Specialist, Toronto.

DEAR SIR,—When you visited me in the latter part of January of this year I had been given up to die of consumption by a consultation of Physicians. Drs. Reid and Oliver, prominent physicians of Halifax who considered that my recovery was simply impossible. I had no hope myself, nor had my family. When you expressed a hope of my recovery it was received with a doubt. Confined to my bed, very low, weak wasted, night sweats very bad, troublesome cough, raising large quantities of matter—in fact every appearance of a speedy death. After using your Respirator and Spirometer and medicine I began to recover very fast, so much so that during three hard winter months I have gained from 20 to 25 lbs., and was able to walk out on Easter Monday. My strength is daily increasing, and I shall be able soon to be at work. To you I owe a deep sense of gratitude, and can and do say for others who are suffering as I was to consult you. You can make what use of this letter you see fit, and thanking you for what I consider a most wonderful treatment.

I remain, yours truly,

CAPT. WM. SLATER.

Later.—Fully recovered and at work.

CONSUMPTION,

which is Scrofulous Disease of the Lungs, is promptly and certainly checked and cured by this God-given remedy, if taken before the last stages of the disease are reached. From the wonderful power over this terribly fatal disease, when first offering this now celebrated remedy to the public, Dr. PIERCE thought seriously of calling it his "Consumption Cure," but abandoned that name as too limited for a medicine which, from its wonderful combination of tonic, or strengthening, alterative, or blood-cleansing, anti-bilious, pectoral, and nutritive properties, is unequaled, not only as a remedy for consumption of the lungs, but for all

On Monday evening tea will be served in the Town hall, opposite the church, from 5 till 8 o'clock, after which addresses will be delivered by Rev. Mr. Copeland, Rev. I. Tovell, and Rev. F. H. Wallace, B.D. Music will be provided by the choir.

Ashburnham Electrically Illuminated.

The work of putting in position the apparatus for lighting the village of Ashburnham by electricity was completed on Friday, and in the evening the brilliant light from the electric lamps illuminated the village for the first time. The lights, of which three or four are suspended from poles between fifty and sixty feet high, are erected on Elizabeth street, at the intersections of Stewart street, Mark street, and Lake street, and one at the eastern end of the Otonabee bridge. During the evening a number of boys collected under the lamps and amused themselves by playing ball. The new method of lighting the village will, no doubt, be a source of great satisfaction to those who love the light rather than darkness.

Compliment to a Former Peterborough Boy.

The Chicago Canadian-American of Sept. 17th, contains the following personal referring to Mr. M. B. Orde, of Minneapolis: "Markham B. Orde is an exemplary young Canadian, originally from Peterborough, Ont. He was in the employ of the Bank of Nova Scotia in Winnipeg, and during a little unpleasantness, occasioned by a man named Riel, he shouldered his musket and marched to the front. He was in the thickest of the fight at Batoche, and tells of many a thrilling incident during the short and active frontier campaign. Mr. Orde is an accountant in the Bank of Nova Scotia here, and is bright and expert at his business, and will give a good account of himself.

Peterborough Rifle Association

The Last Match of the Monthly Series—D. Cameron Again Wins the Ontario Medal.

The fourth of the series of monthly matches of the Peterborough Rifle Association was held on the range on Thursday afternoon. Considering that almost a gale was blowing from the left rear, besides being very unsteady, it is remarkable that such excellent scores, as some of them appear to be, were made. The Ontario Medal, being awarded to the highest aggregate score in any three of the four matches, has been again won by Mr. D. Cameron for the second time, he being the winner last year. His winning score this year is 148 points.

Besides the medal, 400 rounds of ammunition are distributed in prizes at each monthly match.

All the matches have been fired at 200, 500 and 600 yards, five rounds at each range.

The following is Thursday's score:—

	200 y.	500 y.	600 y.	Total
W. A. Bell	20	21	12	53
R. H. Smith	17	22	12	51
F. Hall	13	20	17	50
Dr. Bell	17	9	22	48
G. Fitzgerald	20	12	14	46
A. Blade	20	11	14	45
D. Cameron	15	16	13	44
Dr. Brennan	17	15	7	39
T. Rutherford	16	10	9	35
W. A. Mason	14	9	13	36
W. H. Hill	16	6	2	24
H. C. Rogers	15	3	0	18

Active preparations are being made fo the annual matches on Oct. 11th and 12th. We bespeak a generous support from the p lic towards the prize list.

Police Court.

John Elliott, of North Monaghan, was arraigned before Police Magistrate Dumble this morning, charged by his wife, Ellen Elliott, with having assaulted her. The defendant pleaded not guilty. Lively evidence was submitted on both sides, which showed that the defendant had shoved his wife roughly when engaged in a family quarrel. The magistrate imposed upon him a fine of $2. Mr. E. H. D. Hall appeared for the complainant.

Michael Dunn was fined $5 and costs for non-payment of statute labor tax. He did not appear in court.

Poisoning Dogs.

A case of dog poisoning occured in Lakefield recently which is receiving considerable attention. Mr. L. G. Steele, of Lakfield, owns a valuable hound which has been very successful in deer hunting during his existence; and also owned a valuable collie. Mr. Richardson, who also owned a fine hound, left his dog with Mr. Steele to care for it, while he was in Peterborough. Mr. Steele, who had left his hound tied up, giving it a run of 80 feet, by means of a wire, fastened Mr. Richardson's dog to this wire, and when he went to the Lakefield Fair on Thursday housed his own dog to prevent it from getting into mischief. All went well till Friday morning, when he found that Mr. Richardson's hound, and the collie, which was left to watch the house, were dead—having been poisoned. His own hound, which was kept in the house, escaped. Mr. Steele feels very much aggravated over the affair, and is confident the parties who did the poisoning intended only to kill his dogs. By reference to an advertisement elsewhere, it will be seen that Mr. Steele offers $100 reward for the conviction of the parties who poisoned the animals.

Exhibitions and Prizes.

For the next few days the making of exhibitions and the struggle for prizes will occupy the people's mind, and the awards in all cases will not give satisfaction. Already, however, one prize has been awarded that gives universal public satisfaction. Mr. M. Carton, of the Bon Marche, has been unanimously voted the first prize for low prices and for his magnificent exhibit of cheap goods in the line of groceries, household supplies and other goods. The Bon Marche exhibition is always open and the public are daily winning prizes in the big bargains they secure. Don't forget to call at the Bon Marche; it is the cheapest shop on the continent. If you don't believe it, try; if you try you will be convinced.

Attention!

We would call attention to the offer made by Joseph Griffin that during the next thirty days he will sell the whole of his summer stock of boots and shoes at cost. A few lines will actually be sold below cost. Look at the following quotations:—

Women's Pebble Oxford Shoes	70c.
" buff do do	80
" pebble—tie or buttoned	90
" India kid shoe	$1.00
" patent Oxford	1.20
" polished calf tie shoe	1.25
" do do Oxford	1.25
" do do buttoned	1.35

All the above goods are solid leather. All other goods will be sold equally cheap. Now is the time to secure bargains.

An honest medicine is the noblest work of man, and we can assure our readers that Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is not only reliable, but is almost infallible to cure Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Canker of the stomach and bowles, and the various Summer Complaints, whose attacks are often sudden and fatal. 2w38

The Victoria Rifle Association will hold its annual fall matches at Lindsay on Oct. 14th.

The projected building operations of the present year in New York are expected to call for the expenditure of $64,000,000.

General Middleton will proceed to British Columbia as soon as he has recovered from his recent illness, to inspect the defences of the province.

Three hundred and fifty ladies in Lindsay have agreed to buy no goods after 7 o'clock on Saturday night. Early closing of shops is the object.

One of the features of the Belleville fall race meet will be a match race for a purse of $1,000, between "Captain Jinks," of Warkworth, and "Lapidist Chief," owned by John Simpson, town.

A special committee of the Lindsay Board of Education, in a report presented last week, recommended that the High school staff be requested to resign. The Post says: "The object, we believe, is to reorganise the staff for the new year.

Preservation of Flowers.

To the Editor of the DAILY EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—Passing the Horticultural Park this afternoon, I noticed a large number of geraniums and other plants, which, in a few weeks' time, shall have been destroyed by frost. Might it not be worth while to bestow those plants on some deserving pupils in the Institute or in the public schools? They would be taught not only to care for the flowers during the winter season, but to give pleasure through the possession of a window full of plants, to sick people and others. I am sure the Horticultural Society would consent to this suggestion being carried out, as what they desire most is to encourage horticulture. Will the Directors state their approval of this suggestion? And can you, sir as a school trustee, provided they approve, see that the plan is carried out?

Yours, etc.,
LOVER OF FLOWERS.

RUSSIA'S EXACTIONS.

GENERAL KAULBARS PUSHING BULGARIA HARD.

Sofia, Oct. 2.—The reply of Bulgaria to Russia's demands has been delivered. In it Bulgaria accepts the Czar's terms, provided the independence of Bulgaria is formally guaranteed. Gen. Kaulbars is not satisfied, and has demanded an explicit and unprovisional reply within twenty-four hours.

[illegible] Threats.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 2.—The speech made by Prime Minister Tisza in the Hungarian Parliament, especially those portions relating to the independence of the Balkan States and Austria's determination to prevent the establishment of a protectorate over Bulgaria by any single foreign power, has called forth many [illegible] from the Russian [illegible]

The Novoe Vremya accuses Herr Tisza of wishing to captivate the sympathies of [the rulers of the Balkan States so as to use them as a cover to wage war against the just and moderate demands of Russia.

The German, St. Petersburg Gazette says: "It is undeniable that the territory ceded by Russia in securing Bulgarian independence entitle her, de jure and de facto, to a special position [illegible] Bulgaria."

The St. Petersburg says: "The [illegible] in following the ex[illegible] and German Parliaments [illegible] the Bulgarian question, [illegible] untimely and unprofitable.

Another Reply.

Sofia, Oct. 2.—Gen. Kaulbars having again asked for a reply to Russia's ultimatum, the Ministry to-day (Sunday) after a long discussion drafted a reply to the effect that the Bulgarian Government would comply with the demands of Russia to the extent that the constitution and laws would permit. It is expected that when this reply is delivered to-morrow, Gen. Kaulbars will demand a more precise answer.

No Surrender.

Sofia, Oct. 2.—A newspaper, Independent Bulgaria, the first number of which has just appeared, makes a violent attack on Russia and Gen. Kaulbars and opposes the liberation of the imprisoned conspirators, saying the people would stone them to death if liberated. It concludes with a bumptious threat to the Government with violence if it submits to the Russian demands. A large meeting in support of the Government was held to-day.

FLOATING THE IRISH FLAG.

A Captain Compelled to Haul it Down by the St. John, N.B., Customs Officers.

Ottawa, Oct. 2.—Considerable indignation is expressed among Sons of Erin in Canada over the action of the Collector of Customs at the port of St. John, N.B., in compelling Capt. Collins, of the Waterford bark Orient, to haul down the Irish flag which was floating at the masthead of his vessel as she sailed up the harbor. The officers of the Orient at first refused to comply with the request of the customs officers, who boarded the vessel as she came to anchor, but on finding that a fine of $500 which the law provides can be imposed on any vessel for floating an improper flag on board an English registered vessel, they hauled the flag down. The captain remonstrated and said he had floated the flag in British ports right under the nose of two British men-of-war without having a word said to him. The Government have decided not to impose a fine.

CONDEMNED TO DIE.

Fourteen Participants in the Recent Rising at Madrid Sentenced to Death.

Madrid, Oct. 2.—The courts-martial to-day condemned fourteen participants in the recent rising to death. The list, includes Gen. Villacampa, three officers, five sergeants, three corporals and two civilians. It is thought the sentence will be carried out on only seven. It is expected the prisoners will be executed on Monday.

At a bull fight performance this afternoon a portion of the audience displayed banners inscribed "Long live Alfonso XIII.," "Pardon for the prisoners," "Long live the Queen," etc. The whole audience applauded the demonstration.

Senor Palmerton and other deputies of the Republican minority waited upon Senor Segasta to-pay, praying for clemency to the rebels. Senor Segasta replied that everything possible would be done compatible with duty and the laws of the country.

THE RESTLESS INDIANS.

Depredations Committed by the Bloods Near Medicine Hat, N.W.T.

Winnipeg, Oct. 2.—A despatch from Indian Head says the Indians are becoming bolder each day. A man named Gaurdaque, while guarding property for the Medicine Hat Range Company, about twenty miles away, was held up by eight Blood Indians and relieved of his rifle, revolver and everything else of any value. Horse stealing began about the time the police outposts were ordered in.

Presentation to Justin McCarthy.

New York, Oct. 2.—The Irish members of the New York Municipal Council of the Irish National League presented a beautifully illuminated address to Justin McCarthy to-night. It was inscribed on vellum, and was surmounted by a representation of the old Irish House of Parliament. The address welcomed the visitor on behalf of the Irish National League of New York, and told him he would find a strong feeling of affection for the dear old land in this country, combined with an "ability and willingness to hold up the hands of the Irish leaders in their struggle for Home Rule and land reform."

The Chamber of the Irish Parliamentary Fund gave a banquet to Justin McCarthy to-night at the Hoffman House. The banquet room was trimmed with Irish and American flags and Irish harps composed of evergreens.

Fifty-Two Days in an Open Boat.

San Francisco, Oct. 2.—The steamer Alameda from Sydney and Honolulu brings news of the loss of the British ship Dunmoyar Castle on Ocean Island, 1200 miles from Honolulu on July 15. She left Sydney July 9 for Wilmington Cal. All of the crew reached the shore in safety, but as the Island is barren seven of them left for the Sandwich Islands, which they reached after a perilous voyage of 52 days in an open boat. A relief steamer left Honolulu to succor the remainder of the crew consisting of twenty-two persons, on Sept. 14, and was expected back Oct. 1st.

Mr. Wiman and Mr. Gould.

New York, Oct. 2.—Erastus Wiman positively denies the statements made in the Montreal press that he had recently been seeking promise with the intention of forming an anti-Gould party in the approaching Western Union election. His relations with Mr. Gould are of the most pleasant character, and no such intention as that alleged ever entered his mind.

Nearly $20,000 Short.

New York, Oct. 2.—A discrepancy to the extent of $19,152 has been discovered in the accounts of Otto Baumann, receiving teller of the Union Savings Bank, who is absent on two weeks' vacation. The bank is fully secured. Baumann was a trusted employe of 20 years' standing.

POLICY OF THE TORIES

LORD CHURCHILL MAKES AN IMPORTANT SPEECH.

London, Oct. 2.—Lord Randolph Churchill, speaking at Dartford to-night, said the Home of Commons was the slave of the caprice of the Radicals and Parnellites. It was imperative to provide a simple and effective means of closing debates. If Ireland followed the advice of agitators such action would lead to further repressions, but Irish commerce had begun to improve and with the present good harvest the people of Ireland might anticipate brighter times.

With regard to affairs in Bulgaria he said it was impossible to foreshadow the outcome, but he still hoped a peaceful settlement would be effected. England ought to support Austria in her difficulty.

Lord Churchill spoke in praise of the loyal support which the Government had received from Lord Hartington, Mr. Chamberlain and all of the Liberal-Unionists. He said that foreign affairs would be subordinated to the Union and the Unionist party. The Government recognized the sacrifices which the Unionists had made and the odium which they had incurred among their former friends; therefore, it was the duty of the Government to prove to the people of England that the Unionists were right in the course they took. The Government would give the greatest attention to legislation affecting England and Scotland, which had lately been neglected for Ireland. It would introduce measures to enable farm laborers to obtain freehold allotments, and would also deal with the questions of tithes and railway rates, measures for cheapening the cost of the transfer of land, and a genuine popular form of local government would also be presented. With regard to the land question in Ireland, they would have to change from double to single ownership in order to have peace. On all of these questions the prospects were fair, although the work would be heavy. He did not believe that there would be harsh evictions in Ireland.

Mr Michael's Convictions.

London, Oct. 2.—Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, Chief Secretary for Ireland, has returned to London. It is stated that his experience in Ireland has convinced him that exceptional measures will be necessary to maintain order in the country before 1887. It is further said that the Conservative members of Parliament will be notified that their presence at the November session of Parliament will be necessary in view of the recommendation to be made by the government respecting Ireland.

To Watch Suspects.

London, Oct. 2.—In accordance with the advice of Gen. Buller, and with the approval of the home office, Gen. Warren, Chief Inspector of the Police, has largely withdrawn the special police protection from public buildings of London in order to liberate at least 1000 policemen to be henceforth employed in watching suspects.

BY ORDER OF THE POPE.

Cardinal Taschereau's Condemnation of the Knights of Labor.

Montreal, Oct. 2.—At St. Patrick's Church to-day the Rev. Father Dowd continued the reading of the circular of the council of bishops of the Province of Quebec referring to the Knights of Labor and other secret societies and stated that they had been denounced by the clergy of Quebec, and that as such they could not be recognized by the Church. Cardinal Taschereau had submitted the whole matter to Rome with the result that the Pope had pronounced against the organization. In such a case they had nothing to do but to submit to Cardinal Taschereau. It might be said that the Association was not condemned in the States. With that they had nothing to do whatever.

GOLDWIN SMITH A FLY.

An Article in MacMillan Incurs the Wrath of the London Daily News.

London, Oct. 2.—Prof. Goldwin Smith's article, "England Revisited," in MacMillan's magazine brings down on him the Daily News, which describes his counsels as the warnings of self-satisfied pedantry, and accuses him of bad taste, bad logic, bad breeding, obtuseness, indecency and meanness. Mr. Gladstone has been criticised by Prof. Smith, "but Mr. Gladstone," remarks this elegant essayist of the News, "is too much absorbed in his great labors to deal out retributive justice to every fly."

An Anti-Eviction Fund.

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 2.—The President of the Irish National League in America has issued an address urging the immediate establishment by all branches of an anti-eviction fund, to be used for the relief of evicted tenants in Ireland. The address says:

Until recently he sad story of Ireland was only known to her sons. Now it is uppermost in the minds of all Christendom. The outspoken sympathy of the world is with her children in their struggle for home and liberty, hence Lord Salisbury and his government will soon discover that they can never starve, exterminate or subdue by coercion the Irish people. The fight is on. Evictions for non-payment of impossible rents have commenced. God's creatures are being rendered homeless and turned out on the roadside, but they shall not die the death planned for them by heartless tyrants. Therefore I appeal to every man and woman with Irish blood coursing in their veins to aid in resisting this inhuman brutality. Let every branch of the League at once start an anti-eviction fund and send the contributions to the National Treasurer, Rev. Chas. O. Reilly, Detroit, Mich. Branches should be started in every town and village in the country; in workshops and on the railroads. Rich and poor should unite in this humane and patriotic work.

Retaliating on Canadian Vessels.

Booth Bay, Me., Oct. 2.—Booth Bay takes the lead in retaliation. It is generally known that hitherto Canadian vessels have come into American harbors and have laid over the twenty-four hours allowed by law without entering the Custom House. Yesterday W. E. Reed, Deputy Collector of Customs at the Port of Booth Bay, compelled two Canadian vessels which had stayed over time to enter at Wiscasset, which is the port of entry, and fifteen miles from Booth Bay. If they had remained in the harbor six hours longer they would have been subjected to $1000 fine.

The Papal Secretary of State.

London, Oct. 3.—A special despatch from Rome says "In spite of strong efforts to conceal the true gravity of the illness of Cardinal Jacobini, the Papal Secretary of State, and notwithstanding the slight improvement to-day, it is greatly feared that one of the almost daily acute attacks of gout from which he suffers, may at any moment prove fatal. He is very feeble and undergoes excruciating agony."

Come from Their Case.

London, Oct. 3.—The wreck of the steamer Suffolk, which went ashore a few days ago at Lizard Point, has disappeared from view. Gangs of men are kept busy saving five cattle from dangerous places among the rocks. Some cattle are kept alive by fodder and water lowered from the cliff above.

An Unknown Vessel Foundered.

Owen Sound, Oct. 2.—The report comes from Lake Superior that on Wednesday last during a heavy gale, while the steamer City of Owen Sound was lying beside Pie Island for shelter, they saw a vessel go down with all hands, but could not make out what kind of a craft it was. It was supposed to have come from Verd Island.

NO DISEASE IN CANADA.

A Protest Against Embargoing Our Cattle.

Washington, Oct. 2.—Commissioner Colman of the Department of Agriculture to-day received the following communication from the Chief Inspector of Stock of Canada, touching the condition of Canadian cattle:

I notice by newspaper reports that the question of placing an embargo on cattle entering the United States from Canada is being discussed. Knowing, as I do, that Canada is entirely free from [illegible] pneumonia or any other contagious diseases of cattle, and that everything that was capable of carrying the disease from contact with infected animals in quarantine has been destroyed by burning, including the cattle, sheds, fences, feed, bedding, etc., as well as manure, no trace of the disease can possibly have escaped outside, and since its discovery no animals have been permitted to leave the quarantine, nor will they be as long as there is the least possible danger. I am glad to learn from Dr. Salmon that he intends visiting the quarantine with me on the 15th of October, when I will give him every opportunity of judging of our system.

In the connection may I suggest that it might satisfy the cattle men of the United States if you were to send a qualified veterinarian to remain at Quebec, quarantine permanently, or [illegible] he could report he would give every facility and [illegible] the condition of [illegible] animals in quarantine and in the Dominion generally, as much so as if he were one of our own inspectors.

The Plague in New Jersey.

Verona, N.J., Oct. 2.—Nine cases of pleuro-pneumonia have been discovered among the cattle on the farm of William Chase. Three cows have died, three are dying and three more were taken sick yesterday. The farm is surrounded by other farms on which there are dozens of cattle, a large supply of milk being sent to New York.

Embargoes Against Illinois.

Chicago, Oct. 2.—The governors of Kentucky, Dakota and Minnesota have issued proclamations prohibiting the importation of cattle from Illinois.

THE BOOM IN BRITAIN.

Financial Matters Easy and Trade Evidently Reviving.

London, Oct. 2.—Discount during the past week was quoted at 2½ to 2. There was an increased demand for money. The stock settlement was unusually heavy. Values advanced but the speculators cheerfully paid the higher rates. The large amount borrowed from the Bank of England and put upon the market restored rates to their former level. The distributions of October dividends will result in increased business for a week or two, when it is likely rates will harden.

There is no doubt now that trade is improving. Reports from the chief industrial centres state that business is either expanding or is certain to improve at an early day. A large increase of orders from America is noted at Birmingham. While manufacturers are busy at Leeds and Leicester, where the factories are working overtime. An active business was done on the stock exchange during the week. The settlement was the largest in four years.

The markets for American railroad securities was undecided in tone. The situation turns on the decision of the eastern trunk line pool. It is believed here that the difficulty will be adjusted. The report that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company had secured the steamers of the Inman Line and several Union and National steamers passed the market.

Knights of Labor Convention.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 2.—Delegates to the Knights of Labor National Assembly have been arriving steadily all day and very many strangers are seen on the streets. There are already between 200 and 300 delegates here, besides a large number of non-delegates. The Executive Committee will hold a session to-morrow morning before the National Assembly is called to order, for the arrangement of preliminaries.

Hamilton's Assessment.

Hamilton, Oct. 2.—The gross value of assessable property in Hamilton is, according to the assessors' figures, $20,743,933, as against $20,033,136 in the spring—an increase of $141,800. The population is 48,741, as against 41,220 in the spring—an increase of 1661.

A Lawyer Levants.

Boston, Oct. 4.—Clarence Hendrick, a young lawyer of this city, has disappeared, and, it is charged, has misappropriated between $3000 and $10,000 belonging to a young lady for whom he was settling an estate.

"THE WEIGHTIER MATTERS."

Rev. D. J. Macdonnell, of Toronto, published in the Globe a letter respecting the internal economy of the Central Prison. The Globe concludes an article on the subject of the letter in the following words:

"Mr. Macdonnell has shown an interest in political affairs somewhat late in the day, but we trust that his mistakes seal in the present case will not dishearten him for the whole of his remaining life. He might have spoken to some purpose in bygone days; when a railway charter was sold for money to purchase voters at the polls; when a Prime Minister paid a criminal to flee the country, and then wished to God he could catch him; when accredited agents of the Dominion Government sought to buy off the supporters of the Government of this Province with money and offers of office and were caught red-handed in the act; or when through neglect, delay, and mismanagement of the powers that be at Ottawa, the Half-breeds and Indians of the Northwest were driven into revolt, entailing the loss of many valuable lives and the waste of millions of money. These were stirring events, but we do not remember that Mr. Macdonnell's voice was heard upon them, from the pulpit, in the streets, or through the press; these he passed over, reserving his skill of statement and strength of rhetoric for the case of Mr. Massie and Mr. Korman. We respectfully refer Mr. Macdonnell for his parallel to the 24th verse of the 23rd chapter of Matthew, revised version.

Centreville Exhibition.

Annual Exhibition of the South Monaghan Agricultural Society.

The twenty-second annual exhibition of the South Monaghan Agricultural Society was held at Centreville on Thursday and Friday last, but owing to the weather and various other causes, it was not as successful as the exhibitions of former years, especially last year. The first day was principally devoted to putting things in readiness for the actual exhibition that took place on the second day. The attendance was moderately fair, the threatening weather and intense cold for the time of year detaining many visitors from being present. The show of live stock was not, taking the number of entries, as large as other years, but the quality was there. The inside exhibits were comparatively lacking in numbers, but the quality of the exhibits was about on a par with other years. This year the total entries amounted to only 600; last year they were over 800 in number. Following is the prize list:

EGAN'S IMPERIAL TRUSS

Read the following extract from a letter of a well-known citizen of St Catharines,—hundreds like it:

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 28th, 1885.

GENTLEMEN,—Being over 70 years of age, and over 30 years ruptured, looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two springless trusses made in York State, costing me $40. Nothing would retain my Hernia. I have worn your truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort; even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down, it holds me perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. B. KING.

This new Spirial Spring Pad Truss has taken ten years to make it perfect; is guaranteed to hold the very worst case during the hardest work or severest strain. It will cure every child sure; and 9 out of every 10 of adults. Be warned—don't waste your money on useless appliances, but send stamp for our treatise; it contains full information, your neighbors' testimony, price list and questions for you to answer. When writing please mention this paper. Address

The case of my darling was the last on the calendar at the winter assizes. It had been postponed at the request of our counsel, on the plea that her committal was of recent date, and that we had not been able to complete the inquiries necessary for her defence. But at last came the morning on which I found myself seated in front of the dock, in the little court in which so many tragedies of real life have been played out, and in which was now to be enacted the chief scene in the great tragedy that had so suddenly enveloped Daisy's life and mine.

I was hardly conscious of the bustle of thoughtful life which filled the court while we waited for the appearance of the judge. All around, the people were laughing and talking with a strange and heartless indifference to the horror of the moment. There were gayly dressed ladies in the galleries—ladies who had come provided with fans and scent bottles and opera glasses—heaven help them!—to witness the stirring spectacle of the baiting of a fellow creature to death in the name of the law. I felt rather than saw that for a time after I had been ushered to my seat by my attorney, the eyes of these women were fixed upon me. They knew that I was Daisy's lover; and, in staring at me and commenting on my appearance, they found an excitation which served to whet their appetites for the greater treat to come. If only I could have spoken out, and said all that was in my heart at that moment with regard to those fashionable and richly-attired women, I verily believe there is not one of them who would not have slunk away in shame to the obscurity of her own home.

The counsel came in one by one, and greeted each other cheerfully. There was one, however, whose face was grave as befitted the occasion. It was Harding. He came quickly across the court to where I sat, and gripped my hand hard in silent sympathy; then turned, and took his place at the big table where our solicitor and his clerks had arranged the great pile of papers and law books which were to be used during the trial. The prosecuting counsel for the crown, a meager little man with a pale face, keen eyes, and thin lips, Mr. Hawk, Q. C., and the first of the leading personages to appear. Almost directly after his arrival I saw the commanding figure of Mr. Belmore standing at the entrance to the court; and I took fresh courage as I looked into that handsome, intellectual face, and remembered the great feats this man had already accomplished by his gift of speech and mind. While he was returning the salutations of his friends among the members of the circuit, I allowed my eye for a moment to wander round the court, and instantly I found that Branksome and Fosdyke were sitting together on a bench behind the seats for the jurors. The former was eying me, as it seemed to my sensitive imagination, with mingled curiosity and compassion. I do not think there was any one in all that crowded building who was more entirely self-possessed than he was, and yet he was about to see the girl who had been as a daughter to him placed on her trial for her life—and he believed her to be guilty. I turned with a shudder of dread, of the reason of which I was myself hardly conscious, from such a spectacle of supreme self-control. As I did so I caught Fosdyke's eye. He bowed to me and waved his hand. I knew that, like Branksome, he believed Daisy to be guilty. Indeed, after conducting her case during her appearances before the magistrates, he had readily acquiesced in my suggestion that, unless he were convinced of her innocence, he would do well to allow me to seek assistance elsewhere. But, although he had thus deserted us in the hour of direst need, I felt against him nothing of that burning indignation which possessed me whenever I thought of Branksome. He at least had never known Daisy as Branksome had done, and I had no right to blame him because he misjudged her.

There was a loud cry of "silence" from the ushers; everybody in court rose; and the judge, a little rosy-faced man with a bright good-natured countenance, entered, and bowing, in acknowledgement of the salutations of the bar, took his seat upon the bench. Then there was some little confusion while the under sheriff was engaged in the process of getting a jury together. In my impatience it seemed to me that the trial would never be allowed to begin that day. Hours must surely already have elapsed since I took my seat in the court.

"Put up Daisy Stancliffe," suddenly cried the clerk, and there was an audible movement of suppressed excitement throughout the crowded court. I turned and looked, and there at the bar, deadly pale, but with a sweet composure on her face such as I have seen in pictures of Joan of Arc at the stake, stood Daisy confronting those who for the moment represented the majesty of the English law. I had meant to raise her hand and kiss it there and then, before all the onlookers. But when I saw that noble, beautiful face, over which, as it were, the very shadow of the valley of death was hanging, I was overcome with a feeling that was almost out of awe. I did not dare to intrude upon that holy calm, which, like some protecting halo, seemed to surround my darling. Ah! who was I, that I should have been allowed to win the love of this priceless treasure, and that to me should have been given the privilege of standing here, her only friend and champion, in the presence of a hostile world? I sent up a prayer to God for strength and courage and composure for both of us. And then I looked again, and her clear eyes shone down into mine like stars from a wintry sky, and we smiled upon each other, as those try to do who meet on the verge of an eternal parting.

"Not guilty," in a voice that trembled a little, but that yet was heard with distinctness throughout the court, was Daisy's reply to the demand of the clerk of arraigns. Then up rose Mr. Hawk, Q. C., the representative of the treasury, and in a clear, cold voice began his dispassionate, but all too-terrible, recital of the case against Daisy—to whom he never referred save as "the prisoner at the bar." Briefly told, this was his story:

CAPTAIN WILLIAM SLATER, No. 37 Granville Street, Halifax, N.S.
N. WASHINGTON, M. D., Throat and Lung Specialist, Toronto.
DEAR SIR,—When you visited me in the latter part of January of this year I had been given up to die of consumption by a consultation of Physicians Drs. Reid and Oliver, prominent physicians of Halifax who considered that my recovery was impossible. I had no hope myself, nor had my family. When you expressed a hope of my recovery it was received with a doubt. Confined to my bed, very low, weak wasted, night sweats very bad, troublesome cough, raising large quantities of matter—in fact every appearance of a speedy death. After using your Respirator and Spirometer and medicine I began to recover very fast so much so that during three hard winter months I have gained from 20 to 25 lbs., and was able to walk out on Easter Sunday. My strength is daily increasing and I shall be able soon to be at work. To you I owe a deep sense of gratitude, and am anxious for others who are suffering as I was to consult you. You can make what use of this letter you see fit, and thanking you for what I consider a most wonderful treatment.
I remain, yours truly,
CAPT. WM. SLATER.

Ball Acquitted at Barrie.

John Ball, lately of the firm of Hamill & Ball, photographers, Peterborough, arrested in Barrie last March on a charge of passing counterfeit bank notes, was tried at the Barrie Assizes on Friday, before Mr Justice Rose, and was acquitted. He pleaded guilty. The Judge in giving his decision said Ball had broken the law and he might impose a penalty of imprisonment, but as it was evident that Ball had been the tool of another party, he discharged him.

The Flowers Bloom in Fall, Tra la!

Mr. Robert Fife has an industrious garden on "Smithtown" hill. He has left at the EXAMINER office a bouquet of strawberry flowers, plucked on Oct. 2nd, with growing fruit amongst the bloom. Also a branch from a Cuthbert raspberry bush, plucked the same day, with fully ripened fruit. He has in his garden about fifty bushes with ripened and ripening fruit upon them. He also favored us with a cluster of ripe black-cap raspberries. Not being certain as to the weather, Mr. Fife cannot furnish quotations of the figures at which he will dispose of his crop. It is feared also that he cannot guarantee a full crop on his too-industrious berry bushes next year.

The Ætnas Defeated.

The Ætna Lacrosse club, which has been successful during the season in vanquishing all the junior lacrosse clubs in town, on Saturday went to Millbrook to play the juniors of that village for a silver cup, presented by Mr. J. Trebell, of town. The Millbrook juniors succeeded in defeating the Ætnas by "two straights," after a long and hard struggle, thus winning the cup. The first game occupied an hour and 25 minutes, and the second nearly an hour. It was seen at the start that the Ætnas had little chance of victory, as their opponents were young men, in some instances twice the size of their checks, and in addition were well acquainted with the game. The little Ætnas made a good stand, and were heartily cheered by their opponents on leaving the field. Should the weather be favorable they return match will be played here next Saturday.

Anniversary Services

of the Mark Street Methodist Church, Ashburnham.

The anniversary services in connection with the Mark street Methodist Church, Ashburnham, were held on Sunday last. The services were conducted by Rev. T. Copeland, of Cobourg, who occupied the pulpit both morning and evening, delivering able practical sermons appropriate to the occasion, which were attentively listened to by large congregations. In the afternoon a children's service was held, at which Rev. G. F. Copeland and Rev. W. H. Wallace, B.D., delivered interesting addresses. Collections were taken up during each service in aid of the trust fund.

The annual tea meeting in connection with the church will be held this evening in the Town Hall, opposite the church, from 5 till 8 o'clock. After the addresses will be delivered by Rev. G. F. Copeland, Rev. F. McAmmond, Rev. I. Tovell and Rev. F. H. Wallace. Music will be furnished by the choir.

Personal.

Mr. S. A. Whittaker, formerly of Buffalo, N. Y., and recently of St. Catharines, Ont., has accepted a position in Mr. J. D. Tully's drug store.

Mr. Arthur Bridges, recently of England, who plays a first-class clarionet, has become a member of the Fire Brigade band. His superior playing will be a valuable addition to the reed ranks of the organization.

Messrs. E. Walter Rathbun, M. J. Butler, P.L.S., and W. H. Aylsworth, of Deseronto, are in town to-day, on their way to the northern parts of the country to survey and look after the timber limits of the Rathbun Company.

Rev. G. F Copeland, of Cobourg, who was in town to conduct the anniversary services of the Mark street Methodist Church, Ashburnham, favored the EXAMINER with a call this morning. It is thirteen years since he was stationed in Ashburnham, and he is greatly impressed with the great forward strides which this town has made since that time.

Police Court.

The hearing of the charge against J. H. O'Shea of violation of the Scott Act, enlarged from last week, was continued at the Police Court this morning before Police Magistrate Dumble. On the evidence of Chief Cooper and Inspector Cochrane, who made a search of O'Shea's premises and found in his cellar a quantity of beer and wine, and of R. Surplus, who testified that he purchased several drinks of beer from O'Shea, the Magistrate found the defendant guilty and imposed the usual fine of $50 and costs. Mr. J. O'Meara appeared for the defendant and Mr. R. E. Wood for the crown.

A similar charge preferred against W. J. Kearns, of Ennismore, by Inspector Cochrane, was called. Kearns pleaded not guilty. One witness was examined and testified that a stranger sold him liquor behind Kearns' barn, when the case was enlarged till this afternoon.

Painful and Serious Accident.

Mr. Barton Earle, English Master of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute, on Saturday night met with a painful and serious accident, which will confine him to his house for weeks, if not months. He had been out visiting and was returning home, and when going south along Aylmer street, between Edinburgh and Antrim streets, in the darkness which was unbroken by gas or electric lamp, he slipped off the sidewalk, doubling his left foot under him and falling to the ground. On attempting to rise he could not place his left foot to the ground, while his ankle gave him great pain. By terrible effort he managed to drag himself to his home, about fifty yards distant, where he was noticed in attempting to ascend the steps in front of his door, and was aided into the house. Dr. Fife was sent for, who ascertained that both bones of the leg were broken close to the ankle. He set the fracture, and the sufferer is doing as well as could be expected under the circumstances. The place where Mr. Earle fell is spoken of as a dangerous spot, and the Council should see that the street is properly lighted to insure the safety of passengers.

Opening the Exhibition.

Circumstances have slightly changed the programme laid down for the reception of the Lieut.-Governor on the occasion of the opening of the Central Exhibition on Wednesday, October 6th. A telegram was received this morning from His Honor's secretary, stating that owing to his having to open the Port Perry exhibition on the same day, the Lieut.-Governor would not arrive on the 11.30 C. P. R. train, but would come by special at 2 o'clock. From the station he will proceed at once to the Exhibition grounds, where the opening ceremonies will take place. His Honor will be accompanied to the grounds by a body guard composed of fifty members of the Peterborough Rangers and an escort of eleven members of the Peterborough cavalry troop. The change made in the programme will in no way diminish the impressiveness of the opening ceremonies, to witness which thousands will assemble next Wednesday.

Exhibitions and Prizes.

For the next few days the making of exhibitions and the struggle for prizes will occupy the people's mind, and the awards in all cases will not give satisfaction. Already, however, one prize has been awarded that gives universal public satisfaction. Mr. M. Carton, of the Bon Marche, has been unanimously voted the first prize for low prices and for his magnificent exhibit of cheap goods in the line of groceries, household supplies and other goods. The Bon Marche exhibition is always open and the public are daily winning prizes in the big bargains they secure. Don't forget to call at the Bon Marche; it is the cheapest shop on the continent. If you don't believe it, try; if you try you will be convinced.

Wedding at St. Peter's Cathedral

The bell of St. Peter's Cathedral rang out a merry chime this morning on the occasion of the marriage of Mr. Joseph J. Daly, one of Peterborough's most popular young men, to Miss Essie Murray, also of town. Rev. Father Conway officiated while Miss Minnie Dorgan of Lindsay, and Mr. Richard Phelan, of town assisted the bride and groom in the interesting event. A large number of the friends of the contracting parties assembled at the cathedral to witness the ceremony. The happy couple left on the morning train for Port Hope en route for Rochester and a trip through the Western States, followed by the congratulations of their many friends.

"The Bankers Daughter."

A BULGARIAN REVOLT

THE PRINCIPALITY PRACTICALLY DEFIES GENERAL KAULBARS.

SOFIA, Oct. 4.—Dr. Voultcheff, who headed a deputation the other day to Gen. Kaulbars, the Russian representative, to-day made a report to a public meeting of 5000 people. After a resolution had been unanimously passed expressing confidence in the Government, and a Russian had been nearly pummelled to death for crying, "Long live the Czar," Gen. Kaulbars appeared on the scene. He was accompanied by M. Nesklindoff, the Russian diplomatic agent at Sofia. His reception was a warm one, the whole audience shouting defiance at him and his master. He vainly endeavored to explain the Czar's demands. Finally his patience became exhausted and in high dudgeon he threw the responsibility for refusing to listen to Russia's advice on the country. "The Bulgarians as a nation," he said, "do not desire a constitution, only a few men in the country want one." The shouting here became most violent and Gen. Kaulbars was compelled to withdraw from the tribune. A popular orator immediately ascended it and asked the people if it were true that they desired to abolish the constitution. The crowd loudly protested that it was not true and made threats against anyone who should attempt to tamper with the constitution. A committee was appointed to go to Premier Radoslavoff's residence and present him with a copy of the resolution adopted. The meeting then adjourned.

The Premier received the committee and listened to the reading of the resolution. He declared he would always follow the policy he had hitherto adopted and maintain the laws and constitution of Bulgaria in order to assure its independence and liberty. This declaration was received with great applause, and when communicated to the great crowd which had followed the committee, the people became enthusiastic. They crowded upon M. Radoslavoff, and carried him about in their arms, cheering wildly and singing the National Anthem.

Russia and Germany of One Mind.

VIENNA, Oct. 4.—Russia and Germany have unfavorably received Austria's suggestion for a conference to settle the Bulgarian question.

His Parting Shot.

SOFIA, Oct. 4.—Gen. Kaulbars, before leaving Sofia on a tour of Bulgaria, notified the Government that Russia would not consider the elections to the Sobranje legal.

Another Revelation.

BUCHAREST, Oct. 4.—It is reported here that a revolution has broken out in Sofia and Tirnova.

CONSTITUTIONAL AGITATION.

New York Irishmen Tired of It, and Anxious for British Gore.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Something in the nature of a revolt against the Irish National League and Parnell took place yesterday at a meeting of the Twentieth Ward Branch League. It arose in the course of a discussion as to whether the branch should respond to the circular issued by Mr. Parnell to President Fitzgerald.

Jeremiah B. Murphy, Secretary, said the time had come when some determined stand should be taken in relation to the thousands of evictions threatened by landlords, and daily taking places. "Now, the league here has forwarded," continued the speaker, "an enormous sum of money to Ireland to help fight the battle of the people in that country, and what is the result? Not alone has Home Rule been refused, but there is no sign whatever that it will be granted; and now again there is a call for money, money, money. Where, I ask, are the hundreds of thousands of dollars that have gone into the treasury of the League? I think this thing should be put an end to, and now is the time to begin. We see what peaceful agitation has led to—pauperism, extermination of our people and general demoralization of those who remain. The time will come when other means should be tried of freeing Ireland than by sending representatives to the English Parliament to be laughed at." [Applause.]

Col. J. P. O'Flynn said he entirely agreed with the views. "Every possible form of persuading England in an argumentative sense," he said, "has been tried and now we are face to face with a condition of things in Ireland's cause that has existed for the last hundred years. Three thousand evictions are threatened this coming week, and hundreds have already taken place. I have wished and prayed and hoped that Ireland would someday manfully fight for her freedom, as all struggling nationalists have done. I want and we all want some other measures besides parliamentary agitation; for we are heartily sick of a policy that has brought us a crop of evictions, and nothing more. I am for the use henceforth of any and all means to help free Ireland from the grasp of England."

The chairman said: "Not one penny more of my money shall go to the anti-eviction fund or to any form of parliamentary agitation. We want an accounting for the million and more dollars that have gone into the treasury of the League from this country before sending ever any more money. It is not long since I was in Ireland, and I can safely say that in many of the western and southwestern counties the unfortunate people who took the advice of the League and allowed themselves to be evicted, got no support at all from the League, while some of the gang and members of Parliament from Ireland could drive about Dublin in state, living upon the money that we sent over. There was a resolution before the Chicago convention to boycott English goods. Well, you saw the parliamentary delegates to that convention were dressed in the latest London fashion."

Other speakers spoke in a similar fashion.

ADDRESS TO THE G.O.M

TRIBUTE OF HALF MILLION OF IRELAND'S WOMEN TO GLADSTONE.

HAWARDEN, Oct. 4.—Mr. Gladstone and his wife to-day received Mrs. J. D. Sullivan, wife of the Lord Mayor of Dublin and the deputation of Irish ladies appointed by the women of Ireland to present the ex-premier with a mammoth petition in favor of Home Rule. The petition bears the signatures of half a million Irish women. Great crowds have flocked hither all day in view of the event. Accompanying the deputation were deputations representing the Municipal Councils of Cork, Limerick, Waterford and Clonmel. The place was perfectly alive with visitors, who were accorded the freedom of the lawn during the formal ceremonies. Mr. Gladstone, Mrs. Gladstone, Herbert Gladstone, Rev. Stephen Gladstone, Miss Helen Gladstone and Rev. Henry Drew met the deputations as they entered the grounds and conducted them into the library. When Mr. Gladstone with his family emerged from the house to receive the deputations he was greeted with hearty and prolonged cheering by the multitude on the grounds. Arrived in the library, Mrs. Sullivan read the address of the Irish women. The Mayor of Cork, the Mayor of Limerick, the Mayor of Waterford and the Mayor of Clonmel then each presented Mr. Gladstone with the freedom of their respective cities and thanked him for his chivalrous and splendid efforts to restore Ireland's Parliament, expressing the hope that he would soon visit Ireland to receive from the Irish people at their homes the thanks they felt toward him. When Mr. Gladstone replied his voice was somewhat husky. He said he believed that the deputations and the Nationalist members of the House of Commons truly represented the Irish as a people. "At my age, however," Mr. Gladstone said, "the question of visiting Ireland is beset with uncertainties. Whatever may be my condition, whether of bodily presence or absence from among them the Irish people will always share my interest and affection."

Mr. Gladstone added that he must deny the statement that he had renounced his former attitude by supporting the proposal to restore the Irish Parliament. He said also that he was thankful for the share he took in passing such Irish measures as had been made laws during his public career. He continued: "The whole character of the Irish controversy has altered. We do not now contemplate the dreadful alternatives our fathers faced a century ago, nor the alternative Willing faced when he said the proposed Catholic emancipation as the alternative to civil war. It was necessary that the late Government's Irish proposals should have been put forward in accord with the desires of the Irish nation, and also to make it clear that the proposals stood within the limits of Imperial honor, safety and welfare. These aims were completely attained, and they have been sustained by the singular mildness and temperance of expression which have so far characterized the conduct of Irishmen at every stage of the agitation till now. [Cheers.] The cause represented by these honorable deputations is the cause of order, of peace, of loyalty. It is the hope of conducing to the settlement of this great question which has kept me in my present position in political affairs. I am quite prepared to withdraw from public life, if I could believe that it were better for Ireland, but I am unable to arrive at the conclusion that England's interest is as much involved."

THE BELFAST COMMISSION.

The Investigation Threatening to Prove a Mere Farce.

BELFAST, Oct. 4.—The commission appointed to investigate the recent riots met to-day. All the barristers present except two insisted on an adjournment for a few minutes to decide on what line of action to adopt. Justice Day refused to adjourn, saying it would be a mere waste of time. He then, despite the protests of the barristers, proceeded to examine a witness, whereupon the barristers rose and left the court, taking their bags and books. Several solicitors and others interested in the investigation followed the barristers. The only witness examined was Inspector Carr. Those acquainted with the true state of affairs are of opinion that the whole thing will end in a farce. It is thought the constables will be the only witnesses.

Lord Randolph's Success.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—The Times, commenting on the success of Lord Randolph Churchill in the new ministry says he has so far disappointed the partisan opposition, which has been eagerly watching to catch him in some indiscreet sally or untimely sarcasm. "It is satisfactory," adds the Times, "to find Lord Randolph Churchill's eminent capacity for political affairs now developed without levity of purpose or recklessness of diction."

Mr. Chamberlain Waxing Mad.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—In a letter, Mr. Chamberlain denounces the Parnell Bill as a "dishonest piece of party tactics, intended to divide the Liberal Unionists and to provoke agitation in Ireland." "It is probable," he says, "that the influence of these well-paid patrols will collapse in the face of the determination of the people of Great Britain not to yield another inch to the vile conspiracy supported by outrage and assassination."

The Union and Trade.

DUBLIN, Oct. 4.—A deputation from the Dublin Chamber of Commerce waited upon the Lord Lieutenant to-day and presented an address expressing the conviction that the prosperity of Ireland is bound up in legislative and mercantile union with Great Britain. The Lord-Lieutenant, in reply, said the Government was determined to preserve the union and to maintain the supremacy of the law.

The Commander Struck Down.

BELFAST, Oct. 4.—A number of youths who were creating a disturbance here to-day were charged upon by the police, whereupon they retaliated by throwing stones. A military picket which came to the rescue was attacked by the mob. Major Doncaster, who was in command of the troops, was felled to the ground by a rioter. Three arrests were made.

MISSOURI REGULATORS.

The Proceedings of a Society Known as the White Horse Company.

STOUTLAND, Mo. Oct. 4.—For some time past there has been an organization in Miller County known as the White Horse Company, whose avowed purpose was the suppression of horse stealing. A few nights ago the company visited the house of Frank Rodden, a well-to-do farmer, who was harboring a woman of alleged loose morals, and taking Rodden and the woman to the woods, bound them across a log and administered a severe flogging to them. They warned Rodden and the woman that a continuance of their relations would result in their being hanged, and also warned a party of harvesters, who recognized some of the White Horse Company's men, that any reference to the matter would result in death.

MURDER AT BUCKINGHAM.

A Drunken Man Fatally Stabs a Man Who Defends a Woman.

OTTAWA, Oct. 4.—A report comes from Buckingham that on Friday evening last two men named Rousseau, father and son, entered the tavern kept by one Frangeat, at Notre Dame du Laus parish, about fifty miles north, and demanded liquor. As they were intoxicated, Mrs. Frangeat, who was in charge, refused them any, whereupon they commenced to raise a row and take possession of the house. Mrs. Frangeat called John Laderoute, a butcher about 45 years old, to her assistance. He had ejected the younger and was about to do the same with the father when a knife was drawn. Laderoute was stabbed in several places and died from the effects of his wounds. The Rousseaus have been arrested.

BELLEVILLE'S LARGEST HOTEL.

The Dufee House Completely Destroyed by Fire Yesterday Morning.

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Oct. 4.—The Dufee House, the largest hotel in the city, was completely destroyed by fire this morning. At 3 o'clock flames were observed in the kitchen department, which was situated in the basement of the south wing, and in a short time the fire was beyond control. It is still burning, but is under control, and nothing is left standing except the stone and brick work on Pinnacle-street and for about distance on Bridge-street. The building was owned by Wm. Dafoe and was tenanted by S. R. Balkwill. Mr. Dafoe's loss on the building was about $20,000, insured for $4,000. Mr. Balkwill's loss is estimated at $10,000 to $20,000, insured for $10,000. Mr. D. Houston, lessee of the bar, was insured in the National and Ireland for $2,000 on stock and fixtures, which will cover his loss. Mr. Jno. Glickland, lessee of the billiard room, in which he had three tables, was insured in the National for $1,800, which will nearly cover his loss. Happily no lives were lost, but some of the inmates had very narrow escapes. Of the contents of the hotel comparatively little was saved, whilst many of the boarders lost nearly all of their effects, and the servants lost all of their clothing.

A SOULLESS CONSPIRACY.

A Big Operator on the Coal Combination.

CHICAGO, Oct. 4.—W. P. Rend is one of the most prominent anti-pool dealers in the Chicago coal trade. He has extensive interests in all the bituminous fields of Pennsylvania and Ohio, and is one of the largest buyers of anthracite known on the Buffalo market. Gov. Pattison's communication to the attorney-general of Pennsylvania asking that proceedings be commenced against the anthracite coal pool in Eastern Pennsylvania, was read by Mr. Reed with great satisfaction yesterday. He said: "A great ring, or rather a colossal evil, exists in the case of the present anthracite coal combination, and state and national legislation should be invoked to protect the people of the country from the greed and rapacity of this monster monopoly. That an artificial scarcity of an article of prime necessity to almost every family in the land has been caused by a soulless conspiracy is a moral wrong, and should be branded and punished as a high crime. It should be treated by the laws as a felony. Unless something is done by the state authorities to grapple with the organized robbery it is difficult to say to what outrageous extent it may be carried."

A Serious Riot in India.

BOMBAY, Oct. 4.—At the festivals at Rawlu, the local magistrate, seeing that a conflict between Hindoos and Mohammedans was inevitable, brought a company of British troops to the scene. The natives, infuriated at their approach, threw themselves on the soldiers' bayonets in their intense onslaught. Many natives were mortally wounded. Much excitement prevails.

The Anchoria Still Missing.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—The steamship Anchoria has not yet arrived. She left Glasgow Sept. 28 and stopped at Londonderry to take on 132 passengers. In all she had about 600 passengers and was due at this port on Wednesday last. The company's officials profess to believe that nothing has occurred beyond the breaking down of some machinery. From the fact that heavy weather has prevailed lately, fears are entertained for the safety of the vessel.

PETERBOROUGH CENTRAL.

REPORT OF THE FIRST DAY'S DOINGS.

The Exhibition Grounds Alive With Activity.

Making Good the Entries - Bustling Exhibitors, Beautifying the Building—A Big Success Promised.

To-day is the first day of the Peterborough Central Exhibition and the indications of its being a magnificent success are exceedingly gratifying. This morning early, the street leading from town to the exhibition grounds was alive with every sort of vehicle, from the ponderous farm waggon, lumbering leisurely along with its precious freight of mammoth pumpkins, plethoric pipins, toothsome jars of canned fruit, or the patch-work quilt, representing the toil of months, to the slender buggy, in which some ambitious young lady sat holding, in a careful, envy-exciting embrace, the framed and glazed specimens of her skill, feather work, flower work, or some mysterious product of pen, pencil, or brush. The carters reaped a rich harvest, their trucks groaning with the weight of reapers, mowers, ploughs, or pianos in all the glory of French polish, or buggies resplendent with the mirror-like glitter of paint and varnish, too dainty for the vulgar, half-hearted soil of the street, a mealy compromise between mud and dust. From the high, rick-like boxes of waggons came the thorbred bleat of sheep of the different Downs, Cotswold and Leicesters, while ever and anon in the procession the blanketed steed, proud of himself as his devoted groom was of him, pranced along, in close proximity to the lordly bull, sleekly groomed, a mountain of thorough bred, muscle and bone in whose veins ran the blood of a hundred bovine ancestors. All these made the long, wide expanse of George street a picturesque, moving panorama from the market square to

of the Exhibition grounds, where all was bustle and animation. The active secretary, Mr. D. D. Gallelly, was as busy as the proverbial bee, attending to the besieging throng of exhibitors clamoring for entry tickets, information as to space and a hundred other things, till his head swam, and he felt that if he had the double head of Janus and the hundred hands of Briareus, he could use both and all.

Everything about the grounds was in readiness, the long stretch of ninety-one boxes for the horses were ready for the occupants and some were already in use, the busy whistling groome rubbing down their charges with the deftness and delicacy of hospital nurses. A few stray flocks of sheep here and there dotted the grounds waiting for there pens, while here and there the cattle buyers held numerous tenants. But the bulk of the live stock is not required to be in the sheds till ten o'clock on the second day, and the large number of entries made shows that there will be a splendid exhibit in these classes.

INSIDE THE EXHIBITION BUILDING

the greatest activity reigns. Everybody is busy putting the finishing touches to the exhibits. In the agricultural department the grains, roots and vegetables are all on hand in magnificent extent. The cheese piled in golden cylinders, are associated with the pats and rolls of golden butter in snowy swathings. The fruit tables are fragrant with a grand array of rosy-cheeked apples, appetising pears and luscious clusters of grapes in purple profusion. Splendid displays of blooming plants and cut flowers add the relief of their vari-colored brilliancy. There are piano exhibits, stove exhibits, mercantile exhibits in addition on the first floor. The second floor is sacred to the display of fine art specimens and ladies' useful and fancy work, and, judging from the partial display at ten o'clock this morning, with the exhibits pouring in at a rapid rate, these departments will be a splendid sight.

Elsewhere in the grounds there are signs of an excellent exhibit. In specially constructed sheds Messrs. Porter Bros. are placing an extensive display, while opposite them Messrs. Fitzgerald & Stanger, under a brilliantly decorated marquee, with a small camp of other tents, are also arranging an other extensive display of carriage building products. In other parts of the grounds other exhibitors are screwing, and hammering together reapers, mowers, and other agricultural implements, and others are disposing to tempting view, various implements and wares.

The grounds present a vastly improved appearance as compared to that of last year. They have been levelled, and the exhibition building looming up in the middle puts a finish to the scene.

To day the driving park is in splendid condition, and if no more rain falls, will tomorrow be the scene of the greatest interest.

Mr. John Craig is deep in the mysteries of the culinary department, ready for furnishing refreshments for the multitude.

If the weather holds good there will be an immense attendance to-morrow, which will be for which the following is the programme.

On this day will be held the formal grand opening of the exhibition by His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, who will arrive by the 11.30 C. P. R. express. This ceremony will take place at 2 p.m., when addresses will be presented to His Honour by the corporation of the town of Peterborough, and by the Directors of the exhibition. This will also be the Citizen's Gala Day. This day first prize will be first exhibited, and all departments of the exhibition will be fully open. Among the events of the day, the Thistle Club, of Toronto, will give performances in Highland costume, assisted by the Queen's piper, Mr. Charles Morrison, who will perform at intervals during the day. There will be various athletic exercises, including a club-swinging contest between D. N. Smith, of the Thistle Club, Toronto, and Mr. Thomas MacNaughton, Peterborough, for a handsome prize.

The Ulster Loyalists.

We have been requested to publish the following letter, which has been forwarded to the Port Hope Guide for publication:

To the Editor of the Guide:

DEAR SIR,—My attention has been called to a letter of Mr. Wm. Johnson's in your issue of the 1st of October, referring to certain statements made by me in a letter replying to a communication of Mr. Barnham, both of which were published here. I have sent to Mr. Johnson an explanation, which he is at liberty to publish, if he sees fit to do so, as I have nothing to retract.

Yours truly,
J. B. McWILLIAMS.

THE KNIGHTS OF LABOR.

Opening of the Annual Convention at Richmond, Va.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 4.—The tapping of Master Workman Powderly's gavel at 10.18 o'clock this morning gave the signal for the opening of the first session of the 10th annual convention of the Knights of Labor in the armory of the 1st Virginia Regiment, of this city. The session will be an open one. A moment later, General Lee, Governor of Virginia, entered. As he walked up the aisle he was greeted with enthusiastic cheers. The Governor then made a welcome speech of considerable length, to which Mr. Powderly responded.

In secret session some routine business was transacted and the convention adjourned until to-morrow morning.

[Since the convention of October last, which was held at Hamilton, Ont., the growth of the Order has been phenomenal At that convention the few hundred delegates in attendance represented some 4000 assemblies and some 150,000 members. To-day the assemblies number about 8500 and the membership between 900,000 and 1,000,000, and 1200 delegates have been elected to this convention. The question of reorganization is one that has been discussed by nearly every district assembly in the country. The district plan, for which so much was prophesied, has not proven a success. In many places districts have been formed within districts, and local strength has in consequence been much divided. There are so many district assemblies, moreover, that it is impossible for the General Executive Board to keep well up with its business. The principal plan of reorganization, that is to say the one which is favored by the Executive Board and a large number of the delegates, resembles the Government of the United States in that it provides for State organizations and a supreme or national assembly. Under this scheme the State assemblies would have full control of the territory under their jurisdiction, but the acts of their officers would be subject to reversal by the General Master Workman. Another element of the convention favors vesting in the Grand Master Workman the right of choosing the members of the General Executive Board precisely as the President of the United States selects the members of his cabinet; while still another element favors a permanent congress of Knights of Labor with headquarters in New York or Pittsburg. The convention will last a week or ten days at the shortest. The doings of the Home Club are pretty sure to be ventilated. Report has it that a resolution expelling the members will be submitted, and in this event turmoil will be certain. Steps will be taken for organizing the colored labor of the South. The present method of initiating boycotts and strikes will be fully considered, and it is possible that the "silent" boycott will take the place of the present system. Regarding strikes some change will undoubtedly be made. At present a strike of twenty-five people cannot be sanctioned without the consent of the General Executive Board, to obtain which occupies a great deal of time, and it is probable that this matter will in future be left to the district assemblies.

Over a Score of Lives Lost.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—A terrible explosion occurred on Saturday at Altoft's colliery, near Wakefield, Yorkshire. Seven men have been found dead. Eight have been rescued and 17 are missing. In all probability the missing 17 lost their lives.

A Modern Miracle.

In a recent letter from R. W. Dowton, of Deloraine, Ont., he states that he recovered from the worst form of Dyspepsia after suffering for fifteen years; and when a council of Doctors pronounced him incurable he tried Burdock Blood Bitters, six bottles of which restored his health. 2w40&d

In Good Repute

James McMurdock, writing from Kinsale; says "B. B. B. as a remedy for diseases of the blood, liver and kidneys, has an excellent reputation in this locality. I have used it, and speak from experience, as well as observation. It is the only medicine I want, and I advise others afflicted to try it." 2w40&d

Fatal Attacks.

Among the most prevalent fatal and sudden attacks of diseases, are those incident to the summer and fall, such as Cholera Morbus, Billious Colic, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, etc., that often prove fatal in a few hours. That ever reliable remedy Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, should be at hand for use in emergency. 2w40&d

In a Dangerous Condition.

Any man, woman or child is in a dangerous condition when neglecting a constipated state of the bowles. There can be no perfect health without a regular action of this function. Burdock Blood Bitters cure constipation by imparting a healthy tone to all the secretions. 2w40&d

The prisoner at the bar was charged with the murder of Mr. George Maulever, an Australian gentleman, who, having died very great wealth, later, had returned to England and taken up his residence at Great Lorton Hall in this county. The prisoner stood in the relationship of niece to Mr. Maulever and it was well known to his friends that it was that gentleman's intention to make her his sole heiress. Mr. Maulever was a man in somewhat delicate health. He suffered from a chronic complaint of the throat, and a few months before his death he had also been afflicted by a slight epileptic seizure, which occasioned some uneasiness to himself and his medical adviser. In all his illnesses it would be proved to the jury beyond dispute, the prisoner at the bar had been his chief, he might almost say his sole, attendant. She professed to be devoted to him, and there could be no doubt that Mr. Maulever entertained a sincere attachment for her. The jury, he trusted, would bear one fact in mind to which many witnesses would bear testimony. That was that the prisoner, on the occasions on which Mr. Maulever suffered from illness, invariably administered to him any medicine he might require with her own hands. In fact, it could be proved that the deceased had often alluded to her jokingly as his "best nurse and doctor in chief." He, Mr. Hawk, now wished to call their attention to a date of great importance, the evening of Tuesday, the 26th of October last. On that day Mr. Maulever was not very well. He dined at an earlier hour than usual—six o'clock—with the prisoner at the bar and with a lady named Cawthorne who was resident in the house in the capacity of companion to the prisoner. Nobody else was staying at the hall at the time except the servants, nor had Mr. Maulever seen any visitors for more than a fortnight. After dinner it would be proved that the prisoner at the bar read to the deceased for half an hour or more, and that she then played to him on the piano until about nine o'clock, at which time, complaining of fatigue, he expressed a desire to retire to rest. When he expressed this wish, the prisoner at the bar said she would go to his room first and ascertain that the fire was burning and everything in readiness for him. She left the apartment for a few minutes, ostensibly for this purpose, but in reality, as he suggested on the part of the prosecution to prepare the fatal dose of poison which was undoubtedly administered to the man very soon afterwards. At all events, she had an opportunity at that time, if she wished it, of possessing herself of this poison. Mr. Maulever in the meantime remained in the drawing room with Mrs. Cawthorne. It so happened, however, that a man a tenant who had been summoned for some trivial purpose remained in the room with the deceased and Mrs. Cawthorne during the prisoner's absence. This fact was not unimportant, as it would undoubtedly narrow the field of inquiry when they came to investigate the circumstances of the crime.

The prisoner returned to the drawing room, and told deceased that his room was in readiness. He thereupon said good-night to Mrs. Cawthorne, and turning to the prisoner said: "I suppose I shall see you by and by," evidently referring to the nightly visits which she paid him when he was unwell, for the purpose of administering to him any medicine that he might need. In the course of half an hour Mr. Maulever's valet, who had attended him while he was preparing for rest, informed the prisoner, who had in the mean time been sitting in the drawing room with Mrs. Cawthorne, that his master was ready to see her, and she at once went up to his room.

"Now, gentlemen," continued Hawk, speaking in more solemn tones than he had hitherto used, "we cannot tell you what happened during the interview. The prisoner alone survives it. What we do know is that she remained for a quarter of an hour in the apartment of the deceased. Her own account of the way in which she spent that interval was given, after she had been duly cautioned, to the officer of the law by whom she was arrested. According to her statement she read a chapter of the Bible as her custom was, to the deceased. She then gave him a powder of a kind which he was in the habit of taking at times. It was a powder of bromide of potassium, a medicine which, as you are probably aware, gentlemen of the jury, is frequently used for patients of an epileptic tendency. He took the medicine, she says, quite readily, made no remark on taking it, and, saying he was sleepy, bade the prisoner good-night. She at once left the room, and presently she herself retired to rest."

The next piece of evidence to which Hawk called attention was a somewhat remarkable one. About half-past eleven o'clock, or an hour and a half after the prisoner had left the deceased, one of the younger house-maids of the hall, who was passing along a corridor not far from the room occupied by Mr. Maulever, heard, as she declares, a sharp cry of pain. Unfortunately the girl, instead of ascertaining the cause of the cry, fled hastily to the servants' hall. Her account of her conduct was that "she believed she had heard a ghost." It appeared that popular tradition declared Great Lorton Hall to be haunted, and as a consequence the servants were continual y imagining that in certain parts of the house they heard various superhuman sounds. Mr. Maulever'er's room, as it happened, was somewhat remote from the other sleeping apartments which were occupied that night. The girl never thought that it could have been from her master that the cry of agony proceeded, and so the unfortunate man was left to struggle alone with death—to which he too soon fell a victim.

The next morning, at the usual hour the valet of the deceased, John Green by name, went into his master's bedroom. He immediately saw that something dreadful had happened. The bedclothes were in great disorder, as though the deceased had been struggling violently. On looking more closely at him Green saw that Mr. Maulever was quite dead. He was lying with his face buried in one of the pillows, and he had apparently died in convulsions. In one of his hands was clutched a bed curtain, which in his agony he seemed to have torn from its

CAPTAIN WILLIAM SLATER, No. 37 Granville Street, Halifax, N.S.
N. WASHINGTON, M. D., Throat and Lung Specialist, Toronto.
DEAR SIR,—When you visited me in the latter part of January of this year I had been given up to die of consumption by a consultation of Physicians, Drs. Reid and Oliver, prominent physicians of Halifax who considered that my recovery was simply impossible. I had no hope myself, nor had my family. When you appeared a hope of my recovery was received with a doubt. Continued to my bed, very low, weak wasted, night sweats very bad, troublesome cough, raising large quantities of matter—in fact every appearance of a speedy death. After using your Respirator and Inhaler and medicine I began to recover very fast, so much so that during three hard winter months I have gained from 32 to 38 lbs., and was able to walk out on Easter Sunday. My strength is daily increasing, and I shall be able soon to be at work. To you I owe a debt of gratitude, and am anxious for others who are suffering as I was to consult you. You can make what use of this letter you see fit, and thanking you for what I consider a most wonderful treatment,
I remain, yours truly,
CAPT. WM. SLATER.

Monster Male Choir.

While parading last night the members of the 57th Battalion joined in singing "The Swanee River," with fine effect. The choir was composed of over two hundred voices, varying from the highest howling tenor to the deepest rolling bass.

Peterborough Vocalists Abroad

Mrs. J. R. McIntyre and Mr. Thomas Dunn, of town, were the leading vocalists at a grand concert given in Madoc last week by the North Hastings Agricultural Society. Their singing was highly appreciated, and both received a double encore.

New Millinery, New Mantles New Dress Goods to match in all the popular Shades made up on short notice, in Styles that suit every body, at Turnbull's.

Meeting of Two Forces.

On Monday night when the 57th Rangers were on their march-out, they encountered the Salvation Army forces at Hunter street. The band played, the drums boomed, the Salvation soldiers sang, the little boys cheered, the streets echoed, and we left.

Port Hope's Enterprise.

Port Hope has a little ambition left. A "Manufactories Committee" has resolved that it is desirable to assist the Bellawney Company, by way of bonus and building, to establish a horse shoe factory in that town. There's luck in horse shoes, and we wish our sister town all the good luck the omen implies.

Resurrection Plant.

An interesting plant of a curious nature, known as the West India Resurrection plant, will be exhibited at the Peterborough Central by Mrs. D. Baillie, of town. It is a small bulb, and when placed in water expands to the size of that of a moderately developed pumpkin.

Fire in a Show Window.

A small blaze occurred in the show window of Mr. O. C. Rowse's Trade Palace on Monday evening, about six o'clock. Some drapery came in contact with the gas light and igniting flared up brightly. The fire was extinguished with little loss. Mr. R. Sanderson, clerk, in putting out the flames had his hands severely burnt, while Mr. Tate had the tips of his fingers scorched.

Good reliable Goods for Little Money keeps Turnbull's Electric Cash Railway (the only one in this part of the Province) in constant operation. See it at the Electric Light Millinery Opening on Wednesday and Thursday Evenings.

"Cast Adrift."

Baird's Dramatic Company opened a week's engagement in the Opera House on Monday night, in the charming play "Cast Adrift," which was substituted for "The Banker's Daughter." Owing to several other attractions the house was not crowded. The performance throughout was excellent and thoroughly delighted the audience, from those in the foremost seats to the immortals in the gallery. Every member of the company sustained his or her part in a creditable manner. The performance was concluded by the side-splitting farce "Smith and Brown." "The New Cathleen" will be presented to-night.

The "Irish Struggle."

We have received from Mr. Gibbs, the local agent, our copy of the "Irish Struggle," an interesting volume written by T. P. O'Connor, M.P., assisted by Mr. McWade, a member of the Executive Committee of the National League. It contains an introduction written by Charles Stewart Parnell, and an introduction to the Canadian public by Rev. Dr. Burns, of Hamilton. The work gives interesting details of the history of the oppressions and sufferings the Irish have endured and of their struggle for their rights of local self-government, bringing the narrative down to the exciting present. The work is powerfully written and cannot fail to be read with the deepest interest.

What True Merit Will Do.

The unprecedented sale of Boschee's German Syrup within a few years has astonished the world. It is without doubt the safest and best remedy ever discovered for the speedy and effectual cure of Coughs, Colds and the severest Lung troubles. It acts on an entirely different principle from the usual prescriptions given by physicians, as it does not dry up a cough and leave the disease still in the system, but on the contrary removes the cause of the trouble, heals the parts affected, and leaves them in a purely healthy condition. A bottle kept in the house for use when the diseases make their appearance, will save doctor's bills and a long spell of serious illness. A trial will convince you of these facts. It is positively sold by all druggists and general dealers in the land. Price 75c., large bottles.

Battalion March-Out.

The First Public Parade of the 57th Peterborough Rangers—A Grand Military Sight by Electric Light.

The whirling rattle of the bugle calling the members of the 57th Peterborough Rangers to meet for a public march-out, caused a flutter of excitement throughout the town on Monday night, and thousands of eager spectators thronged the streets, intent on seeing the gallant men of battalion march through the mud. The utmost excitement prevailed among the military men, and red coats from every direction hurried to the drill shed, where the lines were formed. Shortly before eight o'clock the band, attired in the battalion uniform, followed by the six companies in their numerical order, left the shed, under command of Lieut.-Col. J. Z. Rogers, who was mounted on a gallant charger procured for the occasion. Major Grover and Major Dr. Bell, who assisted in marshalling the lines, were also mounted. The captains and lieutenants of the several companies marched by the sides of their men. With stately step, Drum Major Graham walked ahead of the band, leading the grand company, which marched down George street, four deep, to the music of "The British Grenadiers." The whole battalion walked as one man—even the horses of the officers kept time to the music, waltzing along at a side-way gait—and presented a splendid appearance as the long line of red coats passed along the electric lit streets. The gallant bearing of the boys was universally admired, and it would be hard to say who were the favorites. The line of march extended down George street, up Charlotte street and Aylmer to Hunter street, and over to the hill at Ashburnham and return, with a [illegible] around town and then to the [illegible], where the men were dismissed.

The Lieutenant-Governor.

He Will Arrive at 11.30 by the C. P. R. Express From Toronto.

The following telegram from the Lieut.-Governor's private secretary was to-day received by Mayor Stevenson:—

"Governor just returned. Will go from here direct to Peterborough to-morrow morning. Will arrive on 11.30 C. P. R. train."

His Honor will remain over night and will depart for the back lakes in the morning.

Personal.

Mr. Jas. Bathgate, of Ashland, Maine, formerly of Peterborough, is in town visiting friends.

Local Oddfellows will learn with deep regret of the bereavement sustained by Dr. Col. T. Campbell, of London, Grand Lodge representative to the Sovereign Grand Lodge, by the sudden death of his wife, which took place in London on Saturday. The Peterborough representatives who enjoyed Mrs. Campbell's graceful hospitality during the sittings of the Grand Lodge, will have their sympathies especially moved.

Annual Tea Meeting.

The Town Hall Ashburnham, on Monday evening was the scene of a gay and happy gathering of the congregation of the Mark Street Methodist Church, and friends, on the occasion of their annual tea meeting. The festivities began at five o'clock and continued till eight, during which time badreds visited the well spread tables and assisted in disposing of the many good things provided in great abundance by the ladies. After the wants of the inner man had been satisfactorily satisfied, an adjournment was made to the church. Mr. Thos. Armstrong, was elected to the chair, and after briefly expressing the pleasure he had in presiding over the joyous gathering, he called on Rev. F. H. Wallace, B. D., Rev. G. F. Copeland, of Cobourg, and Rev. I. Tovell, who delivered interesting and encouraging addresses, and also complimented the people of the church on the good work they were doing. Rev. J. C. Wilson, pastor of the congregation also delivered a short and happy address. The choir gave a number of fine musical selections which were thoroughly enjoyed and appreciated. It was announced that owing to a superabundance of refreshments a childrens social would be held in the Town Hall this evening to dispose of the edibles, when the meeting was dismissed with the doxology and benediction.

Free Trade.

The reduction of internal revenue and the taking off of revenue stamps from Proprietary Medicines, no doubt has largely benefitted the consumers, as well as relieving the burden of home manufacturers. Especially is this the case with Green's August Flower and Boschee's German Syrup, as the reduction of thirty-six cents per dozen has been added to increase the size of the bottles containing these remedies, thereby giving one-fifth more medicine in the 75 cent size. The August Flower for Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint, and the German Syrup for Cough and Lung troubles have, perhaps, the largest sale of any medicines in the world. The advantage of increased size of the bottles will be greatly appreciated by the sick and afflicted, in every town and village in civilized countries. Sample bottles for 10c. remain in the same size.

Immense attractions in Turnbull's Millinery and Mantle Show Rooms. Everybody pleased. Those who have not seen the Magnificent Display should call on Wednesday and Thursday Evenings during the Electric Light Opening.

Uncermonial Separation.

As a farmer was driving down George street this morning with a load of roots, grains, etc., for the Central Exhibition, he guided his horse rather close to the sidewalk. In front of Mr. J. C. Craig's shop the front wheels of the vehicle collided with the street crossing at that point, where it is several inches higher than the road-bed. The harness creaked, the tugs snapped, the horse walked on, and the driver was hauled unceremoniously from his seat and almost over the front of the waggon before he brought the animal to a standstill. In a few minutes the breakage was repaired, and the equipage proceeded to the agricultural grounds.

A Forthcoming Foot Race.

The EXAMINER is informed that a foot race will take place on the cinder track on the P. A. A. A. grounds, Ashburnham, on Thursday, October 14th, between T. B. Robson and A. W. Elliot for a purse of $50 a side. Mr. A. Elliott is stakeholder and Mr. J. J. Daly referee.

RUSSIA'S ULTIMATUM.

BULGARIA MUST HEED THE CZAR'S DEMANDS OR SUFFER.

SOFIA, Oct. 5.—The note presented to the Bulgarian Government by Gen. Kaulbars before his departure from Sofia was in effect as follows: "The Imperial Government desires the release of all persons arrested in connection with the deposition of Prince Alexander. It also desires that the elections be postponed until November. The consequences of refusal to comply with Russia's wishes will fall upon those actually governing Bulgaria."

It is stated that Gen. Kaulbars has received half a million francs to devote to furthering the agitation in Bulgaria.

The Fremdenblatt Speaks.

VIENNA, Oct. 5.—The Fremdenblatt says: "The Bulgarian regency has skilfully maintained order in Bulgaria. In trying to consider the wishes of the powers, while acting in accord with the law, the regents may bear the attendant responsibility without disquiet. Gen. Kaulbars' conduct at the Voultchoed meeting in Sofia and his projected journey through Bulgaria and Roumelia are not calculated to promote conciliation. Diplomatic representatives are always accredited to the governments and not to the masses. Every government must regard open dealings of foreign envoys with a mob as violations of its authority. Regret will be felt at St. Petersburg, as elsewhere, at a course of conduct which must weaken Russia's just and moral influence in Bulgaria. If Russia desires to succeed her agents must become better acquainted with the Berlin treaty. Gen Kaulbars appears to care very little for the fundamental principles underlying the treaty."

What Russia Expects of Bulgaria.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 5.—The Journal de St Petersburg commenting on the British foreign policy outlined by Lord Randolph Churchill in his Dartford speech last Saturday says:

"Lord Randolph Churchill's speech may encourage the Irish and Hindoos, or if English solicitude for oppressed peoples is only angelic for export, it may be an advantage in Egypt. England's present interest in the union of the two Bulgarias is a strange commentary on Lord Beaconsfield's action in cutting the principality in two. Greece will think England's tenderness towards the Balkan States must be intermittent and not general. The Sultan will find difficulty in reconciling Lord Randolph Churchill's policy with Tory solicitude for the integrity of Turkey. Lord Randolph Churchill's distinction between the peaceable and aggressive powers is very original. What power a year ago provoked revolution and war in the Bulkans? Which power stifled the germs of a conflagration?"

England having resolved to maintain the entente cordiale, and to peacefully settle all the international difficulties, the Journal hopes she will second Russia's efforts in Bulgaria, which have the same object, especially at this critical moment, when everything is upside down, and when the country is under the regime of coup d'etats and the revolutionary adventurers who have for many years demoralized it.

VOLCANOES AND EARTHQUAKES.

One of the Friendly Islands Submerged—Earthquake in Scotland—Warm Weather.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Oct. 5.—A volcanic eruption has occurred on the Island of Naipu, one of the Toga groups of the Friendly Islands. Naipu has a population of about 500. A steamer has been despatched to ascertain the condition of the people. The earthquake destroyed every village on the island. The inhabitants escaped. The island is covered twenty feet deep with volcanic dust, and at one place a new hill 200 feet high has been formed.

Shocks and the Weather.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—Two shocks of earthquake were felt throughout Baltz, one of the Shetland Islands, last night.

The temperature in London to-day has been abnormally high. The thermometer registered 80 degrees in the shade this afternoon. Never before during the past forty-six years has the temperature of the city been so warm at any time during the month of October. Warm weather prevails all over the continent. The Paris theatres are described as veritable furnaces and the attendance was said to be very limited in consequence.

Investigating the Fisheries.

BOSTON, Oct. 5.—The sub-committee of the United States Senate Fishery Committee examined several witnesses at Gloucester yesterday. Capt. Joyce of the steamer Novelty testified to his experience with Canadian officials in North Bay this season. He was not allowed to purchase coal at Pictou. Captains Lewis and Chisholm, who were in the bay during the summer, relate their grievances, but spoke highly of the officers of Canadian cruisers who, they said, had treated them well. Among other witnesses examined were several vessel owners, who testified as to the importance of the fishing industry. Capt. Joyce of the steamer Novelty gave his testimony and immediately thereafter sailed for the fishing grounds. Capt. Pendleton in giving his testimony said: "When the United States was in her swaddling clothes she was aggressive, but since she has become one of the greatest nations on earth anybody can kick her and she will never resent it." The committee starts on a tour of various fishing establishments this morning to obtain information regarding the fisheries.

A SEIZURE OF CATTLE.

Montana Live Stock Caught Trespassing at Fort MacLeod.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 5.—Particulars of a curious seizure of Montana cattle for alleged non-payment of duty have been received. Twelve days ago the Northern Montana Cattle Company started a herd of 1600 cattle from Fort Benton with the intention of driving them across the international boundary to Medicine Hat on the Canadian Pacific Railway, and shipping them thence eastward to Chicago via St. Paul. The necessary papers were made out, showing the herd to be in transit and in charge of the company's agent accompanying the herd. After crossing the boundary a severe storm came on and the cattle bolted for the MacLeod district. On reaching Leith Bridge the customs officer seized the entire herd and placed mounted policemen in charge, although he was shown the proper papers, showing the herd to be in transit. After detaining them several days he agreed to accept the cattle company's bond for $50,000 and allowed the cattle to be shipped. It is understood his action will be investigated.

A PROCUREUR AT WORK.

An Attempt to Lure Two Young French Canadians from Their Homes.

MONTREAL, Oct. 5.—A well-dressed young woman giving the name of Emma Bonnin, wife of John Girdlestone, and residing at Portland, Maine, was charged before the police authorities to-day with enticing two young girls from their homes for immoral purposes. It appears that the woman entered a cab last night shortly after 8 o'clock and asked the driver to convey her to the home of any young French Canadian girl who would consent to accompany her to Portland to do work in a private family. A few moments after they came across Clara Richer and prevailed upon her to leave home immediately and bring one of her friends named Philomene Duras along with her. They were promised lucrative situations in private families and $3.50 wages per week. Constable Bureau had obtained information of the affair, however, and traced the woman and her two alleged dupes to Bonaventure station, where, aided by Detective Lapointe, he placed them under arrest.

A DAY FOR CUTTERS.

The English Craft Stranger Beats the Thetis in Their Second Race.

MARBLEHEAD, Mass., Oct. 5.—This proved to be a cutter day, and the Stranger won. In the early morning a strong northeast wind prevailed. Both yachts crossed the starting line together at 11.23 with all sails set. The Stranger quickly passed the Thetis, but her lead was only temporary, for at 11.26 the Thetis crossed her bow and took the lead. At 11.45 the Stranger was doing fine work and was gaining. A few moments later the English cutter again passed the Thetis and was not again overtaken during the race. The Stranger crossed the line at 4.50, her actual time being 5 hours 26 minutes. The Thetis did not finish, being fully two miles behind her rival. The third and final race of the series and possibly of the season will take place to-morrow, wind and weather permitting.

The Hardship of Hathaway.

OTTAWA, Oct. 5.—In 1882 George Hathaway, formerly of New Brunswick and a British subject, located at Big Horn City, Wyo., and started in business. A deserter named Heath was wanted by the commander of the fort at that point and owing to a striking resemblance between Heath and Hathaway the latter was arrested and thrust into prison, where, as he alleges, he was treated in a most cruel manner by the commanding officer, who hoped to force a full confession. Hathaway did all in his power to establish his innocence, but without avail. He was subsequently released, the officer who caused his arrest awaking to the fact that he had made a serious mistake. Hathaway's business was ruined, and he had lost everything. He vainly sought redress at Washington, and now the Dominion Government has taken it in hand and will make it an international question.

An Alleged Murderer Lynched.

STEELEVILLE, Mo., Oct. 5.—R. P. Wallace, murderer of the Logan family of five persons, father, mother and three children, was taken from jail last night by a mob and lynched. One hundred masked men gathered around the jail and demanded entrance. This was refused and the mob battered down the doors. Wallace was awakened from his sleep, dragged out to the infuriated crowd and asked if he had anything to say. He strongly protested his innocence. This enraged the mob more than ever, and with a shout they strung him up to a tree near the jail. The prisoner still protested his innocence and appealed for mercy but without avail.

The Atlantic Mail Service.

MONTREAL, Oct. 5.—It is stated that Sir Geo. Stephen is going to England shortly to confer with the Imperial Government in connection with the proposed line of Atlantic steamers to be run in connection with the Canadian Pacific Railway, and the question of mail route to the west. It is also stated that the Canadian Pacific have tendered for the Dominion Atlantic mail service.

Montreal's Winter Carnival.

MONTREAL, Oct. 5.—The general managers of all the railway companies of Canada and the United States met here to-day in conference with the Executive Committee of the winter carnival. After discussing about special rates Mayor Beaugrand invited the party to a drive around the mountain. They were entertained at dinner by the Executive Committee to-night at the Windsor Hotel.

Resignation of Col. Ross.

OTTAWA, Oct. 5.—The resignation of Lieut.-Col. Ross from the command of the Governor-General's Foot Guards has been handed in and the appointment of Major J. C. Macpherson as his successor is expected to be Gazetted shortly. Col. Ross has been in command of the corps since its organization in 1872 and now retires on account of having passed the age limit for active service.

The Athabasca Safe.

OWEN SOUND, Ont., Oct. 5.—There is no truth in the report that the large C.P.R. iron steamer Athabasca was lost on Lake Superior last Sunday. The Athabasca arrived here Monday morning a few hours late and all safe. She experienced very heavy weather on Lake Superior.

THE K. OF L. CONVENTION.

Presentation to Grand Master Workman Powderly.

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 5.—General Worthy Foreman Griffith called the second session of the Knights of Labor Convention to order at 9 o'clock this morning in the absence of Mr. Powderly, who was detained at his hotel by business. It was announced that the Committee on Credentials was not ready to report, and nothing could be done until their report was received. While waiting several speeches were made by delegates.

Shortly after 10 o'clock Mr. Powderly arrived and was presented by Brother O'Donnell with a gavel made from the wood of an orange tree, that grew on the spot where Gen. Packenham was killed, at the Battle of New Orleans. The presentation was made on behalf of the New Orleans Knights.

It was learned that the Committee on Credentials could not be ready to report until 2 o'clock. The convention adjourned until that hour.

Before the delegates left the hall Mr. Powderly strongly urged them to avoid the use of strong drink while in Richmond. As individuals, he said, he had no right to dictate as to what they should do, but they were not here as individuals, but as representatives of a vast constituency. The eyes of the world were upon them while here, and that constituency would be judged by their conduct.

The Knights went into session again this afternoon at 3 o'clock. The report of the Committee on Credentials was then ready. It was very long and Secretary Turner said would take four hours to read.

LOCAL NEWS.

Presentation to Mr. Seward.

On Tuesday evening the choir of St John's church assembled at the residence of Mr. Seward, the efficient and popular organist of the church, and presented him with a handsome easy chair. Mr. A. P. Pousette, Q.C., on behalf of the choir, expressed to Mr. Seward the high esteem in which he was held by them, although he had been with them only a short time, and hoped that the relations so pleasant and profitable to the choir would be equally so to him, and that they might be long continued. Mr. Seward replied in telling terms, thanking the choir for their generous gift, kind expressions, and well wishes. The evening was spent in a most social manner, Mr. and Mrs. Seward hospitably entertaining their unexpected guest.

Attention!

We would call attention to the offer made by Joseph Griffin that during the next thirty days he will sell the whole of his summer stock of boots and shoes at cost. A few lines will actually be sold below cost. Look at the following quotations:—

Women's Pebble Oxford Shoes,		70c.
"	buff do do	80
"	pebble—tie or buttoned	90
"	India kid shoe	$1.00
"	patent Oxford	1.20
"	polished calf tie shoe	1.25
"	do do Oxford	1.25
"	do do buttoned	1.35

All the above goods are solid leather. All other goods will be sold equally cheap. Now is the time to secure bargains.

Make Way for the Crowd.

Tremendous bargains in dry goods, groceries, and boots and shoes are now waiting for the people to seize them. The immense stock of the Bon Marche in these lines must be cleared out at once. Unheard of bargains will be given as the goods must be sold. Don't miss this chance. All the goods are first-class. The stock must be cleared out. Don't neglect the great Bon Barche.

Dislocation.

Mr. J. Jaques, organist of the George street Methodist Church, on Tuesday afternoon in crossing George street, had the misfortune to severely dislocate his left ankle. He stepped hurriedly from the sidewalk in front of the G. N. W. Telegraph Company's office and in doing so turned his foot under him, causing the dislocation. Dr. Fife attended to his injuries.

The New Kathleen.

The above thrilling drama was presented in the Opera House last night by Baird's Dramatic Company, to a large and delighted audience. The performance was excellent throughout and was fully appreciated. "Uncle Josh," one of the most comical American plays, will be placed on the boards to-night, in the best form.

Board of Education.

Regular Meeting—Vacancies to be Filled Mr. Seward's Class

The regular meeting of the Peterborough Board of Education was held in the Board rooms on Tuesday evening. There were present, Mr. Jas. Stevenson in the chair, and Messrs. Dumble, Scott, Bawtz, Sawers, Weir, Frighton, Dr. Burnham, Rutherford and Stratton. After routine the usual reports of attendance of public and high schools were presented. An account from the Times Printing Company for $18.25, was referred to the Finance Committee. The matter of appointing a teacher to take the place of Mr. Earle during his illness, was considered, and the Committee on Appointments was instructed to procure a supply. The Committee on Appointments reported the appointment of Miss Greenwood to the High School staff. The chairman of the School Supervision Committee stated that the Government regulations were about complied with. The necessary chemical and science appliances had been procured, as were also the maps and necessary books for the library. The chairman of the Property Committee reported that the necessary repairs and alterations in the schools had been completed, at a cost of $673.51. Permission was asked by Mr. Seward for leave to copy a school room after school hours for the purpose of instructing the pupils in vocal music. The request was granted. The Board then adjourned.

Stoves that are Stoves.

A Splendid Exhibit of High Art Stoves of all Kinds at the "Giant T."

Visitors to the exhibition and the housekeepers of Peterborough and vicinity will do well to call upon Mr. Adam Hall at the "Giant T.," where will be found the largest and finest stoves on exhibition ever shown in town. The stock comprises all the best makes in the market. In high art, parlour and parlour oven base burners will be found the "Radiant Home," "Art Brilliant" "Art Garland" and "Patrician" which for beauty of design and for heating and cooking qualities cannot be beaten. In base burner heating stoves the "Athenian," "Victory" "Crown Jewel" and "Splendid" are without doubt the handsomest and best goods in the market. In coal heating stoves, the "Alaska" for stores, churches and offices cannot be excelled. In cook stoves, coal and wood ranges, the "Grand Duchess," "Jewell" and "Saratoga" take the lead. In wood cooks the "Original" is the largest and handsomest stove made, is shown, while "Iron Crown," "Northwest," and all the best makes will be found in stock. In addition to these Mr. Hall has on hand a full line of wrought iron ranges for family, hotel and shanty use, all of his own make, and the best procurable. Parties requiring anything in the stove line cannot do better than call at the "Giant T," George Street, where the best goods can be purchased at the lowest prices.

Curling and Skating.

The Annual Meeting of the Directors and Shareholders of the Peterborough Curling and Skating Rink.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Skating and Curling Company was held in the rink on Tuesday evening. The chair was occupied by President Ferguson, and there were in attendance the directors of the company and a number of the shareholders. After the usual preliminaries the Secretary presented the annual report and financial statement, which, although it showed a falling off in the receipts from both curling and skating, showed the affairs of the company to be in a satisfactory condition. Messrs. W. G. Ferguson, C. McGill, R. S. Davidson, Dr. Boucher and Adam Hall were re-elected directors, and at a subsequent meeting of the directors, Mr. W. G. Ferguson was appointed President, and Mr. C. McGill Secretary for the ensuing year. There is every prospect of a prosperous season, and the directors feel sanguine of wiping out the debt which now inconveniences the company.

* * Eight hundred and sixty four was the number of people who paid to witness the performance of that time-worn but always popular drama, Uncle Tom's Cabin, by the well-known Abbey's Double Mammoth Company at the Academy of Music last evening. * * The introduction of the two Topseys and two Lawyers at first strikes the casual observation as rather incongruous; but the novelty is admirably handled, and the dialogue is arranged to suit the situation. * * The magnificent singing of the South Carolina Jubilee Singers, the æsthetic actions of the trick donkey, the wonderful intelligence exhibited by Eva's Shetland Pony, and the marvellous performance of the trained Russian bloodhounds, were alone well worth the price of admission.

What True Merit Will Do.

The unprecedented sale of Boschee's German Syrup within a few years has astonished the world. It is without doubt the safest and best remedy ever discovered for the speedy and effectual cure of Coughs, Colds and the severest Lung troubles It acts on an entirely different principle from the usual prescriptions given by physicians, as it does not dry up a cough and leave the disease still in the system, but on the contrary removes the cause of the trouble, heals the parts affected, and leaves them in a purely healthy condition. A bottle kept in the house for use when the diseases make their appearance, will save doctor's bills and a long spell of serious illness. A trial will convince you of these facts. It is positively sold by all druggists and general dealers in the land. Price 75c., large bottles. eodw41

Accident at Hilliard's Mill.

On Tuesday a serious accident occurred at Hilliard's mill by which a young man named Alexander Cooper lost his right arm. He had only began work in the morning and being unaccustomed to the surroundings, slipped in a small hole and fell forward, and in attempting to save himself, threw forward his right arm which was caught by a circular saw and taken off near the elbow. Dr. Pigeon was telephoned for, and on arriving, temporarily attended to the sufferer's injuries. He was then taken to the Nicholls hospital, where Dr. Pigeon, assisted by Dr. Boucher, amputated the arm above the elbow. He is doing well. Cooper is a graduate of the Peterborough Business College and was formerly on the Times staff. His parents reside in Grey county.

All the evidence that could be obtained pointed to the conclusion that this poison must have been administered somewhere about the time when the prisoner last saw the unfortunate man. How could it have been administered? The answer to that question was clear. Two persons only had access to Mr. Maulever about the time when he unquestionably took the fatal dose. One of these was Green, the valet, and the other was the prisoner at the bar. Now, in Green's favor certain facts could at once be alleged. One of these was that he had never been in the habit of administering drugs to the deceased, and any attempt he might make to do so could hardly have failed to arouse Mr. Maulever's suspicions. The prisoner, on the other hand, constantly mixed and gave him his medicine. Next, all their inquiries pointed to the conclusion that Green had absolutely nothing to gain by Mr. Maulever's death. The prisoner, on the contrary, as he should show them presently, had everything to gain by it, provided it took place within a certain period of time. Lastly all inquiries which had been made led to the belief that Green had not been in the possession of any poison at the time when the murder was committed. The prisoner, it would be conclusively proved, did possess poison, and poison exactly similar to that found in the body of Mr. Maulever, a few days before the death of that gentleman.

Surely in these circumstances it was clear that, inasmuch as, according to all known laws, either Green or the prisoner at the bar had given the fatal dose to the deceased, it was the latter whom they had the best reason to suspect. But the law mercifully demanded in cases of this kind that some motive should be shown, some reason which was likely to have led the accused person to resort to a desperate crime. He was sorry to say that there would be no difficulty in meeting this requirement of the law on the present occasion. He would bring forward evidence to show that a violent quarrel had taken place between the deceased and the prisoner at the bar shortly before the date of the murder. The quarrel was due to a love affair between the prisoner and a gentleman of whom Mr. Maulever did not approve as a per tender to the hand of his niece. There had been painful scenes between Mr. Maulever and the prisoner, and witnesses, who were strongly prejudiced in favor of the latter, would give evidence showing that there was in reality a very bitter feeling on her part with regard to the ill-usage which she conceived she had received from her uncle. This was not all, however. It would be shown that Mr. Maulever, having executed a will by which all his vast wealth passed unreservedly to the prisoner, had within a week or two of his death given instructions for the preparation of a second will, under which, in the event of her marrying the gentleman referred to, she would receive only a comparatively small legacy, whilst the rest of his estate would be devoted to charitable purposes. This will had not been signed at the time of Mr Maulever's death, in consequence of the temporary absence from England of his usual legal adviser, by whom it had been prepared. But the prisoner at the bar knew of its existence, and knew further that it would be duly executed as soon as the attorney returned from abroad. Here, then, they had what all must feel to be a strong motive for the commission of this crime. He did not wish to press hardly upon the prisoner, whose youth and good looks were well calculated to prepossess most persons in her favor. But the jury had a duty to d scharge, and it could not see how, after hearing the evidence which he was about to lay before them, and which would bear out the statement he had just made to the fullest extent, they could find any other verdict than that the prisoner at the bar was, in very truth, guilty of having wi fully murdered Mr. George Maulever on the night of October 24.

I had nerved myself to listen to this terrible indictment of my darling without showing by any outward sign the effect which it might have upon me; and up to this certain point I had done so successfully. But when the counsel spoke of the quarrels between Daisy and her uncle regarding myself, I had found it impossible to retain my composure. My agitation must have been made more visible when I heard of the unsigned will by which she was to be pun shed if she married me. No mention had been made of this document in the examination before the magistrate, and I was quite ignorant of its existence. When Hawk spoke of it I started visibly and looked at Daisy. Her face gave not the slightest sign of emotion, and I knew th n that the prosecuting counsel had reason for his declaration that Daisy was aware of the existence of the document. But if that were the case, how was it that the fact had only been publicly brought to light now? Alas! I remembered that now Brankscme and Fordyke could no longer be reckoned on our side. It must have been by Fordyke that this fatal piece of evidence had been revealed.

I looked eagerly to where Belmore and Harding sat together, anxious to judge if I could from their faces what effect Hawk's statement had made upon them. Harding was very grave, and even gloomy. Belmore, on the other hand, preserved the tranquil and confident air which had inspired me with hope when I first saw him.

CHAPTER XIII.
THE VERDICT.

It is not necessary to weary my readers with the whole of the evidence which was given in support of Hawk's statement. The counsel for the crown had recapitulated the facts only too faithfully, and all that he had told the jury was borne out by the witnesses.

The first to be examined was Green, the valet, who told the story of how he had assisted Mr. Maulever to undress, and had seen him get into bed on the night of the murder. In the course of cross-examination he swore that deceased, though apparently somewhat weak, was cheerful and composed when he left him. He was then questioned as follows by Belmore:

"Did you see any medicine or any bottle that might have contained medicine of any kind near his bed when you left him?" "No."

"Was any medicine sent in his room for you to prepare, that night? "On the table in the dressing room there was a box containing the powders which he occasionally took."

"Nothing else—no bottle, or powder of any kind?" "Certainly not."

Mr. Hawk, Q.C., here said that the prosecution produced the box of powders, and that evidence would be given regarding it.

Cross-examinat on continued: "You have described the condition of Mr. Maulever and of his bed when you entered his room next morning. Did anything else in the apartment attract your attention?" "No; everything was as I had left it on the previous night."

"Was there a table near the bed?" "Yes; there was one within reach of my master's hand."

"What was put in which you left him at night?" "A carafe of the Bible and a bottle of water with a glass."

"What did you find there in the morning?" "The Bible and the water bottle and glass."

CAPTAIN WILLIAM SLATER, No. 37 Granville Street, Halifax, N.S.
N. WASHINGTON, M. D., Throat and Lung Specialist, Toronto.
DEAR SIR,—When you visited me in the latter part of January of this year I had been given up to die of consumption by a consultation of Physicians, Drs. Reid and Oliver, prominent physicians of Halifax who considered that my recovery was simply impossible. I had no hope myself, nor had my family. When you first used a bone of my recovery it was received with a doubt. Confined to my bed, very low, weak wasted, night sweats, very bad troublesome cough, raising large quantities of matter—in fact every ap earance of a speedy death. After using your Respirator and Spirometer and medicine I began to recover very fast, so much so that during three hard winter months I have gained from 32 to 35 lbs., and was able to walk out on Easter Sunday. My strength is daily increasing, and I shall be able soon to be at work. To you I owe a debt of gratitude, and am anxious for others who are suffering as I was to consult you. You can make what use of this letter you see fit, and thanking you for what I consider a most wonderful treatment.
I remain, yours truly,
CAPT. WM. SLATER.

PETERBOROUGH CENTRAL.

THE SECOND DAY A SIGNAL SUCCESS.

Arrival of His Honour Lieut. Governor Robinson.

His Enthusiastic Reception—Banquet at the Oriental—Formal Opening of the Exhibition—Immense Attendance of Visitors—The Central Now in Full Swing.

The second day of the Peterborough Central Exhibition opened with magnificent weather. On the grounds everything was activity. The cattle and horses and other stock coming in, and late exhibitors in other departments were rushing their articles and setting them in place. Up to noon there were comparatively few visitors.

Early this morning people began to arrive in town from all points, walking and driving, while every train brought in hundreds o new arrivals.

All the schools, high and public, were dismissed at eleven o'clock, and over a thousand of the enthusiastic youth and hope of the country swelled the crowd on the streets.

Many of our business men had

DECORATED THEIR PREMISES

in honor of the occasion. Among those were those of Gough, the Wonderful Cheap Man, E. A. Peck, Thos. Kelly, Fairweather & Co., F. Hall, C. B. Boutley, Habillment Hall, The Golden Lion, Geo. W. Rubidge, John Erskine, John McClelland, T. Dolan & Co., W. W. Johnson and J. J. Sheehy. About eleven o'clock the STREETS WERE CROWDED

with pedestrians, arrayed in holiday attire, the majority of whom wended their way toward the C. P. R. station, evidently intent on assisting in the reception to be given to the Lieutenant-Governor on his arrival in town. Long before the train arrived hundreds of citizens, and as many more visitors from the surrounding country collected at the station, where on the tip-toe of expectancy they awaited the arrival of the Lieutenant-Governor and his party. The cab-stands were occupied by the carriages of the joint reception committees of the town and the Agricultural Society Directors, while the 57th Battalion Band, and the cavalry escort party, twenty strong, under command of Col. H. C. Rogers, and Capt. B. Morrow, were in waiting. When the whistle of the approaching train was heard, there was a rush for positions, and it was with difficulty that necessary platform accommodation was maintained. As the train rolled into the station the band struck up and as His Honor and party alighted, they were greeted with enthusiastic cheers.

"GOD SAVE THE QUEEN,"

HON. JOHN BEVERLEY ROBINSON, LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR OF ONTARIO.

The vice-regal party, which consisted of the Lieutenant Governor, Captain and Mrs. Forsyth Grant, Miss Tully, and Captain Gamble Geddes, A.D.C., were met by the Joint Reception Committee of the Mayor and Town Councillors, and the Directors of the Agricultural Society, who escorted them to carriages. The cavalry escort and the band set out for the Oriental hotel, followed by a long line of carriages, containing the members of the Reception Committee, the members of Parliament, Local and Dominion, for the East and West Ridings, and prominent citizens of the town and county. The party were received at the Oriental by Mrs. (Mayor) Stevenson and Mrs (Judge) Weller. At twelve o'clock luncheon was served to the Lieutenant-Governor and party. In addition to the Reception Committee the members of Parliament and several invited guests were present.

IN THE AFTERNOON.

The Lieutenant-Governor's party, accompanied by Mayor Stevenson, drove around town for half an hour. They were joined at the Central Park by the cavalry escort, which preceded them to the exhibition grounds. The band and the 57th Battalion body guard, of 50 selected men, marched to the grounds to receive the Lieutenant-Governor on his arrival there.

INAUGURAL CEREMONIES.

At one o'clock the gates were thrown with visitors pouring into the exhibition grounds, and from that time till two o'clock an unceasing stream entered the limits.

At two o'clock precisely the vice-regal party arrived at the Building. Their carriages where they were received by the Directors and escorted to a platform erected for the purpose, in front of the grand stand. In front of it was drawn, stationed, the 57th Battalion Band, and a

DETACHMENT OF THE 57TH BATTALION,

under command of Capt. Langford, was drawn up in open order in front of the platform. As the carriage of His Honor passed in front of the platform, the troops presented arms, the band playing "God Save the Queen." The Lieutenant-Governor and his aide then ascended the platform, where the directors of the Society was presented to his Honour, and Mayor Stevenson, on behalf of the corporation, read the following:—

ADDRESS FROM THE CORPORATION.

To His Honor John Beverly Robinson, Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Ontario.

We, the Mayor and members of the Town Council of the town of Peterborough, on behalf of the citizens of the town, desire on this the event of your first visit in your official capacity, to extend to you a most hearty welcome and to express our sense of the honour we peculiarly feel to be done us, from the circumstance that you are the first Lieutenant-Governor of this or any portion of our Dominion to whom we have had an opportunity of presenting our respects. We sincerely trust you may thoroughly enjoy your sojourn with us, and find much in our growing municipality that will prove of interest to you.

It will afford us pleasure, indeed, to be permitted to show you our town and present to your view our great manufacturing facilities, which we are assured are not surpassed in this large and prosperous province. Our industries are already important and considerable, and we shall be glad to have the opportunity of bringing them to your notice, and, if time permits, to your inspection.

Although our town has not had any phenomenal growth, yet we believe it has laid a foundation for future importance; and from enjoying the many surrounding advantages it has, we are sanguine of its continued progress and material prosperity.

Thirty-six years have elapsed since we obtained our present status. At that time our population numbered 1,800 souls, and our assessment was less than $100,000, with 300 ratepayers on the roll.

At present we number 9,000, or with Ashburnham, which is really a suburb, over 10,000, our assessment is upwards of $4,000,000, and the number of ratepayers on the roll 2,500. At the date of incorporation the annual expense of municipal government and for all yearly demands was the sum of $1,600. It is now $54,000; and taking credit for the available securities and property held by the town, it is free from debt.

We cannot allow this occasion to pass without a reference to our grateful remembrance of your late uncle, the Hon. Peter Robinson, whose name is a household word throughout this county; who, in the year 1825, brought to this locality a large number of excellent immigrants, and who by his goodness of heart, personal sympathy in their individual and then distressed condition, and by his indefatigable energy on their behalf, secured for them comparative comfort for the time, and the certain means of obtaining a competence for them and their families.

This noble and beneficent act formed the nucleus of a settlement in this town and county of worthy pioneers, many of whom have since, with much credit and ability, occupied public positions of trust and responsibility.

As a lasting memorial of the people's appreciation of these voluntary and generous exertions on your late uncle's part, remarkable for the happy and beneficial results which followed, the town, at its incorporation, adopted the name it has since borne.

Permit us also to say that your most estimable father, many years Chief Justice of this province, distinguished as he was, alike for his exalted abilities and amiable qualities, was well known in Peterborough, and his name is held in lasting and loving remembrance.

We congratulate you on the occupancy of the high and honored place you hold in this fair Province of ours, and we beg to extend to you and Mrs. Robinson our warmest respects, sincerely wishing you and her long life and happiness.

SIGNED BY MAYOR AND COUNCIL.

MR. JOHN CARNEGIE, M.P.P., then advanced and read the following:—

ADDRESS FROM THE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

To His Honor, John Beverly Robinson, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario:

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOR.—We, the President and Directors of the West Riding of Peterborough Agricultural Society, desire to express the gratification afforded us by your Honor's consenting to open this, the second "Peterborough Central Exhibition" held under our auspices.

We need scarcely say that we deem it peculiarly appropriate that the first exhibition ever opened in this county by a representative of our beloved Queen, should be opened by one, who, like yourself, had a paternal uncle so closely identified with its early history and settlement, and whose kindness to, and solicitude for its first settlers led them to perpetuate his memory by calling it Peterborough.

If the comparisons between what you see here and what you have seen elsewhere, which will naturally suggest themselves to your mind, should not prove as favorable to this district as we could wish, or as its comparitively early settlement may have led you to expect, we would ask you to bear in mind that during the large portion of the more than half century which has elapsed since the time of the Robinson immigration, its progress was seriously retarded by the difficulty of ingress and egress, and the consequent enhancement of all the settler had to buy and depreciation of all he had to sell. And that even after railway facilities were obtained, the conditions under which they existed were, until a recent period, such as to leave us, in cost of transport, as far from the front as the front was from the sea-board.

Happily, however, as a sequence to the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway, this great drawback to our prosperity has been removed, and our position with regard to railway facilities rendered second to that of no other county in the Province. And we venture to think that the progress of the last few years is not only a harbinger of what the future has in store for us, but the best possible proof of the wisdom of those who left the more easy path along the lake, and sought a home for themselves and their families in the Valley of the Otonabee.

For the same reason our agriculturists have not had the same opportunities for, and the same inducements to improve their stock as those so fortunately situated as to enable them to reap the many advantages arising from the occasional visit of the Provincial Exhibition to their respective localities.

Now, however, we are looking forward to an early visit from this same Provincial and a share in those advantages which have done so much for the agricultural advancement of other parts of the Province, and we hope your Honor will see in our town, in the extent of these grounds and in the few improvements which have already been made thereon, an ample guarantee that when we offer the Council of the Agricultural and Arts Association (under which the Provincial Exhibition is held) to hold their annual exhibition in Peterborough, there need be no fear but that the accommodation provided for both man and beast, and the display of exhibits will be, at least, fully equal to that provided by many of the previous exhibitions of the Provincial Exhibition, which already have been held with so much advantage to the best and most important interests of these localities and to the manifest advantage of the Province at large.

His Honour in reply expressed his high appreciation of the address he had received. He appreciated all that had been said, and gave his hearty thanks. He had a large capacity for enjoyment, and he considered the hearty and enthusiastic reception a source of highest enjoyment, and he would carry away delightful recollections, which he hoped to have the pleasure to repeat during his incumbency. The pressure of official duties prevented his replying in a formal address.

He agreed with the addresses, in their allusion to the manufacturers of the town which were not only creditable to the town but to the province. His Honour dilated upon the importance of such industries. He gave instances showing how highly the Colonial Exhibition had benefitted Canada, and the exhibit was viewed by the English, with astonishment, and the exhibition had gave the country a high standing. As the nephew of Peter Robinson, he was proud of the flattering allusions made to his uncle, and to know that his memory was so highly respected. In conclusion he again expressed his high appreciation of the hearty hospitality he had received. He congratulated the directors of the exhibition on the success of the exhibition, as an exhibition of the thrift of the country. He hoped that their desires in the direction of holding the Provincial Exhibition in Peterborough would be realized. He pointed out that the enterprise of the Canadians was successfully contesting the palm with the go-ahead Yankees. (Cheers.) His Honor concluded an admirable and energetic address by reiterating his appreciation of the enjoyment he had received on the occasion.

At the conclusion of his address His Honor calling upon Col. Rogers, expressed the high appreciation of the honor bestowed upon him by the volunteers, as implied in the escort provided for him.

His Honor then formally declared the Exhibition opened, and hoped that it would be a most successful one. His Honor then witnessed the speeding of the horses in the ring, and, thorough lover of horse flesh as he is, enjoyed the excellent exhibition made.

The immense crowd that had assembled to hear and witness the inaugural ceremonies, dispersed to view the numerous sights of the exhibition, hundreds thronging to see the scenes presented.

WITHIN THE EXHIBITION BUILDING.

Inside the Exhibition Building the first thing that demanded attention and admiration was the exhibits of grains seeds, roots, etc. This department was very creditably filled, there being a fine display of seed grains, etc. The roots and vegetables were uncommonly excellent, so much so that a gentleman of good judgment who had been at the recent Provincial at Guelph, asserted that the only way in which the Central was behind the Guelph one, was in the way of extent. In potatoes especially there was a fine display, Mr. H. J. Daubez being conspicuous with his fine collection of 61 different varieties.

A fine collection of plants and cut flowers delighted the eye. The chief exhibitors were Messrs. G. M. Roger, A. Watts, A. Sanders and E. Ball. The early operations of the frost, nipping many delicate varieties, detracted from the extent and variety of the floral exhibit.

The dairy exhibit was not, perhaps, as large as other years, but the quality shown was excellent. The show of canned fruits, honey etc., was rather small.

A very fine display of fruit was made, apples of splendid quality forming the bulk of the exhibit in this class.

On the first floor Messrs. Breese & Bain filled a section with a fine display of stoves, ranges, etc., the splendid make of the Peterborough Stove Works. Among those were the Mystic range and heater, and the Rideau base burner.

Go where you will, you will find Gough, the Wonderful Cheap Man. He fills a section with a most elaborate display of the marvellously cheap ready-made clothing for which he is noted. His stock, beautifully arranged and tastefully adorned, each article labelled in plain figures with his paralizing prices, attracted general admiration. Many a farmer, especially, selected the $12 overcoat Gough intends to bestow upon the producer of the most mammoth pumpkin.

On this floor were also found the fine furniture exhibit of Messrs. Craig & Mooney, consisting of a parlour suite upholstered in embossed crimson plush, trimmed with olive, and two parlour chairs upholstered in cash mere. They were fine specimens of Peterborough work throughout, Mr. W. McKee, it may be remarked, making the frames, which are elegantly carved.

Mr. D. Smart was on hand with his usual excellent display. This included a fine Bell two-manual organ, the only two-manual organ, it is claimed, ever shown here, and a neat upright Williams piano, with handsomely finished French Burl walnut case. He also showed five or six Williams sewing machines, with specimens of the splendid applique work for which they are noted.

Mr. D. J. Hendricks exhibited the White sewing machine, and what is perhaps more interesting, the magnificent specimens of fine work it can perform. The specimens of hem-stitch work are marvellous in their beauty and delicacy. It is almost too much for belief, till one actually sees the machine turning out the work. It does with equal facility silk embroidery arrasene and tinsil work. Landscapes and scenes etched on this machine seem equal to hand painted work. It is equally at home on the heaviest broadcloth and the finest gossammer, and few machines, if any, have a wider range of work.

The second floor of the building is principally devoted to

FINE ARTS AND ALLIED EXHIBITS.

The first sight which meets the eye in ascending the stairs is the magnificent exhibit made by Macfarlane Wilson, of China Hall. His corner is a splendid sight, consisting of an artistically arranged display of silverware, china and bric-a-brac. Upon a beautiful walnut side-board, from the factory of Mr. D. Relleghem, is displayed a glittering range of silver, including a silver tea set of the value of $160, among which is a beautiful vase of silver and china, of the value of $60. On a table at hand is a magnificent epergne, a marvel of artistic workmanship, elaborately ornamented with splendid reproductions of fruit in gold and oxydized silver. This elegant piece of plate is worth $300. There are other striking specimens of the silversmith's art, while the bewildering array of artistic china, lamps, etc., forbids the idea of mention in detail. An interesting feature of China Hall's display is a trophy of coal oil and its products, ranging from the crude oil to the most highly refined burning oil, pure as light itself. Among the products of coal oil shown are the coke, a residuum resulting from the refining process, parrafine, both in the form of slabs and candles, etc. This display attracted great attention.

In fine arte the amateur class was very creditably represented, there being a very respectable exhibit of pencil, crayon, sepia, India ink, water color and oil pictures. Several of these pieces are elicited from admiration of visitors, while many of the others deserve more than passing praise. A pencil drawing, a Mameluke, by Mr. Edward Duff, a pretentious mechanical drawing by Mr. John Fraser, and a pair of oil scenes, "Spring" and "Summer," by Miss Watson, are among them.

In professional painting Mr. Wortman is alone, but the excellence of his work would have placed him in a foremost rank with any competitor who might have appeared. He brings four fine portraits, one of a daughter of Mr. Henry Best, whose excellent likeness as well as originality of position are praiseworthy features. A portrait of a daughter of Mr. R. Nimmo, deserves mention for the delicacy of its flesh tints, and the artistic and real treatment of the drapery. A marine view, "The Signal of Distress," and a Venetian scene are especially painted. A landscape, The Big Burleigh Caves—in ante-canal days—forms not only a capital picture, but is of rare value as a souvenir of a scene now destroyed forever.

Mr. G. B. Sproule's extensive and beautiful exhibit of photographs, was one of the finest features of this department. This consisted of every variety of picture of this kind, all noted for the delicate shading, excellent pose, elegant accessories—of drapery and scenery—artistic finish and general fine effect, which has placed Sproule's pictures among the best produced, and given them a provincial reputation. Those who visited the recent exhibition of the Ontario Photographic Association in Toronto saw nothing superior to the pictures seen in Sproule's elaborate exhibit at the Central Exhibition.

The fine display of business plain and fancy, ornamental and engraving penmanship, made by Mr. Bannell Sawyer of the Peterborough Business College, was a most creditable one, and is an example of the ability that is applied to the teaching of all branches as well as penmanship, at this excellent educational institution.

THE LADIES' DEPARTMENT of the Exhibition, consisting principally of fine art needle-work, is quite extensive and of splendid quality. Parties who have seen both say that it approaches in quality and variety, if not in extent, that shown at the Industrial at Toronto. Many of the specimens in silk embroidery are extremely beautiful both in conception and execution. Any attempt at entering into detail would involve the pantaloned critic in a disastrous tangle.

Excellent and creditable as is the display inside the exhibition building, there is reason to believe that the lack of space detracted largely from the extent of the exhibits, and consequently from the interest of the exhibition in the departments included therein. Very many applicants had to be content with the minimum of space and many were unable to secure the allotment of any space whatever.

Jay Gould Says Low Rates Pay and That They Will Never Be Increased.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—In an interview to-day Jay Gould says: "I am opposed to any increase of rates for cable or telegraph messages. I don't think the rates will ever be raised. We have learned how to do the business on a cheaper basis. Like the elevated railroads we are giving the public a low priced but excellent service. We make our profit on the vast increase of business, the cheaper rates have brought us. We have been obliged to duplex our cables in order to accommodate the business. We now average 6000 cable messages a day, nearly treble the number sent before the decrease of rates. Our land service has similarly increased its business and we now send from No. 195 Broadway alone 100,000 messages."

Alleged Murder Aboard Ship.

QUEBEC, Oct. 4.—A most atrocious murder is reported to have been committed on board a vessel belonging to St. John, N.B. John McKeown, one of the crew, states that Auguste, a young German, was kicked so violently by an officer that his bowels burst. For saying that he would give information McKeown says he was locked up three days without food. He was subsequently rowed ashore and left without money or means of subsistence.

Opening of the Great Central.

HARRIS, Oct. 4.—The Great Central Simcoe Exhibition opened here to-day. The weather was showery, and the attendance not so large as would otherwise have been the case. During the rest of the fair, however, large crowds are looked for. The entries are double those of last year. Many curiosities from the Toronto Zoo are on the ground.

RIDGETOWN, Oct 2.—A Liberal Temperance Union has been organized here to oppose Prohibition and to secure national temperance effort. J. A. Dart is president and P. C. Caughall secretary. Why

Will people pay rent when houses and lots can be purchased on such easy terms as are offered by the undersigned. Come and inspect our work and see for yourselves how we construct our houses. Our chief aim and study is to build substantial, warm, frost and damp proof houses. I am offering good building lots, and will build solid brick houses, nine-inch walls, strapped and lathed, two storys, for less money than you can buy frame or veneered buildings. We cordially invite those who anticipate renting or buying to inspect our work and prove for themselves that our houses are not merely built to sell. Every house I've sold gives first-class satisfaction, and I am determined that every house I build shall be a standing testimony to him at building. BULGARIA'S CRISIS.

THE RUSSIAN GENERAL KAULBARS WANTED AT HOME.

SOFIA, Oct. 6.—Gen. Kaulbars will visit Plevna, Sistova, Rustchuk, Varna, Sehimla and Tirnova, returning through Eastern Roumelia. It is stated that Russia would now be satisfied if the Bulgarian elections were postponed for a week, instead of a month, but that the Government has declared that it is unable to consent to such arrangement, owing to the excitement which Kaulbars has caused.

The Good Time Coming.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 6.—The Svet, a Russian military organ, referring to the reports current in Hungary concerning the alleged existence of a secret anti-Russian alliance between Servia and Bulgaria, advises Russia to avoid harsh measures toward Bulgaria. It is better, says the Svet, to abandon Bulgaria to its fate than to drive it into the arms of Russia's foes. The time will come when the Bulgarians will understand what the vital interests are which their hand requires and then Bulgarians will turn of their own accord to Russia.

Effect of Russian Gold.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 6.—The newspapers here publish a telegram from Giurgevo, Roumania, dated last Sunday, which states that the movement in favor of Russia which started in the Bulgarian army under the leadership of the garrison at Shumla is now in full progress. The despatch says the movement has spread rapidly and the adhesion of the garrisons at Rustchuk, Widdin, Plevna and Chumla appears to be unquestionable. The telegram goes on to say that on Saturday last the Shumla garrison telegraphed to the Bulgarian Minister of War at Sofia that they were convinced that the present policy of anarchy was injuring the rights and interests of the people and the army; that they desired a return to the principles of the coup d'etat as arranged by Rustchuk, and that they wished Gen. Kaulbars' note containing the Czar's demands to be considered by the Bulgarian Government in order to avoid a breach between the two countries. "Otherwise," the newspaper concludes, "the garrison reserves the right to act on their own judgment." This was signed by Commanders Khomeroff, Dikoff and Ranskaloff.

Gen. Kaulbars Recalled.

VIENNA, Oct. 6.—The Political Correspondence says that the most dangerous phase in the relations of the Bulgarian Government with Russia has been passed.

The Russian agency at Sofia officially declares that Gen. Kaulbars has been recalled by the Czar.

The Neue Freie Presse publishes a despatch from Sofia stating that the Bulgarian General Schewaroff has been arrested for holding clandestine relations with Gen. Kaulbars.

French Opinion.

PARIS, Oct. 6.—The Journal des Debats, referring to Lord Randolph Churchill's Dartford speech, says: "Russia will little heed Austrian dissatisfaction or English theoretical protests so long as she can rely on Germany's assent or indifference to her policy in the Balkans."

Le France says: "Gen. Kaulbars, not content with rendering Russia odious in Bulgaria, makes her also ridiculous." "He is," adds the paper, "a commis voyageur en revolution."

PERFORMED ITS MISSION.

Success of the British Relief Expedition in Burmah.

RANGOON, Oct. 6.—The column of troops sent from Menhla to relieve the surrounded garrison at Myo-Thek, Burmah, has succeeded in performing its mission. It took the column six days to make a march of thirty miles through one jungle. In this the troops found several crucified British messengers. Every officer and nearly every man in the rescued garrison was prostrated with fever when the relieving expedition reached them.

BLOODS ON THE WARPATH.

A Collision on Canadian Soil With the Gros Ventres.

FORT BENTON, Mont., Oct. 6.—Parties just arrived from Fort Assinaboine say the recent fight between the Bloods and Gros Ventres Indians took place on Canadian soil. A war party of Bloods came south of the line and raided the herds of the Gros Ventres. The latter, after a long chase, overtook the Bloods on Ghost Creek, six miles north of the line, and killed six. The Canadian mounted police are exercising themselves to prevent the united Bloods from attempting retaliation on American soil.

Great Britain Warned.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—At the annual meeting of the Iron and Steel Institute President Pissey, the retiring officer, delivered an address on the iron and steel making resources of Great Britain and the United States. He showed that the British output of Bessemer steel was constantly decreasing, and he warned his hearers that if there should be war or a commercial struggle blind belief in their own supremacy would be dangerous, and that disregard of their antagonist's power would result in disaster.

A SCORE OF PEOPLE KILLED.

A Missouri Steamer's Boilers Explode with Terrible Effect.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 6.—Shortly after noon today the steamer La Mascotte, bound from Grand Tower, Ill., to Cape Girardeau, Mo., exploded her boilers opposite Neeley Landing, burned to the water's edge and floated nearly a mile below Willard's Landing, where she lodged on the shore. The towboat Eagle was within sight of La Mascotte when the explosion took place and rendered valuable assistance, rescuing all who were left alive. The Eagle took thirty-five passengers to Cape Girardeau. No list of passengers could be obtained as the register is lost and the excitement was so severe among the survivors of the officers that no one could tell who was on board. Among the lost are known to be Judge Hager and wife, Miss Kreigher, daughter of Christ Kretcher; Wm. H. Wheeler and two children, and Frits Lord, all of Cape Girardeau; Chas. Ansel, colored; two chambermaids and an unknown lady with two children. The bodies of the last three and one of the chambermaids were recovered and taken to Cape Girardeau on the Eagle. J. H. Perkins, first clerk; Miss Julia Rabich of Cape Girardeau, and the first engineer, Porter, are supposed to be lost. Out of a crew of twenty-four fourteen are saved, and the total loss of life is placed at between eighteen and twenty-two. Those known to be badly injured are Lena Buchman, daughter of George Buchman of Cape Girardeau, and Lon Adams, the first mate. Among the saved are Capt. J. B. Thompson, Henry Leomery, steward; James V. Donohue, pilot; J. J. Harlan, second clerk, and D. C. Mann, second engineer.

FIGHTING KNIGHTS.

Delay of the Richmond Convention in Getting to Work.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 6.—The afternoon session of the Knights of Labor lasted nearly an hour beyond the regular time for adjournment, 6 o'clock. Matters then stood about where they were this morning. Mr. Powderly, through whom all official news of the proceedings is given to the press, told the reporters that he had nothing in the way of news to give them. The convention, he said, was still considering the report of the Committee on Credentials, and had not yet acted on it. This means that the fight is over the admission of eight or ten delegates whom the committee reported to. The convention is still in progress. The contest will be resumed to-morrow morning, and no one seems even able to guess how long it will be before the convention will get to work.

A Question of Color.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 6.—The city has been in a turmoil to-night over a declaration that New York delegates to the Knights of Labor intended to take a colored delegate to the theatre with them. The leaders of the houses provide that no colored man or woman shall be admitted anywhere but to the gallery. Crowds armed and ready to frustrate the intentions of the New Yorkers gathered in the street, but beyond the fact that for fear of bloodshed only seventy-five people attended the Richmond theatre nothing untoward occurred.

DEFRAUDING THE CUSTOMS.

What Alleged Tea Chests Contained—A Montreal Firm in Trouble.

OTTAWA, Oct. 5.—An interesting case, in which a Montreal house is likely to figure conspicuously, will shortly come up before the Customs Department here for investigation. A short time since a vessel arrived at Port Moody, British Columbia, with a cargo of tea direct from China in a damaged condition. A Government officer, ascertaining this fact, proceeded to inspect the cargo, but not until a large quantity had been unloaded and was on its way east to its destination, Montreal. While inspecting the balance of the cargo he discovered that a large number of chests, supposed to contain tea, were filled with valuable goods, subject to high duty, and were all consigned to a Montreal house. The balance of the cargo was at once seized and the facts reported to the Minister of Customs in Ontario. As part of the cargo was in transit east before the discovery of the smuggled goods was made, it is impossible to say how many of the supposed chests of tea were filled with goods other than tea.

THE UNFORTUNATE QUEBEC.

Libels Placed on Her to the Tune of Thirty Thousand Dollars.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Oct. 6.—The propeller Quebec of the Beatty Canadian line after having been wrecked, was surrendered by the Insurance Company and presented to S. E. Murphy of Detroit if he accomplished the task of getting her up. He did so and after she had been repaired re-christened her the F. E. Spinner. With considerable difficulty Murphy succeeded in getting an American registry for the vessel and she made a trip as far as Buffalo, where Marshal Donohue clapped a libel on her for $10,000 due John Charlton of Canada, who furnished the wrecking supplies. A second libel for $15,000 was placed on the unfortunate Spinner at the instance of the Union Dry Dock Company, and a third one for $5000 for engineer's wages winds up the series so far as reported.

The Woman Girdlestone.

MONTREAL, Oct. 6.—The Portland woman Emma Girdlestone, who was arrested on a charge of alluring two young girls from their homes, is to be charged with vagrancy, there being nothing in the law to provide for the first accusation as the girls are over 16. The Chief of Police received the following telegram from Portland to-day in answer to his despatch of yesterday:

"The woman Girdlestone and her husband left for your city last week. Character bad. House shut up. R. HAWKES, City Marshal."

PORTLAND, Me., Oct. 7.—Inquiries have been received by the police authorities here from Montreal relative to the character of the woman named Emma Bonnin, who was arrested yesterday at Montreal for enticing two young girls from their homes, as was alleged, for immoral purposes. She is well known in police circles here, where she passes under the name of "French Emma." She has served terms in the county jail, and when at home lives in a disreputable part of the city. Her husband is now in jail.

Fires at Parkhill.

PARKHILL, Oct. 6.—A barn belonging to Mr. K. Miller, in the vicinity of this place, was burned yesterday afternoon about 4 o'clock. About 11 o'clock last night the barracks of the Salvation Army here were set on fire, but the fire was put out before much damage had been done.

The Solicitor-General Returned.

PRESCOTT, Q., Oct. 6.—Hon. E. J. Flynn, who was Solicitor-General in the late Government, was returned by acclamation to-day for the County of Gaspe. Hon. Mr. Flynn, after the returning officer had declared him elected, addressed his constituents in a speech lasting over three hours.

Alleged Fraudulent Bankrupts.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—J. D. Meyers and others of London have brought suit to set aside the assignment of Kossuth, Marx & Co., the Maiden Lane diamond dealers who failed in 1885. The creditors claim that the assignment was fraudulent. The firm failed for $1,000,000 and had but a small amount of assets. The trial is proceeding.

What nose is more brilliant than a toper's nose? Why, volcano's to be sure.

IRISH PARLIAMENTS.

MR. GLADSTONE REPLIES TO LORD BRABOURNE'S ARTICLE.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—Mr. Gladstone has written to the Editor of Blackwood's Magazine in reply to Lord Brabourne's article on "Facts v. Fictions of Irish History." Mr. Gladstone calls the old Irish parliament a National Parliament, meaning that it was not given to Ireland by exterior agency like the colonial assemblies. He says Ireland was satisfied with the parliament of 1782 as between herself and England. In that sense only Mr. Gladstone concurs with what the article says against the Irish Parliament. But he pointed out that the article does not refer to the virtues of that parliament, especially its endeavors to arrest the recall of Lord Fitzwilliam. He declares that he is unaware that during the whole eighteen years of its existence any attempt of the executive to do good was frustrated or opposed by the Irish Parliament. Mr. Gladstone admits that Lord Brabourne's tone is fair and temperate, and rejoices at that fashionation of a desire to treat the subject historically.

LORD LORNE ON IRELAND.

The Work that the Liberal Party will Have to Do.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—The Marquis of Lorne, in a speech at Birmingham to-day, denied that the Liberal party had become disintegrated. He said Mr. Gladstone's Irish program must again come to the front and be put through by the Liberal party, which should do as much for Ireland as the Conservatives had left for it to do. Lord Lorne hoped something would be done which would give the population of Ireland an interest in the land, extend the local government and provide free schools. He expressed himself as opposed to manhood suffrage and said he advocated reform in the House of Lords.

TWO ENGINES COLLIDE.

A Destructive But Not Fatal Accident on the London and Port Stanley.

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 6.—About noon to-day a serious accident occurred on the London and Port Stanley Railway. A special freight train from St. Thomas was coming at a rapid rate when it met a shunting engine going in the opposite direction. Murphy, the driver of the St. Thomas train, had a heavy load and was using all the steam available to carry the train around a sharp curve at the corner of Maitland-street and the Hamilton road. The engines met just on the curve. The engineers seeing each other at the same moment, both whistled "on brakes," but there was no time to apply them. The engines came together with a terrible crash. For a moment there was a contest between the two iron monsters as to which would give way, as they were both under a full head of steam, but the St. Thomas engine had a large train behind, and the weight of this had the effect of pushing the shunter off the track, leaving the tender lying across the road. One car was standing upon end, while two or three other were scattered around in a promiscuous way. All the train hands jumped when they heard the whistles of the engines and no one was injured. No one appears to blame for the accident.

"Uncle Josh."

A large audience assembled in the Opera House last night to witness "Uncle Josh," as presented by Baird's Dramatic Co'y. The performance throughout was of the highest order. Mr. Baird as "Uncle Josh" the jovial and generous-hearted farmer was inimitable, while Miss Stanley as little "Tot" won the admiration of all. Miss Houghton, as "Fred Dalby" the dude, John Beith as "Bill Johnston," Miss Florence Southdown as "Nellie Primrose," and Edith Arch as "Aunt Tilda" were able supporters. The stirring comedy of "Nip and Tuck" the simple, methodical and expeditious detectives will be presented to-night—to a large audience.

The hearing of the charge against W. J. Kearns', of Burleigh, of committing a breach of the Scott Act,—a second offence—was continued at the Police court this morning. The evidence showed that a servant of Kearns', who called himself George Cochrane, supplied liquor to all comers behind Kearns' stable or barn.

The Magistrate held Kearns responsible for the act of his servant, which he considered only a contrivance to evade the law, found him guilty, and imposed a fine of $100 and costs, to be paid in ten days.

He is the first student since the foundation of the University to whom this privilege has been granted. Mr. Knowles attributes his success to the careful and thorough training in classics he received from Dr. Tassie.

"Had the glass been used" "No; it was turned up on the top of the bottle. I particularly observed that it was quite dry, and that the water in the bottle had not been touched."

"In what glass was Mr. Mauleverer in the habit of taking his medicine" "Mrs. Stancliffe always used a particular glass which was kept on his drawing room table."

"Had that glass been used on the night of October 24?" "I think so. We found that there was a little water and a slight sediment at the bottom of the glass when we examined the room the next day."

"Was any care taken of it?" "No, sir. Miss Stancliffe told me that she had given her uncle one of his powders before she left him, and I concluded that the glass had been used for that purpose"

"And it was washed?" "Yes, by Miss Stancliffe's orders." (Sensation in court.)

"I did not ask by whose orders it was done; but I should be glad to know what were the exact words Miss Stancliffe used when she gave you these directions?" "She said, 'Have everything tidy in the bedroom and dressing room.'"

"And when was that?" "Some time on the morning of the 25th."

"Before or after Dr. Carrick had seen the deceased?" "I am not quite certain; after Dr. Carrick's visit, I believe."

"Now, sir, on your oath, was not everything left untouched until after the doctor's visit?" "I believe so."

"And he might have examined anything and everything in the room if he had wished to do so?" "Oh, certainly"

"By the way, there is one other question. Are you troubled with rats at Orgal Lorton?" Oh, the rats is awful, sir." (Laughter in court.)

Mary Taylor, the maid, deposed to the time at which Miss Stancliffe retired to rest on the night of the 24th. She was then quite calm and composed. She was dressing in the morning when witness took her the news of Mr Mauleverer's death. She seemed greatly distressed and gave orders that the doctor was to be sent for immediately. She went to her uncle's room instantly upon hearing of what had happened.

Cross-examined—"Have you ever heard Miss Stancliffe express any ill will towards her uncle?" "Never, sir."

"You are quite sure of that?" "Certainly, sir. So far as I could see she was very fond of him, even at the time when he was not very kind to her."

"Was she in the habit of praying before she retired to rest?" "Yes, sir. She always read a little in the Bible and prayed. I was often in the room when she did so."

"Did she read and pray on that particular night?" "She did, sir." (Sensation.)

"Now, Miss Taylor, be good enough to tell if you have ever known Miss Stancliffe to possess any poison" "Yes, sir; about two weeks before Mr. Mauleverer's death she showed me a small packet one night and said that it was poison which she had procured that day at Little Lorton and that it was to be used for the poisoning of rats. Her uncle, she said, had desired her to procure it."

"Anything else?" "She told me that she was nervous about having it in her possession and that she meant to put it away in some very secure place."

"Did she say why she did not mean to use it at once?" "Yes; she told me that she was afraid to trust any of the servants with it, and she would keep it until Dr. Branksome returned, as he would know how it ought to be used."

"Have you seen that parcel since?" "No, sir."

"Would you know it again?" "I think I should, sir."

Dr. Carrick, an amiable country practitioner, was the next witness called. He was unmistakably nervous, and gave his evidence in so uncertain a manner, that even the good-natured judge lost his patience at last, and told him sharply that he was not serving the prisoner by his equivocating answers. This only made the poor man worse, and I saw that Mr. Belmore in his cross-examination was terribly bothered by him. He could not give any reason now for coming to the conclusion that Mr. Mauleverer had died of epilepsy. He was quite satisfied that he had been mistaken in thinking so.

"We have heard, Dr. Carrick," said Belmore, "that Mr. Mauleverer was in the habit of taking certain powders prescribed by you" "Yes, sir; bromide of potassium."

"Where were these powders prepared?" "In my own surgery, sir."

"Is this" (producing box) "one of the boxes in which these powders were contained?" "It is the last box that I supplied to Mr. Mauleverer. He had one before this."

"How do you know that this is the last box?" "By the date written upon it in my own handwriting."

"Now, how many powders would such a box as that contain?" "Eighteen."

"Just open the box and tell us how many you find there now?" "I find there are four in it."

"And how often would Mr. Mauleverer take one of these powders?" "When required, sir. Perhaps, on an average, one every second or third night."

"One every second or third night," said Belmore. He whispered a word to Harding, who forthwith made a calculation on a sheet of paper.

"Fourteen powders are gone; that would indicate that the box had been in use, Dr. Carrick, for at least twenty-eight days before the death of Mr. Mauleverer. Be good enough, sir, to tell me what is the date written on the box on which it was supplied from your surgery?" "September 28, sir."

"Ah! that is just thirty-three days before the night of this fatal event. Now I must ask you, Dr. Carrick, to pay particular attention to the questions I am about to put to you, and to remember that the life of a fellow-creature may depend upon your answers. Who prepared these powders?" "I did so myself, sir. I have no dispenser."

"And where did you prepare them?" "In my own dispensary."

"The drug, I suppose, is a perfectly simple one—the powders, I mean, had not to be compounded of different drugs?" "No: all I had to do was to weigh the bromide of potassium and make each dose up in a separate piece of paper in the usual manner."

"Was there any of the powder left in the box when you supplied it to Mr. Mauleverer?" "I think there was about a dozen left in the box."

"Very good; and now, sir, another question without hesitation, where do you keep your stock of strychnine?" "In the same cupboard, sir."

"Ah!" Belmore looked up at the jury with a face that spoke volumes. Everybody saw the point at which he was aiming—everybody except my friend, who sat looking pale and frightened in the prisoner's dock, as though the fate of the world were a ghastly farce which was being played before him. At intervals she raised her eyes to mine, but it was only then for a few days of life or falling into the hands of [illegible]

"Oh, Miss Brown, who was that very homely young lady you were with this afternoon?"

"Oh, I—I beg pardon, I'm sure. I ought to have noticed the family resemblance. That is, I think I ought."

Then he wished an earthquake would happen right then and there.

CAPTAIN WILLIAM SLATER, No. 17 Granville Street, Halifax, N.S.
N. WASHINGTON, M. D., Throat and Lung Specialist, Toronto.
DEAR SIR,—When you visited me in the latter part of January of this year I had been given up to die of consumption by a consultation of Physicians, Drs. Reid and Oliver, prominent physicians of Halifax who considered that my recovery was simply impossible. I had no hope myself nor had my family. When you expressed a hope of my recovery it was received with a doubt. Confined to my bed, very low, weak wasted, night sweats very bad, troublesome cough, raising large quantities of matter—in fact every appearance of a speedy death. After using your Respirator and Spirometer and medicine I began to recover very fast, so much so that during three hard winter months I have gained from 20 to 25 lbs., and was able to walk out on Easter Sunday. My strength is daily increasing, and I shall be able soon to be at work. To you I owe a debt of gratitude, and am anxious for others who are suffering as I was to consult you. You can make what use of this letter you see fit, and thanking you for what I consider a most wonderful treatment,

I remain, yours truly,
CAPT. WM. SLATER.

Later.—Fully recovered and at work.

PETERBOROUGH CENTRAL.

THE SECOND DAY'S GRAND SUCCESS.

PRIZE LIST.

Attendance of Visitors—About Five Thousand Persons Present—The Judges Complete Their Work—The Partial List of Lucky Exhibitors.

Our report yesterday concluded with the account of the formal opening of the exhibition.

His Honor, the Lieutenant-Governor and party, after this event, visited all parts of the exhibition, and were much struck with the excellence and variety of all they saw.

All the afternoon the grounds bore an animated appearance. In front of the grand stand the kilted Caledonians had their "fling" to the shrill shriek of the pipes.

On the platform the Thistle Club Dancers from Toronto, gave frequent exhibitions of their skill, and the club-swinging contest between Mr. T. McNaughton, town, and D. W. Smith, of Toronto, took place, Mr. McNaughton proving an easy winner on all points.

In the ring, jockeys were giving their beasts practice spins, or rural swains were driving around in the mellow haze of the mild September with their blooming and coyly conscious Phyllides. The five thousand persons pretty well covered the grounds. Here was the whirr of machinery, there the hoarse harrangue of the fakirs who were striving to earn an honest penny, entering into the spirit of competition, striving against the monotonous rub-a-dub of the industrious drum in the museum of living curiosities, etc. Jam is too light a word to describe the condition of crush to which the building was subjected throughout all the afternoon, and it was with difficulty that the modest reporter got access and opportunity to note several of the exhibits not in a state of completion at his previous visit.

The Lindsay-Seldon furniture company had a space—not half large enough for what they wanted to show—devoted to the exhibit of their furniture products. These included two fine mantles, one in mahogany and the other in walnut. The design is elegant, and the work is enriched with elaborate carving. The grates are separated from the wood-work by beveled panelling of porcelain tiles. They also show a beautiful mahogany bedroom set and other articles, all artistic productions.

The work of this firm attracts great attention, the elaborate hand carving is worked out of the solid wood from designs prepared by Mr. Seldon. The work on exhibition is ordered for an elegant new residence in town now building, for Mr. Alex. Brodie.

A cognate display is that of the Peterborough Mattress Company, comprising an assortment of mattresses of all qualities and styles, bolsters, feather and wool pillows, samples of ticking used, etc. A very inviting display.

Mr. James Rose has on hand specimens of his excellent make of red building brick.

Among the curiosities of industry and patience shown is a large folding screen, the handiwork of Miss Ida, daughter of Mr. E. C. Hill.

Mr. J. W. Crosby shows in his space a beautiful Lansdowne piano, one seven-octave organ, with six full sets of reeds, 510 in all, the only organ of the kind made in Canada, handsomely cased in ebonized cherry; one six-octave with five sets of reeds, one six-octave with three sets of reeds, and one five-octave with five sets of reeds. All these fine instruments are Uxbridge organs.

Mr. H. Laishley, agent, shows for the Singer Manufacturing Company a novel collection of sewing machines. It comprises a button-hole machine, recommended to tailors—and politicians—which cuts and completes the button hole; a patching machine, used for patching boots; a carriage trimming machine and a shoemaker's machine. Also an improved Singer, a drop cabinet, in which the works, when not required, drop out of the way, converting the stand into an ordinary cabinet, and by touching a spring they are brought up into position ready for work. Also a neat and handy little hand machine in an equally neat case. The exhibit made shows the wide range of excellent work these famous machines are capable of, and with pardonable pride the exhibitor shows a placard announcing the first prize to the Singers for good work. This is the usual achievement of these machines when placed on competitions.

A display of more than usual merit is that of G. W. Hall, biscuit maker and manufacturer of confectionery. A handsome trophy composed of plain and fancy biscuits and an endless variety of fine confectionery make this exhibit one of the most creditable displays of industrial enterprise in the building.

MACHINERY AND OTHER MANUFACTURES.

By far the most elaborate and complete display in agricultural machinery is made by Mr. Peter Hamilton. So extensive is the display that a simple enumeration takes no small space. His superior threshing machine and horse power are shown; a Hamilton Single Reaper; the noted Hamilton Light Twine Binder. This machine was in operation, being run by a portable steam engine. It was surrounded all day by a throng of farmers who were unanimous and earnest in their praise of the ease and perfection of its work. Its several special features were all noted and appreciated, and the deep interest taken in it by the farmers shows that its fame has spread and that it is regarded as one of the best self-binders built. There is also shown a "Crown" mower, power mower and feed cutter, in three sizes, and hand cutter in two sizes, a combination root slicer, a turnip-puller, diamond feed mill, the Daisy combined seed-drill, with many points of superiority over any other drill made. The "Tiger" and "Perfect" rakes, a turnip-sower a scuffler, two-furrow gang ploughs, and No. 2 and 7, the Combined and I X L. ploughs. A noticeable feature of the implements is the exceedingly handsome and artistic nature of the painting, lettering and ornamentation of the different articles. The cleverly wielded brush of Mr. Stephen Roadhouse is responsible for this fine work. This exhibit is a very complete one and it is well that no farmer need go out of the county to get any or all of the best implements used in his calling. The yearly increasing business of Mr. Hamilton, involving periodical enlargements of premises, show that the farmer's value the importance of the excellent manufactory conducted in their interests, with so much enterprise, and appreciation of their needs.

Close at hand Messrs. J. Whyte & Co., town, show a handsome and attractive pyramid of roof-cresting, all designed, made and finished by themselves. They have also on view gang plough, sod plough, No. 3 and No. 4 plough and a cultivator.

After Mr. Hamilton has reaped and threshed the grain Mr. Wm. Forsyth with his fine fanning mills shows how it is to be finally cleaned for the market. his combined mill and bagger cleans and puts the grains in the bag by a connected set of very simple but very effectual mechanism.

Messrs. Best and Bowie, agricultural implement agents show, a Cockshut riding plough, the only implement of its kind made in Canada, an Oshawa mower, a Massie, combined drill, horse rake, scuffler and a Chatham farm waggon.

DISPLAY OF LOCKS, ETC.

The Peterborough Lock Manufacturing Company make a magnificent exhibit of their goods, consisting of a large glass case containing a most extensive and beautiful assortment of the artistic goods turned out by this establishment. The collection of locks for house and shop use, door knobs, window fastenings, door bells, call bells, electric bells and door plates. The designs and execution are elegant and highly artistic, and it is no surprise that these goods are making their way and taking first place in every market in Canada. Under the efficient management of Mr. Brooks, the Peterborough Lock Works are doing a work in their line not surpassed by any similar institution anywhere.

DRESS-MAKERS' SQUARE.

A most interesting and useful exhibit is Prof. Smith's Tailor and Dressmakers' Square, shown by Prof. Smith. The square is made of indestructible parchment pasteboard, and will last a lifetime. By its help any lady may become an expert cutter, equal to a professional, and those who do their own dress and mantle making by its use will secure perfect fit. No paper is required, everything being drafted on cloth. The system includes a perfect dart calculation for ladies' and children, and instructions for cutting children's clothing, Princess dresses, polonaises, dolmans, and, in fact, every variety of dress or garment worn by ladies. The prudent mother, by the use of this square, is able to cut her boys' pants coats and waists. The square, which is a Canadian invention and patent, is simplicity itself, and the accompanying instructions make the use of it so simple that a child can fully comprehend it. Diplomas have been received for this excellent invention at Toronto, London, Guelph and other large shows. Mr. Smith is arranging for the sale of this article in Peterborough.

It may not be amiss to note the exceedingly satisfactory manner in which Mr. John McClelland, the director, charged with that duty, has managed affairs in the exhibition building. He has had to exercise extreme tact and diplomacy in placing exhibitors, whose limited space—all that was available—was not in many cases what, was desired. But he has succeeded well in pleasing all round. The excellent arrangement of the exhibits in all the different departments under the control of the directorate, has been most satisfactorily attended to. Mr. McClelland's long experience has developed an administrative ability and readiness of resource which make his services invaluable in the capacity in which he has given so general satisfaction.

THE AMITY OF RUSSIA.

Bulgaria Desirous of Securing It and Also of Maintaining Her Liberty.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—In an interview yesterday, a member of the Bulgarian Government said that after the elections in Bulgaria the ministers and regents would resign to a sobranje agreeable to the support of a Russian candidate for the throne, and would not waste time in a useless discussion regarding the re-election of Alexander. The Bulgarians were desirous of the amity of Russia, but on the condition that Russia shall cease to regard Bulgaria as a Russian province.

A Plot Against King Milan.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—Rumors worthy of credence are current to the effect that a conspiracy has been discovered at Altpasena to kidnap King Milan and force him to abdicate, with the alternative of death.

Gen. Kaulbars' Reception.

SOFIA, Oct. 7.—Gen. Kaulbars is meeting with a tame reception on his tour. Only twenty persons met him at Plevna. He urged the mayor to get up a petition to the Czar to occupy Bulgaria.

Austria Getting Tired.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—The Daily News says Austria intends to oppose further Russian advances in Bulgaria.

Lord Churchill Abroad.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—Lord Randolph Churchill authorizes the statement that he has gone to the continent simply to recruit his health and that his trip has no connection with any political mission whatever. The correspondents of the leading dailies, however, reiterate the statement that Lord Churchill has either interviewed or will interview Prince Bismarck.

AN UNDESIRABLE TENANT.

An Attempt at Eviction Results in a Murder.

FARMERSVILLE, ONT., Oct. 7.—A woman by the name of Rebecca Day, who has a bad reputation, lived in a house owned by one Nathan Stevens in the Township of Bastard. For some time Stevens has been anxious to get rid of her and has repeatedly offered a reward to any one who would put her out of his house. Recently he offered some parties ten dollars and a gallon of whisky for doing the job. Last night Mrs. Day was aroused by three masked men who went into the house and commenced throwing the furniture out of doors. She instantly sent for her son-in-law, Burton Carr, who lived about three-quarters of a mile away, to come and help her. In a few minutes Carr arrived, and while trying to stop the masked intruders was shot by one of them. The ball, which was fired from an army gun such as used by the Canadian volunteers, entered Carr's head near his mouth and came out through the side of his neck, and killed him instantly. Coroner Vaux of Brockville is now holding an inquest. The murderers are supposed to be three brothers named Carle, two of whom have been captured. The other, who it is thought did the shooting, is yet at large.

ENGLAND'S COMING MAN.

Lord Randolph Churchill's Trip to the Continent.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—The Standard says: "Assuredly business, and not pleasure, is taking Lord Randolph Churchill to Berlin. For an English minister to go to Berlin and not see Bismarck is like a visit to Rome without seeing St. Peter's. We appreciate the talent and recognize the growing distinction of Lord Randolph. His trip to Berlin is evidence of a new departure in diplomacy, the introduction of direct instead of ambassadorial communications." The Standard endeavors to refute the statement that Lord Churchill has adopted radical measures. It says the Dartford speech affords no grounds whatever for the belief that the Government contemplates astonishing the world with a daring or eccentric policy likely to undermine the stability of Conservative interest. There is nothing at variance with Conservative traditions in the new program.

HIS THIRD IN A MONTH.

Attempted Murder by a Jockey at Sheepshead Bay.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—At Sheepshead Bay on Monday night a dispute arose between Pat Lane, a stable boy and Johnny Caldwell, the well-known jockey, and son of S. L. Caldwell. Caldwell drew a revolver and aiming at Lane's heart fired. The bullet entered his right side penetrating the lung. Lane was carried to Kings County hospital, where he now lies in a very critical condition. The house surgeon says he will not live. Caldwell fled and has not been seen since. Caldwell has a very bad reputation, this being the third person he has shot in a month.

The condition of affairs about the quarantined cattle sheds in Chicago is practically unchanged. While there is a similar percentage of deaths among the animals yesterday there was a slight increase in the number of cases reported, and the anxiety among stockmen was greater than on the previous day.

An athletic association has been formed at Berlin with a capital of $2000 and the following officers: Dr. Bowlby, President; James Gleson, Vice-President; G. M. Weld, Secretary; D. B. Dewan, Treasurer, and Alex. Miller, Solicitor. Other Vice-Presidents, H. N. Bunning; Captain, H. Pirie; Secretary-Treasurer, E. Ryan; Committee, Messrs. T. O'Neill, Howey, White, Eckin, Rankin and Tett.

ELECTIONS IN QUEBEC

ONLY SEVEN RETURNS BY ACCLAMATION.

MONTREAL, Oct. 7.—Nominations for the House of Assembly took place all over the province to-day except in Gaspe, where Hon. E. J. Flynn, Solicitor-General, had previously been returned by acclamation. The net result of to-day's proceedings is that contests take place in fifty-eight of the sixty-five constituencies, only seven members being returned unopposed. Of these five are Conservatives, viz.: Hon. Mr. Flinn in Gaspe, Provincial Treasurer Robertson in Sherbrooke, W. Owens in Argenteuil, Beauchesne in Two Mountains, and Larocheile in Dorchester, all being re-elected except the latter. Only two Liberals have been returned unopposed—Mr. Sheblyn in Quebec East and Mr. Deseres in Iberville.

Present appearances indicate that this will be about the average in the new House, as unless something very unforeseen occurs before next Thursday, polling day, the Government cannot fail to be sustained by a large majority. Some people go so far as to say the Rouges will not get even a dozen seats, while moderate supporters of the Government concede eighteen at the outside.

The Riel question is not an issue except in English-speaking constituencies, where it crops up now and again.

Excitement is running very high in some sections, particularly in Montreal East, where a dead set has been made against Attorney General Taillon, who will nevertheless be elected by a good majority.

The Nominations in Montreal.

MONTREAL, Oct. 7.—The following nominations were made to-day for the Provincial Legislature: Montreal Centre, Jas. McShane, jr., Wm. Keys and C. J. Doherty; Montreal East, Hon. Mr. Taillon, A. Gravel and L. O. David; Montreal West, George W. Stephens, J. S. Hall, jr., and W. W. Robertson.

For Ottawa Co.

OTTAWA, Oct. 7.—The nominations for the representation of Ottawa county in the Quebec House took place at Aylmer to-day, when Warden Cornier, Mayor of Aylmer, was nominated as Conservative and Mayor Rochon of Hull as Liberal candidate. Mayor Rochon is a Nationalist.

ENGLAND'S FOREIGN POLICY.

Sir Charles, the Submariner, on Lord Randolph Churchill.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—It is a notorious fact that Prince Bismarck has long considered Sir Charles Dilke the best judge of foreign affairs in England, and this opinion is shared by many of the shrewdest diplomatic judges in England. A correspondent had an interview with Sir Charles Dilke at his winter cottage in the Surrey hills, near Woking. The cottage is a pretty one-story building, very similar to a Swiss chalet. Over the front door a marble slab is set in masonry, on which is inscribed, "This is the true nature of a home—it is a place of peace."

Replying to questions of the correspondent as to what he thought of the present situation, Sir Charles said: "It seems to me Lord Randolph Churchill has decided to follow a non-intervention policy, and so far as he is concerned Russia may seize Constantinople whenever she chooses. My opinion is that she will do so sooner or later. I don't see how the Radicals could oppose such a policy. Lord Randolph Churchill is certainly acting in concert with Mr. Chamberlain's views, and the latter's foreign creed is conceived strictly on lines of the Birmingham school, which has for years been implacable in its opposition to jingoism in any form. Austria alone is likely to attempt to prevent Russia's occupation of Stamboul, but in fact Austria would not make a move were it not for the pressure of some of her Russia-hating people. Altogether I think Lord Churchill's policy is unwise. Mr. Gladstone and the bulk of the Liberal party have over and over again advocated non-intervention abroad and three acres and a cow at home. Lord Randolph Churchill, in his speech at Dartford last Saturday, endorsed both of these principles. Lord Randolph's next move will probably be to pass a free education bill."

"Conservatives will have no difficulty," continued Sir Charles, "in remaining in power for at least five years, and if nothing extraordinary happens, their control will probably last ten years. I do not see where or how the Liberal party is uniteable, and the situation will not be improved when Mr. Gladstone dies or retires. Nobody would follow Sir William Harcourt, and many of the strongest men in the party object to John Morley. Mr. Chamberlain is out of the question, and that leaves Lord Rosebery as the only possible leader unless some new star arises."

HE MURDERED A BISHOP.

Trial of Father Galeote at Madrid—His Reason for the Crime.

MADRID, Oct. 7.—Father Galeote, the priest who killed Mgr. Isquierdo, Bishop of Madrid, on Palm Sunday, in revenge for having been silenced as a priest, attempted during the progress of his trial to-day to read to the court a long narrative of his grievances against the bishop. The priest was much excited. The court refused to permit the reading of the narrative and ordered the manuscript to be left with the judge for further consideration. The prosecution then closed its case. The defence asked for the prisoner's acquittal on the ground that he was not responsible for his actions when he killed the Bishop. The court reserved its decision.

MURDER BY A SALVATIONIST.

A Tailor Who Formerly Lived in Toronto Kills His Girl's Half-Brother.

CASTILE, N.Y., Oct. 7.—Robert Van Brunt, a tailor aged 25, yesterday fatally shot Wm. Ray, aged 21, for sitting up with Eva Ray, aged 16, his half-sister, whom Brunt affected to admire. The murderer, who formerly lectured in Toronto on "Temperance," is an Englishman and a cripple. He belonged to the Salvation Army, at whose meetings he would work himself up to such a pitch as to fall down insensible.

AN ANGLO-FRENCH FIGHT.

Fishermen of the Two Nationalities Come to Blows.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—A fight between the English and French fishermen occurred to-day at Ramsgate. Finally the police took the Frenchmen under their protection and escorted them to their boats. Several of the fishermen on both sides were injured during the fight. The fight arose out of disputes about responsibility for frequent thefts of nets in Ramsgate harbor recently, the English charging the Frenchmen with pilfering.

THEY OBJECT TO AFRICA.

Mutiny of the Royal Inniskillen Fusiliers at Aldershot.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—The Royal Inniskillen Fusiliers stationed at Aldershot went on a riot last night in resistance to a draft that was being made for service in Africa. A savage fight ensued, and the Irishmen were only subdued after a number of soldiers and police had been wounded. Forty-one of the rioters were arrested.

Oysters

MOVING VERY SLOWLY.

The K. of L. Not Through with the Question of Credentials Yet.

RICHMOND, Oct. 7.—At the close of the morning session of the K. of L., matters were exactly in the same position as last night. The discussion of the Morrison case, which had been begun, was resumed immediately after the opening of the session and was continued until the adjournment for dinner. At the afternoon session the discussion was continued and it was finally decided to admit the delegates from District Assembly 126, of New York, with the exception of Morrison, who was rejected and his alternate substituted for him. This result was reached about 6 o'clock. As the Committee on Credentials desired further time for consideration of the case of the contesting delegations from St. Louis, the rules were suspended and the convention proceeded to discuss the question of giving the support of the order to the locked out cotton workers of Augusta, Ga., the curriers and teamsters of Peabody and Salem, Mass., and the journeyman plumbers of New York. There are 2000 men in each of the first named bodies and about 1400 in the latter. It was decided to support them. At 7.30 the Committee on Credentials not being ready to report, it was decided not to hold an evening session.

Drowned in the Lievre.

OTTAWA, Oct. 7.—Albert Newton and a companion yesterday afternoon started to cross the Lievre River in a snow at a point fifteen miles above Buckingham. Their craft, becoming unmanageable, was run into by the steamer Agnes, passing at full speed, and cut in two, the two men being hurled into the water. Newton was drowned but his companion was rescued. The deceased leaves a wife and family.

Prospective Trouble in the Stock Yards.

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—Notices were this morning posted in all the stock yards' packing houses to the effect that on and after Monday the hours of work would be ten instead of eight. The notices were signed by nineteen firms, comprising all the packers of consequence in Chicago.

The Lonsdale-Cameron Advertising System.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—A suit has been commenced in the Supreme Court of New York by David de Benaude against Hugh Cecil Lowther, otherwise called Lord Lonsdale, for $100,000. The charges include among other things alienating the affections of de Benaude's wife, known as Violet Cameron.

Very Like Leprosy.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Oct. 7.—A letter from Warren, Ark., states that Judge J. M. Bradley of the Tenth District of Arkansas is desperately ill of a sickness closely resembling leprosy, the skin having peeled from the entire surface of the body, leaving the raw flesh in a most painful condition. The physicians say they never saw or read of a case similar to his.

A Deficit in New South Wales.

SYDNEY, N.S.W., Oct. 7.—There was a deficit of $10,000,000 in the revenues of the province for the past fiscal year, which was characterized by the greatest commercial depression known in twenty-two years.

Was it the Anchoria?

GLASGOW, Oct. 7.—The Anchor line steamer Ethiopia, which arrived at Glasgow to-day from New York, reports that on Sept. 29 she passed another steamer of the same line. The latter was probably the steamer Anchoria, which left Glasgow Sept. 16 for New York and has not yet reached her destination. She has 500 passengers on board.

The Anchoria was insured in Liverpool yesterday at 15 guineas, the ordinary rate of insurance.

The Golden Lion for Silks. R. FAIR.

"Nip and Tuck."

The above lively comedy was presented in the Opera House last night to a large audience by Baird and company. "Nip" and "Tuck," the wily detectives, were well personified by Messrs. Baird and Houghton, while Georgie Gardiner, Florence Sutherland and Minnie Stanly in the roles of "Lady Beaufort," "Sarah Truegold" and "Fanny Dashleigh," were excellent. Mark Twain's great play, "The Gilded Age, or There's Millions In It," is on to-night.

Large Fire at Lakefield.

Strickland's Flour Mill Burnt to the Ground.

About 2.30 o'clock on Thursday night fire broke out in Strickland's flour mill, Lakefield, and in a few minutes after it was discovered the whole building, a large frame one, was enveloped in flames. The fire brigade and the villagers generally did their utmost in endeavoring to save the building, but the fire had gained so great a headway, their efforts were unavailing, and it was burnt to the ground. However, by hard work they succeeded in preventing the fire from spreading to the saw mill and other buildings in the vicinity. The mill machinery and a large quantity of grain and flour in stock was destroyed or consumed. The origin of the fire is unknown. The loss is estimated at from 500 to $2,000. The machinery was insured in the Citizen for $6,000.

Young Men's Christian Association.

The Adjourned Annual Meeting—Election of Officers and Executive Committee—The Prospect Brightening.

The adjourned annual meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association was held in the Association rooms on Thursday evening. The attendance was large. Eleven new members were proposed and elected. PRESIDENT.—Judge Weller.
VICE-PRESIDENT.—Mr. J. H. Barnham, M.P.
CHAPLAIN.—Rev. J. W. R. Beck.

The following skips were appointed for the season: T. P. Attrill, G. Dunsford, Dr. Boucher, A. McNeil, W. G. Ferguson, T. Rutherford, A. Hall, G. Brown, D. Cameron and E. B. Edwards.

A vote of thanks was tendered the retiring president, Dr. Boucher, for his untiring energy and zeal in promoting the interest of the club in his official capacity.

The President and Vice-President signified their intention of offering a valuable medal for the winner of the thirteen point competition.

It is expected that the district bonspiel will be held in Peterborough this year, and which no doubt will aid in increasing the interest in the roaring game.

Although last season the club was only fairly successful, yet fair progress was made and the members are sanguine of greater achievements this year. Mr. T. E. Bradburn, last year one of Lindsay's best men, and Mr. Clark, one of Orillia's most successful skips will add to the strength of the club.

I have no hesitancy in saying that the railroad companies, if they are doing what the Governor says in his letter, are acting in violation of law."

FIVE MILLION POUNDS.

By T. WEMYSS REID.

Cross-examination continued—"You say the strychnia and bromide of potassium were kept in the same cupboard. Now do you ever make mistakes, Dr. Carrick, in the compounding of your medicines?"

"Well, sir—I should not like to say positively."

"Come, come, Dr. Carrick, be frank with us. Tell me; did you ever make a mistake in making up your medicines?"

If more stood like a tower among his seated brethren. His long arm was outstretched, and his forefinger, which was pointed direct at the heart of the witness, almost seemed as though it were a rapier, by which the unhappy man had been transfixed. There was something terrible, too, in the eye of the great advocate as it flashed upon the witness, something merciless in the firmly closed mouth with which he waited for the answer to his question. Everybody in court, I think, was fascinated by the spectacle. There he stood, motionless as a statue, and unrelenting as an inquisitor, while Dr. Carrick writhed visibly before him.

"You must answer the question, sir," said the judge in supremely tones.

Breathing hard, and pausing a moment to wipe the perspiration from his forehead, the witness spoke: "I have made a mistake once—it was years ago."

"What was it?" "I used a wrong drug in making up a simple prescription."

"The wrong drug! Tell me the name of that drug, sir!" "It was arsenic. My lord, this happened twenty years ago, and I assure your lordship that there has been nothing—"

"Answer my question, sir, and don't make speeches," said Belmore. "You tell us that you did make a mistake once, and that you put arsenic into your medicine instead of something else. Pray what was the result of that mistake? Did your patient take the medicine?" "He did, sir."

"And he died?" "Yes, to my lasting pain and sorrow, he did. It was a baby, sir—"

"Don't make speeches, Dr. Carrick. You tell me that once already you have made a mistake in compounding your medicines which sent one of your fellow creatures to his. Now, will you admit the possibility of your having made another mistake? You know your strychnia and your bromide of potassium were in the same cupboard in your laboratory?" "No, sir, I can't admit that I made any mistake on this occasion. I got a terrible lesson twenty years ago."

"No doubt you did; but, excuse me, I did not ask you whether you had or had not made a mistake on this occasion, but whether it was or was not possible for you to do so?" "No, sir; it was impossible."

"You are infallible now, eh?" "Yes, sir," blurted out the unhappy man, who evidently did not know whether he was standing on his head or his heels.

"Well, I mean to ask the jury to pronounce an opinion upon that point, Dr. Carrick. You can go now."

But before he went he was re-examined by Hawk.

"Do you recollect making up these particular powders for Mr. Mauleverer?" "Perfectly well."

"Are you quite certain you made no mistake?" "I am positive I did not."

"In what part of your cupboard do you keep your strychnia?" "On the top shelf, sir."

"Now, there were eighteen powders originally in that box. Were they all made up at the same time?" "Undoubtedly, sir."

"From the same bottle of bromide?" "Certainly."

"Were you interrupted while making them up?" "No, that I remember."

"Have you examined the four powders which remain in the box?" "Yes, in company with my eminent medical colleague, Mr. Allgood, I have examined them."

"And do they consist of bromide of potassium or strychnia?" "Of bromide, of course."

"Then we may take it for granted that Mr. Mauleverer had been using these powders without suffering any ill effect from them down to the day of his death, and that all the powders left in the box after his death are perfectly harmless?" "I apprehend that is the case."

Dr. Carrick was followed by Mr. Allgood, F.R.C.S., the eminent toxicologist, who gave convincing evidence of the real cause of Mr. Mauleverer's death. The unfortunate millionaire had evidently taken a large dose of strychnia about an hour and a half before he was heard by the servant maid to cry out. He confirmed Carrick's statement regarding the powders remaining in the box. He had not discovered any trace of bromide of potassium in his analysis of the contents of deceased's stomach.

After him came the chemist at Little Lorton, Mr. Simkins, who told how on the 8th of October the prisoner had driven up to his shop in her uncle's carriage, and had explained that she wished for a quantity of strychnia, to be employed in poisoning the rats which abounded in the cellars of the hall. He had remarked upon the very dangerous character of the poison, and had recommended some other method of getting rid of the vermin. Miss Stancliffe agreed with him that the poison was an exceedingly dangerous one, and had expressed her regret that her uncle would let her to procure it. She had further requested him to supply it to her in a sealed parcel, so that, in case of its being accidentally found by one of the servants, it might not be opened by mistake.

Belmore only put one question to this witness: "Supposing you were to see that parcel again, would you know it at once and be able to say if it had been tampered with?" "Yes, I could not mistake that parcel if I saw it again."

Then came the evidence of the chief constable, my acquaintance Eastwood. It was terrible to hear him tell how, "in consequence of information he had received," he had felt it to be his duty to make certain inquiries regarding Mr. Mauleverer's death. At that moment I dared not have faced either Daisy or Dr. Branksome. I was thankful when Eastwood passed on to tell of the result of his search through the house, when he went there for the purpose of arresting the prisoner. It was a negative result altogether. The only drugs of any kind which he could discover were the box of powders found in the prisoner's box, and upon the dressing table in her bedroom, a small phial containing a few drops of the tooth wash which was in the habit of using. Nowhere could he find the slightest trace of any other poison, nor by the most minute search of the premises could he unearth the slightest evidence of any other drug which she could have used as evidence against her. It was as follows:

CAPTAIN WILLIAM SLATER, No. 27 Granville Street, Halifax, N.S.

N. WASHINGTON, M. D., Throat and Lung Specialist, Toronto.

DEAR SIR,—When you visited me in the latter part of January of this year I had been given up to die of consumption, by a consultation of Physicians, Drs. Reid and Oliver, prominent physicians of Halifax who considered that my recovery was simply impossible. I had no hope myself nor had my family. When you expressed a hope of my recovery it was received with a doubt. Confined to my bed, very low, weak, wasted, night sweats, very bad troublesome cough, raising large quantities of matter—in fact every symptom of a speedy death. After using your Respirator and Spinmaster and medicine I began to recover very fast, so much so that during three hard winter months I have gained from 9 to 23 lbs., and was able to walk out on Easter Sunday. My strength is daily increasing, and I shall be able soon to be at work. To you I owe a debt of gratitude, and am anxious for others who are suffering as I was to consult you. You can make what use of this letter you see fit, and thanking you for what I consider a most wonderful treatment.

I remain, yours truly,

CAPT. WM. SLATER.

Later.—Fully recovered and at work.

WEDNESDAY—(CONTINUED.)

One of the most creditable features of the exhibition is the splendid display of carriage work, made by two of our leading carriage builders.

Just west of the exhibition building Messrs. Fitzgerald & Stanger have pitched their tent. Under a broad marquee they show long lines of beautiful vehicles. This display consists of fourteen specimens of their elegant and stylish work. These include one top phaeton with Herbrand gear, leather top; three Timkin side-bar buggies, three electric spring Herbrand gear buggies, one easy gear, two double gears, one Royce coiled spring buggy, and a two seated carriage made to order. In another tent are shown two nobby village carts and a lumber waggon, resplendent with rich redundance of ornamentation and pictures, worthy of a place among the frescoes of a mansion. This is the skilful work of Mr. Wing, the chief of this firm's painting department. It is probable that Mr. Wing, both as a decorator and a plain painter of carriage work, has few equals in Canada. Among the many other points of excellence which distinguish their work, the excellence of the painting is the most prominent. It is even and clear, and so perfect in polish that the finished body of a vehicle reflects almost as perfectly as a mirror. The exhibit was greatly admired, and its excellence and style secured several sales.

PORTER BROS.

The pushing Porter Bros. show their characteristic enterprise in the splendid and extensive exhibit of buggies, carriages and cutters. A specially constructed building, eighty feet in length, contains a varied exhibit of over twenty different vehicles. Among these are a village cart, a three-spring canopy-top phaeton, one Atkinson spring, leather-top buggy, one rubber-top, end-spring buggy, one coil-spring top buggy, one end-spring open buggy, one three spring open buggy, one jump-seat top buggy (a model of convenient and rapid transformation from a one-seat to a two-seat vehicle and vice versa), one leather-top phaeton of the firm's own design, and entire own make throughout, one rubber-top phaeton, one Dexter Queen buggy, one three-spring top buggy, one Timkin side-bar top buggy, one buck-board and one farm waggon. This is a pretty full list of their wheeled vehicles. Their display also includes one square bodied cutter, one Portland cutter, one Toronto sleigh, one Montreal sleigh, and one Peterborough sleigh, a most convenient and elegant new design, originating with Mr. S. Fitzgerald, a member of their mechanical staff. It has a shifting seat and can, in a moment, be converted from a single to a double-seat sleigh. The firm also show a splendid array of wheels "in the white," that is, unpainted, showing the grain of the timber. These were part of a large stock of wheels made expressly for Porter Bros. by the noted firm of Connolly & Benjamin, Yarker. One obvious advantage Porter Bros. have over their builders is that they make in the factory connected with their works, all their own tops, and can insure their excellence of construction, and the customer can order his top to suit his wants. Altogether the exhibit of this firm is a most extensive and creditable, both to the firm and the town. Parties who have seen both affirm that it equals in quality and style, and approaches in extent the best and largest exhibit made at the Toronto Industrial. In the carriage building line Porter Bros. may well quote their motto: "Ducimus, nunquam segnimur," "We lead but never follow."

In connection with the above exhibit Mr. J. W. Watson, ornamental painter, to the firm shows, painted on glass, 4 x 5 feet, a beautifully executed Sign bearing the words "J. W. Watson sign and Ornamental painter in illuminated lettering with rich, elaborate scroll work and ornamentation. A very difficult piece of work, most artistically done.

Along side Fitzgerald & Stanger, Mr. J. J. Turner, sail, tent and awning manufacturer makes a fine display of tents, awnings, camp beds, water proof clothing, portable tables etc. In fact Fitzgerald & Stangers marquee, the DAILY EXAMINER exhibition tent as well as others on the ground, were made by Turner.

In one of Turner's tents the Ontario Canoe Company makes a fine display of nine canoes, in cedar rib, longitudinal rib, bass-wood and canvass, (the latter a folding ducking canoe), and an assortment of paddles etc. The display which was a most elegant one, was in charge of Mr. Sam'l Milligan.

Messrs. Might and Coulter, town local agents exhibit the "Morrisburg Cabinet Creamer a convertible title to which would be "butter making made easy." Also two patent churns and a reversible teeth harrow.

The "Oshawa Champion Pitching Machine is a capital labour saving device for unloading and mowing hay and grain. It is exceedingly simple and easily shifted. Mr. John Johnston of North Monaghan the agent for the county, is adjworthy of the confidence of the farmers as the machine is suited to their needs.

Mr. Henry Owens shows specimens, in action, of his capital force and lift pumps; also the Wisner spring toothed cultivator and the Wisner combined seed drill.

Messrs. Wright & Payton show in the well three of their excellent pumps.

Mr. W. McKenzie, agent, shows an improved shir-sting hay and grain unloader.

Mr. Robert Fife exhibits the Massey, Toronto, mower, the Massey light steel binder, a steel framed seeder, and a Sharp's horse rake.

THURSDAY.

Thursday was the farmers' day at the Central Exhibition. During the morning exhibitors were busy "trotting out" their stock for the inspection criticism and decision of the judges. During the morning also the Canadian draught, saddle, carriage and roadster horses were paraded in the ring.

THE STOCK PENS AND HORSE STALLS.

The exhibition horses was very good, especially in the heavier classes, some splendid yearly and two year old colts of phenomenal size, challenging admiration.

In cattle a large exhibit was made and many of the animals were of unusual excellence. Durhams were, of course, most largely represented, shown by such well known breeders as Jos. Redmond, R. C. Strickland, J. M. Irwin, A. A. Cox, T. Johnson. D. Grant & Sons, Jas. McGill, Dr. Kincaid, W. Collins, etc. James Stothart, of Smith, and Samuel Curtis, of Harwood, were the chief exhibitors of Holsteins, not omitting, however, Mr. A. R. Kidd, who contributed the year old bull, Robbie Burns, to the collection.

In sheep there were several fine pens. J. Vance showed Cotswolds and Leicesters, and R. Vance Cotswolds. Shropshires were exhibited by D. Grant & Sons and Robt. Hannah. A. R. Kidd and Robert Walton showed fine pens of Southdowns.

In swine there was a fairly full exhibit of excellent pigs.

The poultry department was also well represented in nearly all the classes. The stock, excellent as it was, did not monopolize the attention of the visitors. The exhibition building was thronged throughout the afternoon, and after the exhibition of the roadster and carriage horses in the ring, they paid their attention, which was worthily bestowed, upon amongst which was much worthy of admiration and of peculiar interest to the class to which the day was devoted.

Messrs. H. W. Renwick and C. P. Lockhart, of Orono, exhibited and had for sale on Friday the wonderful mummy peas, the seed imported from the Queen's Highland residence, Balmoral Castle. These peas give a large yield, something like fifty bushels to the acre. They were disposed of in small quantities to the farmers. They have been exhibited at all the other principal previous exhibitions.

The magnificent weather attracted another large concourse of visitors, which, however, was not quite so large as that of the previous day. During the day about four thousand persons passed through the gates. The order maintained upon the grounds was excellent, the offices of the several constables on duty being, as far as keeping the peace was concerned, pretty much a sinecure.

IN THE EVENING

the exhibition building was illuminated and a fair attendance of visitors was present inspecting the exhibits and the entertainments provided, the dancing of the Thistle Club and other amusements. The Fire Brigade Band was in attendance.

FOURTH DAY—FRIDAY.

What True Merit Will Do.

The unprecedented sale of Boschee's German Syrup within a few years has astonished the world. It is without doubt the safest and best remedy ever discovered for the speedy and effectual cure of Coughs, Colds and the severest Lung troubles. It acts on an entirely different principle from the usual prescriptions given by physicians, as it does not dry up a cough and leave the disease still in the system, but on the contrary removes the cause of the trouble, heals the parts affected, and leaves them in a purely healthy condition. A bottle kept in the house for use when the diseases make their appearance, will save doctor's bills and a long spell of serious illness. A trial will convince you of these facts. It is positively sold by all druggists and general dealers in the land. Price 75c., large bottles. eod w41tf

Disorderly Scenes in the Colonial Parliament at Sydney.

SYDNEY, N.S.W., Oct. 7.—The Colonial Assembly was in session all night discussing the estimates. Great disorder prevailed. Sir Henry Parkes, leader of the Opposition, called the ministry "Scratch." Member Wisdom endorsed the expression and was forcibly expelled. A motion to expel Sir Henry Parkes was defeated by a majority of two. Sir Henry re-entered the House, and was greeted with prolonged cheering. He moved to readmit Mr. Wisdom and the motion was agreed to.

A New Trial Refused in the Case of the Anarchists at Chicago.

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—Judge Gary this morning overruled the motion for a new trial in the cases of the eight Anarchists charged with the Haymarket massacre, and confirmed the verdict of the jury that Spies, Parsons, Fielding, Schwab, Engel, Fischer and Lingg should be hanged, and that Neebe should suffer imprisonment for fifteen years. Sentence was passed this afternoon.

None of the recognized leaders were present except Apostle Richards, who opened the meeting. An epistle from the first president, John Taylor, issued from his hiding place will be read before the conference closes on Friday. It is believed the policy of the priesthood will remain unchanged.

King George in a Wait.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—King George of Greece is now paying his annual visit to Western Europe, but will this time confine his friendly acknowledgments probably to Paris and Copenhagen. He will not visit England or any other country that was engaged in the coercion of Greece at the time of her war preparations against Turkey. He is still angry about this interference.

Silk Raising in the States.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—At its last session Congress passed a law appropriating a sum of money to enable the Commissioner of Agriculture to test the most improved machinery for converting silk cocoons into raw silk. In pursuance of this law the Commissioner is now setting up in one of the department buildings of this city six Serrell automatic silk reels, which he proposes to operate during the coming year.

Roasted Alive.

COLUMBIA, S.C., Oct. 6.—At Chester on Sunday night two children and an old woman were roasted alive. Dan Henry went with his wife to a camp meeting, leaving their house and two children in charge of Caroline Berry. Upon their return the parents found the house in flames and heard the screaming of their children inside. An unsuccessful attempt was made to save them. It is supposed Caroline Berry went to sleep while smoking and the bed clothes caught from her pipe.

Death of Gideon Striker, ex-M.P.P.

PICTON, Ont., Oct. 6.—A telegram was received this evening announcing the sudden death of Mr. Striker, ex-M.P.P., in the Balmoral Hotel, Montreal. Mr. Striker left Picton last Saturday in his usual health and was expected home to-day. Mr. Striker represented Prince Edward County in the local legislature for ten years up to 1883 and was defeated in the general elections of that year by the present member. Mr. Striker was one of Picton's oldest inhabitants and was associated in business for a number of years with Dr. R. J. Chapman, his brother-in-law.

It is thought cholera is on board the vessel, and the captain and his crew will not be allowed to land until the case is investigated.

Where Visitors Can Buy Their Furs.

FIFTEEN THOUSAND ON STRIKE.

The Chicago Pork Packing Employes Refuse to Return to Ten Hours a Day.

CHICAGO, Oct. 8.—Fifteen thousand employes in twenty-one pork packing establishments almost unanimously resolved not to return to the packing district to-day. Yesterday a notice appeared on the different houses stating that on and after Monday, October 11, the proprietors would operate their houses on a basis of ten hours for a day's work. To the notice was appended the signatures of twenty-one packing firms. This morning the employes went out on strike.

Shortly before 2 o'clock, evidently by preconcerted action, all the men employed by the following stock yards packing firms refused to work and joined the strikers: Armour & Co, John Morrell, J. T. Hickey & Co., John Cudahey, International Provision Company and the Anglo-American Packing Company. There are between 6000 and 7000 of them, making about 8000 in all who struck during the day. Some of Morrell's men, after going out, decided to return to work. The strikers at once invaded the place to compel them to quit and employed violence, which, for a time, took on the dimensions of a serious riot, and several men were hurt.

It is estimated that there are now 20,000 men out of work, about one-quarter of whom are strikers, the others being obliged to quit on account of the others having struck. The strikers are the skilled workmen, the remainder being laborers. These latter, though not technically striking, appear to be in hearty sympathy with the movement. The men all quit with their knives and other sharp-edged tools in their possession. A mass meeting of strikers has been called for to-morrow afternoon, at which it is feared trouble may develop. Fully 15,000 persons are expected to be present.

MAKING SOME HEADWAY.

The Knights of Labor at Last get Down to Practical Business.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 8.—At the close of the morning session of the Knights of Labor it was learned that most of the time had been occupied in discussing the report of the Committee on Credentials concerning the St. Louis contesting delegation.

At the afternoon session of the Knights of Labor convention to-day Mr. Powderly's address was finally read, and the report of the committee appointed to investigate the case of the Home Club of New York was made and adopted. With regard to the nature of that report Mr. Powderly declined to furnish any information. Committees were appointed upon the law of appeals and grievances and upon the state of the order, and a special committee upon the distribution of resolutions.

A resolution was adopted providing for the appointment of a special committee to take into consideration those parts of Mr. Powderly's address which relate to the education and training of youth for the performance of their duties as citizens.

Mr. Powderly denied any knowledge of delegates coming from Montreal with a revised constitution to suit the Catholic Church.

Cold Coffee for Marching Soldiers.

Paris Letter to London Truth.

A good mark for Gen. Boulanger! In the instructions sent to the officers commanding the regular army and the militia reserves engaged in the autumn manœuvres they were told to prevent, as much as possible, soldiers drinking at the first well they meet, and if the weather was hot, to make each man take with him before setting out on a long march a provision of filtered water. If he had said, "a provision of cold coffee," it would have been better. There is no such safe and sustaining drink as coffee for the marching soldier, tourist or sportsman. It prevents, in places where food is scarce and bad, typhus fever, by counteracting rapid waste of the tissues. The internal waste caused by fatigue is the most dangerous of any, inasmuch as the vitality is too low to throw it off, and so all the dead stuff in the body poisons what is living. I have seen persons, after walks greater than their strength could bear, suffer as if from violent poison. In point of fact, they were poisoned, but merely through inability to get rid of the detritus of wasted tissue in themselves. Tourists should, no more than Gen. Boulanger's soldiers, when out on holiday excursions, drink water out of the first well they meet, and to prevent the rapid using up of their own bodies they ought to fill up their flasks, before starting on long walks, with coffee.

THE HOME RULE BILL.

IRELAND TO HAVE A NATIONAL COUNCIL FOR EACH PROVINCE.

LONDON, Oct. 9.—The Daily News says it is enabled to state that the Committee of the Cabinet is preparing a bill to establish four national councils to represent the provinces of Ireland. The bill differs from Mr. Gladstone's bill chiefly in the mission of provisions for a legislative body at Dublin. With this exception the bill fully meets the aspirations of the Home Rulers in regard to transferring to local bodies the direction of Irish affairs not dealt with at Westminster. The Government has secured for this bill the hearty support of Lord Hartington and Mr. Chamberlain. Mr. Gladstone was consulted in the matter. The News expresses the belief that Mr. Chamberlain is the real author of the scheme, and that the Parnellites will reject the bill with contempt.

Commenting editorially on the bill, the News says: "The government are sanguine that they can carry the bill. It is possible that many Liberals will support the measure as a welcome instalment. If the bill passed all the world will know that Ireland owes it to Mr. Gladstone's bold initiative and to that alone."

ONTARIO CENTRAL FAIR.

A Great Success and People and Directors Delighted.

PORT PERRY, Oct. 7.—Large as was the attendance at Wednesday's Fair, it was quite eclipsed by to-day's (school-children's day) when probably not less than 6000, or 6500 people were present. The procession of prize horses and stock was advertised for Friday and will take place then, but at the suggestion of the President, Mr. James I. Davidson, a procession of these magnificent animals took place in the horse-ring about 5 o'clock this evening. The Heintzman Band promenade concert in the Main Building to-night was largely attended. The Directors are well satisfied with the success achieved. The Ontario Central has made a name for itself, complete success having crowned the efforts of the Board. The scenery visible from the balcony of the building is most pleasing. To the east and stretching up north are the blue waters of Lake Scugog, and in the other directions are slopes and plains, woods and fertile fields, while close by lies the pretty town itself, the abode of a busy and energetic people.

HINDOOS AND MOHAMMEDANS.

The Former Grossly Insult the Latter and Bloodshed Ensues.

DELHI, Oct. 8.—The ill feeling recently aroused between the Hindoos and Mohammedans here over mutual violations of their religious principles culminated in a riot last night and several persons were killed. The immediate cause of the bloodshed was the profaning of Jumma Musjed, or the great mosque, by a Hindoo sectarian leader, who tied a small pig in a painful posture within the sacred edifice so that it squealed with all its might. This enraged the Mohammedans, and they at once assaulted the Hindoos. Native religious agitation is continually gaining dangerous activity. One cause of much of the trouble is the fact that butter in common use has been found to have been adulterated with pig's fat. At Bombay a society has been organized to propagate hostility to Mahommedanism and to inculcate a general knowledge of the true Hindoo religion.

Advices say rioting continues and business has been stopped.

EVICTIONS IN IRELAND.

An Emergency Man Badly Wounded.—Poor Law Guardians Imprisoned.

DUBLIN, Oct. 8.—During an eviction at Tromoree, near Milltown, Maltbay, to-day a desperate attack was made upon an emergency man, whose ear was severed from his head by a stone thrown by one of his assailants. Two arrests were made.

At the Newmarket-on-Fergus petty sessions Mr. Bennett, Chairman of the Ennis Board of Guardians, and six Nationalists were committed for trial on a charge of unlawfully causing the erection of huts on the lands of several landlords with the object of intimidating them. Bail was accepted for the accused.

Was She a Free Agent.

PARIS, Oct. 8—Mayor Gallet of Egleny had an only daughter, aged 21, who was in the habit of retiring into seclusion in a convent for a period every year. This year she did not return home as usual and the father was written to that his daughter had decided to consecrate her life to God. M. Gallet asked for a final interview. The request was refused. Backed by a number of neighbors he went to the convent and demanded that his daughter be produced. Again he was refused, the nuns declaring that she had left there. Then the crowd forced an entrance. The girl was found in a remote part of the convent and carried off in triumph.

Shadowing the Boodlers.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—There is not one of the 1884 aldermen that is in town now that is not continually under the surveillance of detectives. This is due to the fact that both District Attorney Martine and Inspector Byrnes fear that since the rendition of the Jachne decision the indicted boodlers are desirous of becoming exiles in Canada. Those whose trials are set down for this month are being especially watched.

The Western Union.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—A consultation of Western Union Directors was held this afternoon. After its close Russell Sage stated that at the annual election to be held on Wednesday, there would be several new names placed on directors' ticket; among them that of Austin Corbin. It is generally believed that the changes mean that the Drexel-Morgan interest is to dominate in the company's affairs. The directors emphatically deny this.

More Snubs for Kaulbars.

SOFIA, Oct. 8.—Gen. Kaulbars met with a cold reception at Sistova. A meeting of 1000 of the inhabitants declared against the intervention of Russia. Gen. Kaulbars notified the officers of the Bulgarian army stationed at Sistova by letter to meet him and hear his message from the Czar. The officers replied that he should address the Bulgarian Government.

Colors Consecrated by a Catholic.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—The Government has ordered an inquiry into the facts concerning the consecration of colors of the Irish fusiliers by a Catholic priest at Devonport on Sept. 7. The military authorities have censured all now known to have been connected with the affair.

The Evacuation of Egypt.

BERLIN, Oct. 8.—The Vossische Zeitung states that M. Herbette, the new French Ambassador to Germany, comes charged with a proposal for a European conference in March, 1887, for the purpose of demanding that England evacuate Egypt, the evacuation to be followed by the neutralization of Egypt.

Tory Standard Bearer in North Bruce.

TARA, Ont., Oct. 8.—At a full meeting of the Liberal Conservative Convention of North Bruce, composed of 116 delegates, Mr. McNeill, M.P., was unanimously elected to represent the party

Mgr. Capel's Reception.

From the New York News.

Mgr. Capel, the well known English Roman Catholic society priest, who came here some years ago to preach, it is said, the doctrines of his Church to society and wealthy people, is now a badly faded star of that Church and under its severest bans. When he came here he brought with him letters of introduction to the Jesuit Fathers of this city. This they considered sufficient authorization, and they permitted him to deliver his first American sermon in their Church of St. Francis Xavier in Sixteenth-street, and induced the alumni of the St. Francis Xavier College to entertain him at their rooms on Twenty-eighth street. Very soon his habits attracted the attention of the fathers and of the priests of the archdiocese. His good knowledge of wine, and his persistence in seeking women's company, excited comment, and led to an investigation, the result of which was that he was forbidden by the Archbishop to exercise any priestly function in the diocese and would not even be permitted to say private mass. He left here for San Francisco, but the odor of his life had gone before him, and no priest, secular or religious, of the archdiocese, would receive him.

It was asserted in a despatch published to-day that he was cared for by the Jesuits of San Francisco on his arriving there, and that they did so because they are not on cordial terms with the Archbishop of the diocese. An intimate friend of Archbishop Riordan of San Francisco was seen to-day by a News reporter, and he informed the reporter that Mgr. Capel was not in any way noticed by the Jesuits of the Pacific slope, and also that the most cordial relations exist between the fathers and their diocesans. He added that the San Francisco Jesuits could not notice Mgr. Capel on account of the information they must have had of his conduct in this city before he had to leave it.

According to the despatches now coming from California the conduct of the learned Monsignor in the West has not been an improvement on his latter days in New York. Scandals that Catholics look on with disgust when associated with a priest are coupled with his name.

The news comes that he is now living on a California plantation with the wife of a man whose hospitality he has outraged.

Anything to Get Drunk With!

Two ancient beverages are being introduced into Great Britain on account of their supposed medical virtue. Palm wine, or laksi, is made from the sap of the date palm. Trees in full vigor are selected for tapping. The juice escaping from the wound is conducted by a reed into an earthenware pot, and may amount to nearly two gallons daily at first, gradually sinking to about half that quantity toward the end of the tapping, which is seldom allowed to exceed a month. Much of the "wine" is drank fresh, when it resembles sparkling cider, but becomes insipid after losing its carbonic acid. Its color is opalescent and milky. After undergoing alcoholic fermentation it contains 4.38 per cent. of alcohol, 22 carbonic acid and 5.60 of mannite. The Moors make extensive use of a spirit prepared from the water in which comb is boiled in treating beeswax. This water, being impregnated with honey, is allowed to ferment, and is then distilled; the spirit is called maharga. It is flavored with anise-seed or with raffa—that is, fennel seed.

The Daily Examiner.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1886.

WHILE the Dominion Government, as represented by Sir John Macdonald and the Mail, are indulging in harlequin transformation acts and handing bogus repudiations that deceive nobody, while they are resorting to the most extraordinary tactics, in view of the coming elections, the Ontario Government with a general election ahead also, is keeping in the even tenor of its way, looking after the interests of the country. It is at present doing much towards promoting the colonization of the Nipissing back country. The North Bay and Temiscamique colonization road will soon be completed to the western boundary of Widdifield township and ten miles distant from North Bay. While the Dominion Government seeks to make political capital of the most unworthy and undignified tricks, the Ontario Government seeks the same end by showing by its acts that it has the welfare, good Government and prosperity of the province at heart.

PETERBOROUGH CENTRAL.

THE LAST DAY, IN THE AFTERNOON.

Winding up the Programme—Exhibitors Getting Ready to Decamp—Parade of Prize Animals in the Ring—Exciting Equine Contests for the Special Prizes—Closing the Gates—The Success of the Exhibition.

Friday, the last day, was a rather dull one at the exhibition grounds. There were comparatively few visitors. Exhibitors, directors and all seemed to feel that the serious business of the affair was over. However, in the afternoon interest revived in prospect of the contests in the horse ring for the special prizes. At two o'clock this part of the programme opened, and it was close on six o'clock before it was completed.

At three o'clock the programme was interrupted to admit of the parade of the prize animals. A long procession of cattle and horses made a complete girdle of the half-mile track, and the visitors were reminded of the loading of Noah's ark, that is, if in those days they had thoroughbred bulls and gigantic stallions that brought down half a ton at every step. The parade was a pretty sight, as the prancing stallions and kittenish colts; the sedate bull and the sportive heifer, filed in front of the grand stand.

THE DISPLAY OF SPEED.

In the stallion contest for the "Brewery Cup," presented by H. Calcutt, Esq., the prize for first place and a cash prize of $6 for second place, Mr. John Simpson's "Lapidist Chief" and Mr. James Miller's "Honest Morgan" entered. "Lapidist Chief" secured the cup and "Honest Morgan" the honest cash.

The entries for the pair of fastest driving horses brought out —, Calvert, of Alnwick, and Robert Hicks, of Nassau. Mr. Hicks' team won the first three of the five heats, thus securing the prize.

THE SPEEDIEST DRIVING HORSE.

This event brought out M. McGregor's "Maud M.," W. Clancy's "Clara C.," John Simpson's "Lapidist Chief," F. J. Daly's "Fanny B.," R. J. Lundy's "Factory Girl" and A. P. Morgan's "Little Ned."

The first heat was a most exciting struggle as well as struggle, "Fanny B." and "Little Ned" making a game neck-and-neck go for first place, the other horses, excepting "Factory Girl," being distributed at various points in the rear. "Little Ned" got to the wire, in the quick time of 2.40, first; "Fanny B." on his wheel, and the "Factory Girl" a good third,

The second heat was trotted in 2.43, the "Factory Girl" this time asserting her right this to first place.

The third heat was the signal for "Little Ned" getting in his work in 2.41, but it was a tight go, the "Factory Girl" being well at his ide, "Fanny B" 3rd.

The fourth heat fell to "Factory Girl" in 2.43, "Little Ned" second.

The fifth and final heat also fell to "Factory Girl." She came in under the string in 2.43, with the $30 stove to cook her bran mash on this winter, while "Little Ned" shouldered the shot-gun, ready for the partridge thickets.

The contest between the leading horses was a decidedly exciting and game one throughout. Mr. Harry Winch drove the "Factory Girl" to the front and Johnny Newhall worked "Little Ned."

The 100 yards foot race, three in five heats, was won by Archie Moore, in three consecutive heats. His opponent was D. Miller.

The mile foot race was contested by D. Rose and M. Bird. Rose won in 5.02.

This concluded the contest for prizes in connection with the Central Exhibition for 1886. Very speedily the building was entirely dismantled and the exhibits cleared away. The horse stables and pens were assigned to six months vacancy—till the next show—and the grounds were speedily deserted.

A SUCCESSFUL EXHIBITION.

Altogether the exhibition was a gratifying success, especially considering that exhibitions were in progress at Port Hope and Port Perry at the same time. The magnificent weather contributed in no small degree to this success, while the president, directors and officials worked hard to attain the end gained. The secretary, Mr. D. D. Gallelley, was very efficient, painstaking, obliging and correct. He gave excellent satisfaction throughout. The financial outcome is excellent, though detailed figures are not available for purposes of comparison. The number of bona fide entries was 1,506, as against 935 last year. The success of the present exhibition will be a great encouragement to the directors to greater effort for the next year. With the excellent accommodation for visitors the town affords, with unequalled railway facilities, and with the erection of sufficient buildings, the holding of the Provincial in Peterborough is only a matter of time.

Keene.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Mrs. Read, wife of George Read, Esq., died last Saturday, after a lingering and painful illness of over two years. The funeral took place on Monday afternoon from the Presbyterian church, where the funeral services were held, in consequence of the serious illness of her youngest daughter, and from which the sorrowing friends and a large concourse of friends accompanied the remains to the Keene cemetery. The deceased lady was highly respected by all who knew her, and her departure will be long felt as a sad loss by those connected with her by ties of blood and affection.

Monday.—We sincerely regret to learn that Miss Agnes E. Read passed away at about half-past six this evening—a few hours after her mother's funeral. Mr. Read and his afflicted family have the sincerest and most heart-felt sympathy of the entire community in their sad and double bereavement.

On Monday evening, September 26th, while the family were all away at church, some thief or burglar entered the premises of John McIntyre, son of the late Peter McIntyre, lot 15, con. 8, of Otonabee, and ransacked the house in search of money. The thief entered the cellar from the outside, all other avenues being secured, and passing up to a room upstairs, in which was a bureau, opened two drawers by breaking one lock and bending and springing another. Money, no doubt, was the object as nothing else is missing, although notes papers and sundries were scattered about the room. The sneak got no money, however, for his pains, although two gold dollars were in one of the drawers. They were sent years ago from California, by a brother long since dead, and are valued as souvenirs of the loved and lost.

Saturday night last, some one entered the garden of Dr. Massie, pulling up and scattering several cabbage heads, and leaving bars of the front gate down on departing, that cattle of the roads might enter. Again on Sunday night, the fence on the rear of the garden was pulled down, opening it to a pasture field. Of all beings, the character who could be guilty of such an act is the most contemptible. A burglar may be in want; even a hen-roost thief may be hungry, and low though they are, they stand on a higher level than the creature who maliciously destroys property from mere spite. The Dr. has been the subject of considerable persecution since the Scott Act contest last year. If a man does wrong deliberately for the sake of it, or for some private gain or selfish purpose, we can understand why he might be the subject of ill-will or even persecution. But when one is actuated by motives of the purest philanthropy, without shade of self-seeking or thought of gain; when the aim and object is to do good to his fellow man, even if in the manner of doing it he should be mistaken, he earns the charity and deserves the sympathy and support of all good and honest men; and that, too, independent of differences of opinion on the issue.

"Tyranny!" say some; why, all law is tyranny, at least restriction, tyranny against evil. But when it shuts up the avenues of temptation, keeps the erect from stumbling, raises the fallen, and protects the helpless and the innocent and the suffering, it is liberty in the truest sense.

FIVE MILLION POUNDS.

By C. WESTRE REID.

"I went to my dear uncle's room as about ten o'clock, after being told by his servant that he was ready to see me. I spoke a few moments to him, and then, according to our usual custom, I read to him from the Bible for a few minutes. After that I went to his dressing room and mixed one of his powders, taking it from the box supplied by Dr. Carrick. It was one of the ordinary powders. I am quite certain of that. He drank it off without making any remark, except that I had given him a bitter dose. He then said he was very sleepy, so I kissed him and left his room. I never saw him again alive." The attention of the prisoner having been directed to the fact that she was known to have purchased strychnia recently, she said: "I bought the strychnia at my uncle's request. It was to be used for poisoning the rats. I was uneasy at having such an article in my possession, and I placed the poison in a drawer in my bureau which I always kept locked. It remained there until the day after my uncle's death. I remember entering my dressing room then, and finding that in my grief and excitement I had left that drawer open. I have a vague recollection of feeling startled at the thought that some one might have got at the poison, and I resolved to make it more secure; but whether I threw it into the fire as I originally intended, or hid it somewhere else, I cannot at this moment remember. I shall remember all about it soon, I feel certain; but I was so much confused at the time with grief and horror that my mind grew in a whirl, and I hardly knew what I was doing. I fear I am not much better yet, but perhaps by and by I shall be all right again."

To my surprise the next witness called was Daisy's own familiar friend, Mrs. Cawthorne. Her distress, however, was evident and her testimony did little to strengthen the case of the prosecution. She was asked regarding the conduct of Mr. Mauleverer after he had learned what had passed between Daisy and myself, and she was compelled to say that the millionaire had betrayed very great excitement, and had treated his niece for a few days with extreme harshness. She, however, Mrs. Cawthorne declared, had behaved through it all like an angel—and indeed, my lord, if you knew her you would know that she is an angel, the best that ever lived," cried the good woman, despite the attempts of Hawk to keep her to the point. I felt as if I could have embraced her on the spot.

Cross-examined by Mr. Belmore—"You said that Mr. Mauleverer showed great excitement and treated the prisoner with harshness 'for a few days.' How long, Mrs. Cawthorne, was that before his death?" "He changed for the better about a fortnight before his death—about the time when Dr. Branksome and Mr. Fendyke left the bath."

"And just before the 24th of October, what was the nature of his relations with his niece?" "He was on excellent terms with her. On the very day on which he died, I told her that I felt certain that all would come right between them in the end."

"And did she make any reply?" "She said she hoped it would be so, as it would be miserable both for her and for her uncle to live in perpetual estrangement."

Fendyke was the next witness. He produced Mr. Mauleverer's will, and, amid a general murmur of excitement, gave some details as to the amount of his wealth. By the will that had been duly executed in the month of August in London the prisoner inherited everything. Early in October he (the witness) had gone down to Grant Lorton Hall on business, and had there received instructions from Mr. Mauleverer to prepare a second will, by which, in the event of the prisoner marrying Mr. Cyril Fenton, the property, which under the first will was to be vested in trustees for her benefit, was to be applied to the erection and endowment of public hospitals in the Australian colonies, with the exception of a sum of fifty thousand pounds, which was to be paid to Miss Stancliffe on the day of her marriage. When these details were given I thought that the people in court, and especially the well-dressed women in the galleries, turned to my darling with more kindly looks than those with which they had hitherto regarded her. Poor fools! They could look upon that sweet face, and not read there the plain signs of purity and innocence. Yet no sooner did they know of the wealth which was now hers than they began to doubt and be suspicious, and allow the strong conviction of her guilt which they had previously entertained to be disturbed. It was incredible to them that a woman who was at this very moment the owner of millions should be a vulgar murderess!

There was one part of Fendyke's evidence, however, which told heavily against us. It was that in which he related how, at the request of Mr. Mauleverer himself, he had made Daisy acquainted with the terms of the new disposition of her uncle's property.

"And what did she say in reply?" was the question put by Hawk.

Fendyke adjusted his pince-nez, and, with a momentary assumption of that air of self-satisfaction which had distinguished him in happier days, but which had undoubtedly been missing of late, said: "Miss Stancliffe is a lady, sir. I did not expect any show of vulgar emotion when I told her of what was practically her disinheritance, and I was not disappointed."

"And how comes it, sir," cried Belmore, rising to cross-examine him, "that this will has never yet been executed?" "I was leaving the hall immediately after taking Mr. Mauleverer's instructions, for Norway, where I had business to transact on his behalf. The fair copy of the will had to be made by my clerks in London, and I myself suggested that the matter might stand over till my return.

"Ah! You were going to Norway, you say; rather a stormy voyage at this time of the year; and you would of necessity be leaving your client, a delicate old man, for several weeks, yet you did not think it necessary to complete his will before your departure?" "I did not."

"Now, sir, are you quite sure that Mr. Mauleverer was in a proper state of mind at that time to execute a will?" "I should certainly say he was; but I am no doctor."

"Was he not under the influence of an extraordinary degree of excitement about that period?" "He was certainly very much excited."

"Now comes it, sir!" cried Belmore.

"Would you be surprised to hear that this excitement was such as to lead him to employ one of his servants to abduct Mr. Fenton, the gentleman towards whom he appeared for some reason or other to entertain so extraordinary an antipathy?"

It was Daisy's turn to start and look surprised at this question, as, indeed, most persons in court did. I had never told Daisy the truth about my voyage to the north, nor should I have allowed that truth to be made known now but for the imperative demands of Mr. Belmore.

Fendyke was manifestly disconcerted by the question.

"Come, sir," cried Belmore, "I must have an answer." "I heard something of it."

"Heard something of it! Why, were you not aboard the ship in which that gentleman"—pointing to where I sat—"was abducted?" "Yes; I know that such an abduction took place by the orders of Mr. Mauleverer."

CAPTAIN WILLIAM SLATER, No. 27 Granville Street, Halifax, N.S.
N. WASHINGTON, M. D., Throat and Lung Specialist, Toronto.
DEAR SIR,—When you visited me in the latter part of January of this year I had been given up to die of consumption by a consultation of Physicians, Drs. Reid and Oliver, prominent physicians of Halifax who considered that my recovery was simply impossible. I had no hope myself nor had my family. When you expressed a hope of my recovery it was received with a doubt. Confined to my bed, very low, weak, wasted, night sweats very bad, troublesome cough, raising large quantities of matter—in fact every appearance of a speedy death. After using your Respirator and Spirometer and medicine I began to recover very fast, so much so that during three bad winter months I have gained from 20 to 25 lbs., and was able to walk out on Every Sunday. My strength is daily increasing, and I shall be able soon to be at work. To you I owe a deep sense of gratitude, and can assure those who are suffering as I was to consult you. You can make what use of this letter you see fit, and thanking you for what I consider a most wonderful treatment.
I remain, yours truly,
CAPT. WM. SLATER.
Later,—Fully recovered and at work.

LOCAL NEWS.

Memorial Window in St. Luke's Church.

During the past week a beautiful memorial window was placed in St. Luke's church to the memory of the late William and Clara Mills, of Ashburnham. The window was erected by the family of the deceased, and is the work of Mr. Jos. McCausland, Toronto. It represents the presentation of the child, Jesus Christ, to the Lord by his mother, in the temple at Jerusalem, before the aged Simeon when, according to the law of Moses, his parents brought him to Jerusalem to present him to the Lord, and to offer a sacrifice of a pair of turtle doves. Simeon is represented as taking the infant Christ in his arms, while Mary is kneeling at his feet. The scene is admirably portrayed in rich and chaste coloring and makes a most beautiful picture and window. "In memoriam of William and Clara Mills" is nicely lettered near the bottom of the window, while immediately above appear the words "There is a step between me and death." On the head a scroll is held by two angels bearing the words "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

"The Gilded Age."

The Baird Comedy Company presented to a good house last night Mark Twain's celebrated play, "The Gilded Age." The performance was up to the usual excellence of the company, Mr. Baird as "Col. Sellers" and Georgie Gardiner as "Laura Hawkins" being particularly attractive. By request, "Uncle Josh," the roaring comedy, will be presented to-night.

Police Court.

At the police court this morning James Fair was charged by P. C. McGinty with being disorderly in a public place and also with carrying a revolver. He admitted the first charge, and explained that he carried the revolver with the purpose of taking it to a gunsmith to get it repaired, and in proof of his statement showed that the pistol was not in working order. The magistrate found him guilty of the first charge and fined him $2, and dismissed the second charge.

Two vags, who had rested in the cells over night, were dismissed.

Personal.

Mr. J. J. Daly and bride returned home last night from a trip through the Western States.

We have to thank Mr. J. W. Sheridan, of New York, for late interesting American newspapers.

Police Magistrate Holland, of Port Hope, was in town to-day. He visited the police court this morning to see how sinners are dealt with here.

Mr. A. D. Cartwright, son of Sir Richard Cartwright, is playing football with the Toronto team to-day.

The Ever-Popular Bellegham

Among the most striking recollections which visitors to the exhibition took away from town were those of the great furniture establishment of Mr. D. Belleghem. Hundreds visited it during exhibition week, and those who were not of town were surprised at its great magnitude and capabilities in the way of producing and displaying fine furniture. A new factory enlarged doubly in size and manufacturing capacity fills the ten thousand square feet of wareroom space with splendid furniture products, whose variety and extent are kept up to the mark by prompt importations of the most recent innovations. With so immense a stock of such unusual variety, with prices of the most reasonable character, it is no wonder to everybody that Belleghem's wares are in such great demand, and that any person wishing to furnish a house of any kind in becoming style, be it hall or hut, is certain of satisfaction by applying to D. Belleghem. Not only is his Furniture department complete, but his Undertaking department is correspondingly so. In proof of the satisfaction his services in this line give, the following unsolicited letter may be given:

BERLIN, Oct. 4, 1886.

Mr. D. Belleghem,

DEAR SIR,—The many friends and acquaintances of the late Mrs. Woodsend, were very much pleased with the natural appearance of the remains of the deceased. The body was life-like in every respect, no part being misplaced, discolored, or the least tainted, and from all appearances would have kept for some days, which would be remarkable considering the distance the body was conveyed. Wishing you further success in your profession.

I am yours truly,
R. REID.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.

Will innovations never cease? The latest is Two Topsys and Two Lawyers, Marks Sr. and Jr., in Uncle Tom's Cabin, as introduced by Abbey's Double Mammoth Uncle Tom's Cabin Company at Booth's Theatre during the past week. The introduction of this novelty is no doubt one of the principal causes for the enormous houses to which this excellent company is continually playing.—New York Herald, March 26th.

Work Among the Indians.

The Rev. C. F. Wilson, the indefatigable missionary and friend of the Indians, will preach on his work among the Ojibways tomorrow morning at St. Luke's church, Ashburnham. Mr. Wilson is the head of the Indian homes at Sault Ste. Marie, and takes a deep interest in Christianising and civilising the Indians of Canada. His address will be well worth hearing. Service at 11 a.m. Seats free.

Canada's Sweetest Singer.

Mrs. Martin Murphy, of Hamilton, who will sing at the first of Messrs. Parker and MacDuff's concerts on October 14th, is allowed to be Canada's best opera, oratorio, and ballad singer. Lovers of music should not fail to hear her. Six sittings may be had for $2. The plan of the hall will be found at Hartley's music store.

Preparatory Services.

Services preparatory to the regular quarterly communion services to be held on Sunday, were held in St. Paul's church on Friday evening, conducted by Rev. Mr. Hay, of Campbellford.

Boys Football Match.

A football match was played this morning between the boys of the third form of the Collegiate Institute and a team picked from the remainder of the school. The third form team won by 32 points to 12.

Central Exhibition Diplomas.

In addition to those parties to whom diplomas were awarded, as published in yesterday's issue, there should be John Fraser, for mechanical drawing, and Wright & Payton, for pumps.

Mr. Dan. Belleghem has purchased from Fitzgerald & Stanger a handsome phaeton top buggy. It is of the latest and nobbiest style and in point of beauty, is a credit to the manufacturers.

Young Men's Meetings.

The meetings for young men in the Y. M. C. A. rooms are growing more interesting as the season advances. All young men are invited to attend them. They are held on Saturday evening at 8 o'clock and Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Mr. Orr Bennett, B.A., of Queen's College, will be present at the latter.

Portrait of Patti.

Mr. E. J. Hartley has decorated the window of his music store with a beautiful colored portrait of Adeline Patti, the famous singer, which he purchased in New York while visiting the city last week.

THE RIGHT MAN IN THE RIGHT PLACE.

The commodious hotel known as the Eastland House is now presided over by Mr. R. Elmhirst and his obliging and courteous wife. The travelling public may now depend upon having their wants supplied in a manner second to no house on the road. Richard is a genial fellow and will conduct his business well and upon fair and honest principles. May success attend him.

THE MILL.

The grist and saw mills are now doing a good business. Frank gives good flour and honest weight every time. If farmers would clean their wheat better than they do, they would have no occasion to fault the quality of the flour.

Free Trade.

The reduction of internal revenue and the taking off of revenue stamps from Proprietary Medicines, no doubt has largely benefitted the consumers, as well as relieving the burden of home manufacturers. Especially is this the case with Green's August Flower and Boschee's German Syrup, as the reduction of thirty-six cents per dozen has been added to increase the size of the bottles containing these remedies, thereby giving one-fifth more medicine in the 75 cent size. The August Flower for Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint, and the German Syrup for Cough and Lung troubles have, perhaps, the largest sale of any medicines in the world. The advantage of increased size of the bottles will be greatly appreciated by the sick and afflicted, in every town and village in civilised countries. Sample bottles for 10c. remain in the same size. eodw41tf

High Praise.

The well-known firm of N. C. Polson, & Co., of Kingston, writes that Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry has long been considered the best remedy for Summer complaints in the market, and adds that their customers speak in the highest terms of its merits. Wild Strawberry is the best known remedy for Cholera Morbus, Dysentery and all bowel complaints. 2w40&d

A Modern Miracle.

In a recent letter from R. W. Howton, of Deloraine, Ont., he states that he recovered from the worst form of Dyspepsia after suffering for fifteen years; and when a council of Doctors pronounced him incurable he tried Burdock Blood Bitters, six bottles of which restored his health. 2w40&d

A Speedy Cure.

As a speedy cure for Dysentery, Cholera Morbus, Diarrhœa, Colic, Cramps, Sick Stomach, Canker of the Stomach and Bowles, and all forms of Summer Complaints, there is no remedy more reliable than Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. Dealers who sell it, and those who buy it are on mutual grounds in confidence of its merits. 2w40&d

THIS is a maxim which may be wisely applied to municipal and business matters as well. I would respectfully call attention to the fact that I have just returned from the wholesale markets where I have purchased my well assorted stock of

BOOTS AND SHOES,

For the Fall and Winter Trade.

I would specially call attention to my Boys' and Mens' Balmorals, warranted to keep out wet and snow; Ladies' and Childrens' Boots and Shoes, Rubbers, Overshoes, etc. Altogether the best and cheapest stock of boots and shoes ever placed on the local market. Everything guaranteed first-class. Give me a call at my shop, corner of Sithune and Sherbrooke Sts. and you will save money thereby.

All of my stock has been made by hand. None of it has been sewed by machinery to rip and give out after a few weeks wear.

Repairing neatly and promptly executed at cheap rates.

I wish to return thanks to those who so kindly bestowed their patronage on me since commencing business one year ago, and I trust by giving good value to merit a continuance of the same

EGAN'S IMPERIAL TRUSS

Read the following extract from a letter of a well-known citizen of St. Catharines,—hundreds like it:

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 20th, 1886.

GENTLEMEN,—Being over 70 years of age, and over 30 years ruptured, looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two springless trusses made in this place, costing me $40. Nothing would retain my Hernia. I have worn your truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort; even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down, it holds me perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. H. KING.

This new Spiral Spring Pad Truss has taken ten years to make it perfect; is guaranteed to hold the very worst case during the hardest work or severest strain. It will cure every child born; and 60 out of every 100 of adults. Be warned—don't waste your money on useless appliances, but send stamp for our treatise; it contains full information, your neighbors' testimony, price list and questions for you to answer. When writing please mention this paper. Address,

BULGARIA ELECTIONS

A RIOT PROVOKED BY RUSSIAN AGENTS IN SOFIA.

LONDON, Oct. 9.—A special correspondent had an interview with Kaulbars at Rustchuk. The Russian agent condemned the conduct of the regents as absurd and unpatriotic. He said Bulgaria without the Czar's protection would be powerless, bankrupt, and become the prey of agitators at home and abroad. "The Czar," continued Kaulbars, "graciously sent me upon a conciliatory mission, and Bulgaria's salvation depends upon her acceptance of Russia's overtures. The Czar will never recognize the elections while the officers to whom even Battenberg granted amnesty remain in prison. The regents are evidently intriguing to re-elect Battenberg and then negotiate a surrender on better terms. But the Czar will never consent to the adoption of any course other than that already laid down by Russia. The British and Italian consuls increase the dangers of the situation by their language, which is most violent. I will start to-morrow morning for Shumla, going thence to Vienna, and from there returning to Rustchuk. I have reason to believe that troops hostile to the Regency occupy Biela, an important telegraph centre controlling communication with Sofia."

The correspondent says that Kaulbars is evidently astounded at and irritated by the obstinacy of the Government and people.

At Rustchuk on Saturday Gen. Kaulbars met a deputation of avowed Russophobists. The Russian agent made a speech, and when he had concluded the delegates expressed a wish to discuss various questions with him. The general thereupon became enraged and, turning his back on the delegates, dismissed them from his presence.

The Bulgarians Protest.

SOFIA, Oct. 9.—A deputation which met Kaulbars at Rustchuk protested against statements made by him, and adopted a resolution expressing confidence in the Government. The inhabitants of Shumla decided not to appoint a delegation to meet Kaulbars on his arrival there.

The Russian agent at Sofia has returned to Russia. In a circular note he announced his intention of forthwith ceasing diplomatic relations with Bulgaria.

Rumored Military Preparations.

VIENNA, Oct. 9.—The Political Correspondence says the Bulgarian Ministry has addressed a circular note to the foreign diplomatic agents at Sofia, declaring all foreigners who meddle with the polling at the elections will be expelled. This action, the Correspondence says, is obviously directed against the Russians.

The Tageblatt has a telegram from Lemberg stating that the Russian War Office has instructed the commanders of four infantry divisions in the Districts of Psykor, Dunaburg, Minsk and Orel to recall all men on furlough and hold the troops in readiness to proceed to the Austrian and Roumanian frontiers in five days. The report is not confirmed from other quarters.

The Neue Freie Press publishes a dispatch stating that military preparations are in progress in Russian Bessarabia. Other telegrams affirm that Russian occupation of Bulgaria is very improbable.

The Fremdenblatt says: "After Prime Minister Von Taaffe's speech coming events may be looked forward to with firm composure."

The Elections in Progress.

SOFIA, Oct. 10.—A hundred and fifty Macedonians, paid by the Russian consulate, came in during the elections and created a disturbance. A mob surrounded the consulate, from the windows of which a volley was fired, eight persons being wounded. Some shots from the mob entered the German consulate. Soldiers now occupy the streets. The elections will be finished to-night. The Government claim a majority.

Libel on a Preacher.

HULL, Eng., Oct. 6.—A criminal summons was issued yesterday against the editor of the Hull Critic for libel against a non-conformist preacher named Hopper Joselin. One of the paragraphs claimed to contain the libel was as follows:

The devil went out one day
In search of an impious preacher,
And he wasn't very long on his way;
Before he collared old Beecher.

Flushed with his grand success,
Satan, the champion "conquer,"
Rushed along in his dirty dress,
And collared old Booth and Hopper.

It is said Gepheral Booth would have joined in the complaint but that he is in America.

He is Traveling Incog.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—The statement is confirmed that Lord Randolph Churchill is traveling under the name of Spencer. He will remain at Dresden a few days and then go to Vienna, returning by way of Paris.

The Triumph of Morality

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Violet Cameron and her company are drawing very poor houses and the speculators who bought large quantities of tickets for the first week are in a sad plight.

Soft Enough.

"See that girl over there trying to mash me," said Jones to Brown.

"Well, she's losing her time trying to mash you," replied Brown. Your soft enough as it is."

THE CHICAGO STRIKE.

PINKERTON MEN WITH WINCHESTERS ON GUARD AT THE YARDS.

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—Advices from the stock yards report the situation unchanged there this morning, and no disturbance of any kind has occurred. Armour & Co. say that the report that their beef killers have also joined the strikers is a mistake, and that that part of their establishment as well as those of the other packers is running as usual, the strikers being confined to the hog killers. About 2000 head of cattle and 9000 hogs were received at the yards to-day.

Over 150 Pinkerton men were lodged and breakfasted at the Transit House last night, and at 7 o'clock this morning emerged from the dining-room and shouldered their Winchester rifles, which were stacked in the corners around the lobby. Capt. Foley called the men to "attention" and they were marched through the yards. At each packing-house a squad of men left the line, and in charge of a sergeant, defiled through the yards and were stationed at the various corners where they could command a view of the entire premises. They were watched with interest and hatred by the men in working clothes, and by hundreds of men without dinner pails and attired in their Sunday clothes, who by this time had assembled in force in the yards and observed the proceedings at the various packing houses. This morning it was rumored throughout the yards that the packers had appointed a committee to adjust the difficulties with the men. It was asserted that the packers had been making money under the new schedule of wages and were satisfied with the advance, but could not afford to allow the machinery to remain idle for two extra hours. The terms of settlement to be offered to the men, it was claimed, was to advance the wages for ten hours' work to the same rates per hour paid during the last five months for eight hours. This, it was said by some of the men, would be satisfactory, but others said that nothing but eight hours' work would be accepted. The great mass of men were noncommittal on the subject, and referred all questions to the leaders. The situation from a business point of view is a decidedly gloomy one. The market is very dull, there being no demand for fat hogs for packing. There is, however, some little demand for light hogs for the Eastern market. The buyers are sitting around the office waiting for prices to go down. Commission men have advised their customers not to ship in any more cattle, and telegrams of inquiry as to the condition of things are being received all the time. The commission men are very gloomy.

The Armour employes continued at work to-day, deciding to remain on duty until the ten-hour rule absolutely entered into effect. When a force of armed Pinkerton men entered the building this morning the men ceased work and informed the foreman that they would not work while this armed force was present. As a result the Pinkerton men were sent away and the men returned and put everything in shape before leaving for the day.

A notice was issued by the assembly of the Knights of Labor, of which nearly all the strikers are members, asking saloon keepers in the Town of Lake to close their places of business during the strike, and the men have been cautioned not to use violence in any form.

What Mr. P. D. Armour Says.

CHICAGO, October 9.—In an interview on the subject of the strike, published this morning, Mr. P. D. Armour says: "The matter of returning to the ten-hour system rests entirely on the question of self-protection. Chicago packers are unable to compete with Cincinnati or Kansas City people on a basis of eight hours, chiefly on account of the lessened cost of operating at those points. The corn belt has moved pretty much westward and hogs are cheaper out there. Chicago packing house property has greatly depreciated in value of late, and for my part I stand ready to dispose of my Chicago stockyard property at twenty per cent. less than cost. I have expended $300,000 on my Kansas City packing houses this season. I would gladly have my men work eight hours if I could do so in justice to myself, but under the circumstances this is not possible, and self-protection, of course, must be primarily regarded by the packers. I work fourteen hours myself every day and ten hours' daily toil is certainly not a great hardship for my employes. I do not anticipate closing down work entirely, although for a few days we may not operate at full capacity. There are plenty of men who are willing to work ten hours each day and take the place of the strikers if they are assured of protection, and this will positively be offered them to the fullest extent. I trust that the old hands, however, will take a proper view of the situation and reconsider their action, which is certainly ill-advised."

A Knight Says the Trouble is Ended.

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—John Foley, member of the Knights of Labor Executive Committee, said to a correspondent at 10 o'clock to-night: "The great strike of the 20,000 packing-house men is practically ended, and you will find that Monday work will be resumed on the old basis of ten hours' pay for eight hours' work. At all events there is no danger of any trouble, and thus far there has not been the slightest occasion for the presence of armed police."

Sunday at the Yards.

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 10.—There was no disturbance at the stock yards to-day, but the entire vicinity of the great packing houses was bustling with significant preparations. The Pinkerton force at the yards has been increased to 400 men and each is armed with a revolver and a repeating rifle.

The North Shore Transfer Denied.

QUEBEC, Oct. 9.—The Chronicle editorially denies the statements published in Montreal that the North Shore Railway is to change hands and says that one of the conditions on which the government transferred the road to the C. P. R., was with a distinct and unreserved understanding that it would form part of the C. P. R. system.

Return of the Alert.

PORT HAWKESBURY, N. S., Oct. 9.—The government steamer Alert, Lieut. A. R. Gordon, R. N., commander, has just returned from the Hudson Bay and has brought the several parties of observers back, all well. They had one bad case of scurvy on board, but he is much better now. The vessel came to anchor here to-day and has been ordered to proceed to Pictou, N.S.

A Fiendish Crime.

HAZLETON, Pa., Oct. 9.—J. Brusunski, a 10-year-old lad, and Frank Siglis, this morning discovered the murdered and outraged body of young Brusunski's mother. The spot where the body was found indicated that a fierce struggle had taken place before the crime was committed. There were two deep cuts behind each ear which had been inflicted by some sharp instrument, and the face was badly scratched. The place where the body was found indicated that several persons were engaged in committing the outrage.

A $400,000 FRAUD.

The Swindling Transactions of the Head of a Big Chicago Firm.

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—N. M. Needl, a partner in the well-known packing house of J. C. Ferguson & Co., is in Canada. He has issued bogus warehouse receipts for people aggregating $400,000. He has practically burst his firm. The loss will fall altogether on the banks, $100,000 on a New York bank. "The banks here who lose by it," said a prominent director, "are all rich and will not know the loss. The worst loss is on a New York institution. Needl left for Canada the night before last and no one has heard from him." Needl was a fine looking man of about 48 years. He was managing partner in the firm of J. C. Ferguson & Co., which was a very old and rich one, and came originally from Indianapolis. He has been a big speculator on the board and in stocks, and has been wrong for a long time.

Among the banks which have suffered by Ferguson's failure are the Bank of Montreal, Chicago, and the Bank of British North America. A banker who is familiar with the facts says the Bank of British North America will suffer to the extent of $75,000. The same banker said there were a great lot of receipts in the hands of Board of Trade capitalists so that while the loss of the banks is only about $250,000, there will be at least $1,000,000 on the outside. The firm's capital was $200,000. The banks will probably take out no attachments for the reason that all that was found in the warehouse where there should be half a million dollars' worth of property was 300 bags of salt. The actual amount of the embezzlement cannot be told until a thorough investigation has been made.

THE QUEBEC GOVERNMENT.

The Provincial general elections are now on in Quebec, and the electors are about to decide upon the fate of the Ross Government. That this administration will be ousted there is good reason to believe, and that it is worthy of condemnation is shown by the following schedule of its political virtues, furnished by the Montreal Herald:—"The Government of Quebec, called the Ross Government, shows its breeding to perfection. It is the legitimate successor to the Chapleau and Mousseau Governments, whose political lives were lives of scandal and scheme for themselves and of disgrace and dishonor to the province. The series of public robberies and plunderings, of wasteful expenditures and financial deficits, which led English-speaking Conservatives and Liberals alike to welcome and support the joly Government during its brief rule, were consistently followed up under Chapleau, under Mousseau, and under Ross. The same base elements, the same political malefactors, the same contractors' horde, the same panderers and satellites, the same comprehensive brood of self-seekers and officials who have lived upon the province all their lives, supported without exception the Governments of Chapleau, Mousseau and Ross. When the country is told that the Ross Government is a "good" Government, the country naturally turns to see whether the political criminals that sustained its predecessors are in the train of Premier Ross; and the result is the exposure of the fact that not a familiar face is missing. The men who shouted for the worst administrations that a Canadian province was ever cursed with are shouting to-day for the Ross Government. Every politician, every contractor who has tasted of public plunder is for the Ross Government. Every heeler, spotter, telegrapher, bummer and fraud that supported Chapleau or Mousseau, support Premier Ross just as enthusiastically. And yet we are coolly told that this is "a good Government," offering no attractions to the ringsters and tricksters who for nearly twenty years past have made responsible government a by-word in Quebec! It requires a conscienceless politician to emit such a pretence and a cheek of brass to maintain it.

Otonabee Roads.

To the Editor of the Daily EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—Will you be kind enough to publish a small letter in your valuable paper concerning bad roads in Otonabee. In your issue of Sept. 30th I see that a certain ratepayer has been in a dangerous position, while going from Westwood to Peterborough, owing to a bad culvert in the road between Mr. Thomas Fife's and Mr. James Carter's. Now, Mr. Ratepayer, if you never have anything more to annoy you through your travels of life, you may count yourself very safe, as I travelled over that culvert a score of times last summer and did not see the danger you speak of. I have also travelled over a large part of the roads in Otonabee and I consider the roads are in a good state. It appears to me that this culvert was washed out in the spring. When every one was busy and no timber on hand, it was temporarily fixed to do till it could be done right. You know, Mr. Ratepayer, that there are no better officers to be got than those we now have. They have done their best to keep the roads all good, and you have the face to say we must compare them to the roads in the back bush. You must have some relations in the woods, or you must be trying to hit the old councillors a crack on the shins, so you will have a chance to sit in the chair next year. Ah! that man is not made yet. Now, Mr. Ratepayer, I am surprised at a man like you to publish such a hard letter as you have done; if it had been some numbskull it would have been over-looked. Hoping there will be no more complaints of so small a thing as this, I must let you know that I am no officer of the township.

Yours truly,
A. GOOSE.

Westwood, October 10th, 1886.

Ennismore.

During the first week of September nothing of note occurred. Two mornings of white frost, and at 3 p.m. of the 6th and 7th the thermometer stood at 90° in the shade, but on the 9th we had a small thunder storm and from the 8th to the 30th inclusive we had rain on 19 days to the depth of 4 inches and 6-100 of an inch. Although not having any severe storms as we had in August, still raining almost daily made it rather disagreeable. We had three thunder storms during the month with only a small amount of rain on each occasion. We had fog on three mornings and white frost on three mornings in all. Our first ice on the 15th, with the thermometer at the freezing point, leaving the average temperature of the month at 56 29-30°. The following are the different points from which the wind was blowing at sunrise, respectively, namely: North-east 2 days, east 4 days, south east 5 days, south west 9 days, south 4 days, north-west 3 days, and west 3 days.

TROUBLE IN INDIA INCREASING.

The Situation at Delhi Becoming Serious—Viewed by Critical.

DELHI, Oct. 10.—The situation which has grown out of religious rioting between Hindoos and Mohammedans is extremely critical. Reinforcements have been sent here from Meerut to help preserve order. The Mohammedans last evening attacked a small Hindoo temple. The Hindoos defended it and a desperate fight ensued, in which the Mohammedans triumphed. The victors besmeared the temple with blood, smashed the idols and destroyed the building. Twenty Hindoos were so badly wounded that they had to be removed to hospitals, where they lie in a critical condition. Troops are sustaining order to-day. Serious riots prevail throughout the districts of Jeypoor and Kattywar. The Bengal Government has declined to interfere with native religious customs by initiating reforms looking towards abolishing infant marriages and enforced widowhood. The Government insist that the question of reform in these matters must for the present be left with the Hindoos themselves.

Speaking Out in Meeting.

DUBLIN, Oct. 10.—William O'Brien, speaking at Gurteen, Sligo, yesterday, said that if the people allowed the winter to pass quietly the Government would use that fact against Messrs. Gladstone and Parnell. The English Liberals would not mourn if another batch of rack-renters was expelled from Ireland. If the Government was foolish and criminal enough to suppress the National League a thousand secret societies would arise instead.

Father Mathew's Anniversary at Cork.

CORK, Oct. 10.—Five thousand members of the League of the Cross, a Total Abstinence Society, paraded through the streets of Cork to-day to celebrate the anniversary of the birth of Father Mathew. They were accompanied by bands of music and sang Irish, French and American national songs. Although rain was falling 20,000 persons viewed the parade.

Lord Churchill at Prague.

LONDON, Oct. 11.—Lord Randolph Churchill has arrived at Prague. The Brussels Nord informs His Lordship that he is badly mistaken if, he suspects the approach of war between Austria and Russia.

A Liberal-Unionist.

OTTAWA, Oct. 10.—Wm. Jacks, of Glasgow, Scotland, is in the city. Mr. Jacks who was elected for Leith, a flourishing seaport town in close proximity to Edinburgh, opposed Mr. Gladstone and the Home Rule vote in the House of Commons. When seeking re-election in his constituency as a unionist, Mr. Gladstone opposed him and the result was that Mr. Jacks resigned, allowing the "Grand Old Man" to be elected by acclamation. Afterwards Mr. Gladstone decided to sit for Midlothian. In the contest which followed Mr. Jacks, however, failed to get elected, a Gladstonian being returned in his stead. He is making a pleasure tour through Canada, and is accompanied by his wife.

Another Gloucester Schooner Pined.

HALIFAX, N.S., Oct. 9. The Gloucester schooner Marion Grimes, Capt. Landry, put into Shelbourne last midnight for shelter. The weather moderated during the morning, and at 6 o'clock Capt. Landry proceeded to sea. He was overtaken by a boat's crew from the cutter Terror, and detained for not reporting at customs eight miles from the Custom House. The facts were telegraphed to Ottawa, and this evening instructions were received to formally seize the Marion Grimes and inflict a $400 fine. Capt. Landry says he did not imagine he would have to report unless he was in port twenty-four hours.

A Forger From Pottsdam, N.Y.

OTTAWA, Oct. 10.—Austin Routiliffe, who was arrested in Aylmer Friday at the instance of G. W. Barbour of Pottsdam, N.Y., on a charge of having forged notes to the extent of $400 at that place, and who is now in jail at Aylmer on a eight days' remand, will be brought up for a preliminary trial to-morrow or next day. Mr. Barbour is here with evidence, and if it is sufficient Routliffe will be remanded until a warrant for his extradition has been applied for to the Minister of Justice.

"Now, upon your oath as a man of honor, did you not think that the deceased was not in a fit state of mind to manage his own affairs? and was not that the real reason why you never completed the execution of the will?" "I certainly thought him very much excited and prejudiced on that particular point, and I felt that on the whole it would be better to give him time for reflection before completing the deed."

"In fact, you are prepared to swear that when you left him, two weeks before his death, he was so much excited that his mind was not in its normal condition?" "I think so."

Postyke was the last witness of any importance. It was now five o'clock, and everybody in court was exhausted. No one, therefore, was surprised when the judge announced that at this point the trial would be adjourned till the next day. Daisy was instantaneously spirited out of the dock; but before she left the waiting room below I was allowed to have a momentary interview with her. She was wan and worn; but her sweet composure enabled me to keep up my courage in her presence, and to assure her that, so far as I knew, all was going well.

Almost any delusion I might have entertained on that point were only too quickly dispelled. I had hardly finished my simple dinner at the Station hotel when Harding appeared at the door of my room to tell me that Mr. Belmore desired to have an immediate interview with me.

I followed my friend to the room of the great advocate, who was also staying at the hotel. I found Mr. Belmore and our solicitor, Mr. Bryce, in serious consultation.

"I sent for you, Mr. Fenton," said the famous lawyer, "that I might have a little frank talk with you. I understand that you are really the principal friend of Miss Stancliffe, and I have heard of the relationship in which you and to each other. Now I want to tell you at once that she is in an almost desperate position. We shall do our best for her to-morrow, of course; but I must say candidly that I see no hope of avoiding a conviction. I have only two points to make—one is the possibility of a blunder on the part of the doctor in preparing Mr. Maulever's medicine, and the other the chance that Maulever may have committed suicide. But I do not think I ever had a stronger case to meet, nor have I ever been compelled to trust to more worthless straws than these."

I heard him with a dread that seemed to render me voiceless.

"Yes," he continued, "we must not deceive ourselves. Everything is against us. But I am anxious to save the poor child if I can. I do not believe her to be guilty, and I hope that something may yet turn up to prove her innocence. I heard all that you have told my learned friend here, and I wish to give you some advice. You must move heaven and earth to find out, first, what has become of the strychnia which Miss Stancliffe bought—for I do not believe that it has been destroyed—and next where the man Gregson, of whom you have told Mr. Harding, is to be found. In my opinion he possesses the key to this mystery. But the first step you should take is to obtain a power of attorney from Miss Stancliffe, enabling you to act in relation to all her affairs as fully as she herself could do. This must be obtained, if possible, before her conviction, and Mr. Bryce, who has an order for an interview with her, will get it from her to-night."

Then the great man shook me by the hand, and, expressing his desire to help me in every possible way, politely bowed me from his room.

I have no heart to write of the events of the next day. There was again the eager crowd of sightseers in court, and again all the actors in the dismal tragedy appeared in their old places. The jury looked jaded after their night of confinement at a neighboring hotel; and I was conscious that not merely upon myself, but upon my darling, the awful ordeal of the previous day, and of the sleepless night which followed, had told heavily. But she preserved the same air of sweet serenity which had distinguished her from the first.

Mr. Hawk's speech for the prosecution was the coldest, clearest and most merciless exposition of the fact that could by any possibility have been laid before the jury. He was no novice at his work, and I shuddering felt when he sat down that he had not left a loophole by which Daisy could escape. That Mr. Maulever was undoubtedly poisoned by strychnia on the night of October 26, that the prisoner was the person who must have committed the crime, and that she had a strong motive for committing it—these were the three points which he labored to establish beyond the power of refutation, and it was only too clear that he did establish them in the minds of nearly everybody in court.

Mr. Belmore took a very different line. His desire evidently was to get away as far as possible from the evidence, and in a speech which was full of impassioned and eloquent pleading he dwelt upon the difficulty of imagining that a young girl like Daisy could ever have conceived, much less could have carried out, so deadly a plot against the life of her relative and benefactor. Nothing but absolutely convincing evidence could justify the jury in finding a verdict against her. In this case where was there any absolute demonstration of her guilt? Who could say that Mr. Maulever had not, under the influence of the excitement from which he was undoubtedly suffering, committed suicide? and in that case everybody knew the proverbial cunning with which a madman sought to hide the traces of his acts; but even if this hypothesis were to be rejected, was it not possible, and even probable, that weak, muddle-headed Dr. Carrick might have made another mistake, and by inadvertence given strychnia instead of bromide of potassium to his patient? In all events, with these two possibilities staring them in the face, the jury would incur a terrible responsibility if they returned a verdict of guilty against the prisoner.

I think that if the jury had given their verdict then it would have been in Daisy's favor. But the summing up of the judge, clear, careful and impartial, destroyed the [illegible] element [illegible] I do not [illegible] to [illegible] jurymen [illegible] to [illegible] jury were [illegible] [illegible] Amid that [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

LOCAL NEWS.

The Deer-slayers Abroad.

This morning at the unearthly hour of one o'clock, the old reliable Wm. English hunting party, which, in its corporate capacity, if not in its individual, has, for the past twenty years and more, made annual excursions among the deer haunts of the back country, set out for Gull Lake. The party consists of Messrs. J. J. Landy, R. B. Lundy, B. A. Morrow, Bernard Morrow, R. E. Wood, Harry Winch, A. Sawers and J. E. McIntyre. Mr. Wm. English, the captain of the contingent, will not be able to take command till Saturday, when two or three others, campfollowers, will set out for the camp. The wagon train of the tourists consisted of two of Mr. T. Fitzgerald's busses, one containing the "army" and the other the baggage. The impedimenta of the forces consisted of a complete supply of provisions and an immense stock of blankets, pillows, etc. Among the utensils taken is a most complete camp cooking stove, made by Mr. Adam Hall. This will be the special care of Mr. Warwick Ayling, who accompanies the party as chief cook. Mr. Alex. Simpson, of Harvey, will act in the capacity of guide, counsellor and general protector of the party, selecting their camping grounds and giving pointers as to the most probable places where the sportsmen can get the drop on a deer. They expect to get to their destination and settled to business on Friday, October 15th, the date at which the slaughter of deer is permitted by law. The party is a jolly one, and withal composed of good shots. A short life will be the lot of the unhappy deer that comes within range of their pieces. The company take with them seven canoes, seven hounds, and the best wishes of the EXAMINER for a pleasant and successful outing—good weather, good hunting, good shots, good yarns, and a safe journey home.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.

An immense audience witnessed a very creditable rendition of Uncle Tom's Cabin, by Abbey's Double Company, at the Globe Theatre, last night. The introduction of the Two Topsys and Two Marks is a decided novelty, and kept the spectators in one continual roar of laughter. But no small share of praise was awarded to Eva's Pony, "Prince," and the æsthetic Donkey, "Oscar," the latter animal being ridden by Marks Sr. The scenic effects were perfectly magnificent.—Boston Herald, April 18th.

The Steamer Cruiser.

Owing to the change of time in the running of trains on the Lakefield branch, the steamer Cruiser will not, of course, make her usual connections. The steamer is, however, still in commission, and parties who may desire to pass over the lakes can drive up, and by giving one day's notice, a party of from 10 to 12 up can secure the boat for the day desired.

Market Moms.

The market on Saturday was unusually bright and active. Fruit and vegetables were the principal offerings. Prices were quoted: Butter, 18 to 20c.; eggs, 14 to 16c.; chickens, geese, 60c.; ducks, 75 to 80c. per pair; turkeys, 60c. to $1; potatoes, 50c. per bag; tomatoes, 80c. per bush.; cabbage, 25 to 30c. per doz.; apples, 50c. to $1 per bag.

Make Way for the Crowd.

Tremendous bargains in dry goods, groceries, and boots and shoes are now waiting for the people to seize them. The immense stock of the Bon Marche in these lines must be cleared out at once. Unheard of bargains will be given as the goods must be sold. Don't miss this chance. All the goods are first-class. The stock must be cleared out. Don't neglect the great Bon Barche.

The Newest and Best.

For the best tea Morrow & Tierney cannot be beaten. They have just received a large stock of new season teas, in which they are offering special inducements. Camping parties' supplies and fancy groceries a specialty.

The annual matches of the Peterborough Rifle Association open to-day at the Association range. The list of prizes includes several valuable pieces, and it is expected some tall shooting will be done. Target punishment will be continued to-morrow.

The Toronto Teams Victory.

A "match" between teams representing Toronto and Peterborough was played on the P. A. A. grounds on Saturday. It was one of the ties for the Ontario Association Cup; and if the Torontos win their other ties as easily as they did this, the result will not be long in danger. Peterboroughs were out-weighted and out-run and out-played. Whenever a Peterborough man did, by any chance, get hold of the ball, there were three or four Toronto men ready to pile on to him, while if a Toronto player got the ball from a scrimmage, the Peterborough players let him have a good start before they proceeded to spoil his fun by "tackling" him. A good many of the home team handled the ball with great care, as it if were red-hot or made of egg-shells. There is not the slightest doubt that this town has the material for a good team (with practice). Without constant practice and thorough training, good Rugby football is an impossibility. It is to be hoped that our team will give a better account of themselves next time, and there is not the slightest doubt that they will do so.

Play began about half past three, and was divided into two parts of 45 minutes each, Peterborough defending the west goal. At the very outset Toronto scored a rouge, and then three ties in rapid succession, none of which were converted into goals. The ball very seldom got as far as the centre field; but a good run by Dr. Brennan, who was noticeable for the home team throughout, took the ball well towards the Toronto goal; and after the scrimmage which ensued, Gordon Smith cleverly kicked a goal for Peterborough the only score made during the match. Before half time Toronto had twice forced Peterborough to touch down; and had also two ties, the latter of which was converted into a goal. Score 20 to 6.

When ends were changed, things were no better for Peterborough, in fact Toronto scored so often that the thing became monotonous, and the play was almost all around the Peterboro goal. Fine runs by Cameron and Murts for Toronto deserve special notice, as does the play of Saunders, who kicked a goal from the field. During this half Toronto scored one goal from the field, five ties (one of which was converted into a goal) and two safety touches, thus making the score 66 to 6;—three goals, nine tries and minor points to one goal.

The passing of the Toronto's was much superior to that of the home team, few of the Peterboro's ever making an attempt. The home team, however, have some good runners, and during the game Dr. Brennan and Moore were noticeable for their all round play. For Toronto, Cameron, Murts and Saunders played especially well.

Church Chimes.

At the Charlotte street Methodist church last evening Rev. Mr. Wallace preached a special sermon on "Reasons why we should love and read the Bible," after which reception services were held, a number being admitted to full membership in the church.

At the conclusion of the morning services in St. Paul's church the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered. Rev. E. F. Torrance, pastor, conducted the services.

On Sunday Rev. E. F. Wilson, of the Missionary Diocese of Algoma, preached in the morning in St. Luke's, Ashburnham, and in the evening at St. John's. On both occasions unusually large congregations listened with deep interest to unusually excellent, earnest and instructive sermons. The rev. gentleman has been engaged in mission work among the Indians (at Sarnia at first and recently in the Algoma diocese) for about twenty years. His special work is the establishment and maintenance of schools for Indian children, where the latter are taught trades and industrious habits, in addition to the truths of the Christian religion. At Sault Ste. Marie there are two large schools built, in which are at present accommodated sixty boys and twenty-six girls. A handsome stone chapel provides a place of worship for the two. These schools, over which Rev. Mr. Wilson is head, are the parent ones, and it is in contemplation to establish four branch schools, two in the Northwest and two within Ontario. To form a nucleus to the former, twelve Sioux Indian lads from the Northwest received training at the Algoma schools this summer. These schools were established in 1873, and are supported entirely by voluntary contributions, of which, $25,000 have been forthcoming. The different English Church Sunday Schools in the Dominion maintain several pupils by their gifts at a cost of $75 per year. Rev. Mr. Wilson takes no collections and solicits no subscriptions. He says if he did these, it would be his work and would fail. By presenting the claims of his work to Christian liberality and putting his faith in God, it became God's work and it cannot fail. Rev. Mr. Wilson is accompanied by two of his pupils, a Sioux and an Ojibway boy. He will speak at the missionary meeting in St. John's school room to-night and the lads will also be present.

What's the Attraction?

There seems to be some great attraction in our northern village for the young men of town. No less than thirty of the flower of Peterborough youth invaded Lakefield yesterday. Why is this thus? Are not the young ladies of our town sufficiently handsome and fascinating to suit the fastidious tastes of these sprouting local lords of creation?

The Drama.

Baird's Comedy Company closed a successful week's engagement at the Opera House Saturday night. "Uncle Josh" was presented to a full house, whose frequent applause attested the excellence of the acting. Mr. Baird intends returning to Peterborough next February, when he will, no doubt, be greeted by even larger houses than greeted him on this occasion.

The Lakefield Branch.

To-day at 12.30 a change of time took place in the running of trains on the Lakefield branch of the Midland. Hereafter a train will leave Peterborough daily at 12.30 p.m., arriving in Lakefield at 1.20 p.m. Leaving Lakefield at 3.20 p.m., the train will arrive in Peterborough at 4 p.m.

Said the Spider to the Fly.

Saturday night Hunter street, near the Otonabee bridge, was the scene of a "leetle unpleasantness," which most happily ended in wind. An irate individual who had been imbiding too freely of "castor oil," stood in front of an hotel and invited a citizen who had incurred his anger to step outside "till he broke every bone in his body." The aforesaid citizen, like the sensible person that he was, heeded not the mandate, and after wasting his flowery eloquence on the desert air for half an hour, the insatiable enemy went on his way. A similar disturbance occurred in the same neighborhood on Sunday night.

Mr. Grandy is also negotiating for the saddle and Mr. Larmer may expect to receive that, too, before long. If he could also get the pony, his collection and happiness would be complete.

EGAN'S IMPERIAL TRUSS

Read the following extract from a letter of a well-known citizen of St Catharines,—hundreds like it:

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 20th, 1886.

GENTLEMEN,—Being over 70 years of age, and over 20 years ruptured, looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two spring ones from made in York State, costing me $30. Nothing would retain my Hernia. I have worn your truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort; even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down. It holds me perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. H. KERR.

This new Spiral Spring Pad Truss has taken ten years to make it perfect; is guaranteed to hold the very worst case during the hardest work or severest strain. It will cure every child sure; and 80 out of every 100 of adults. Be warned—don't waste your money on useless appliances, but send stamp for our treatise; it contains full information, your neighbors testimony, price list and questions for you to answer. When writing please mention this paper. Address,

BULGARIA ELECTIONS

OVERWHELMING MAJORITY FOR THE GOVERNMENT.

SOFIA, Oct. 11.—The Government attach little importance to the action of the Russian agent here in suspending diplomatic relations.

All the members of the Ministry have been elected by immense majorities. The returns thus far received show the election of 400 Ministerialists and twenty-one Zankovists.

A crowd of fully 5000 met Gen. Kaulbars upon his arrival at Shumla. The spokesman told him that the people had full confidence in the Government. Afterwards a crowd assembled near a window where Gen. Kaulbars was seated and hooted at him. Twelve Zankovists who were going to pay their respects to the General appealed to the officers to disperse the crowd but they refused to do so.

M. Nekliudoff has addressed three notes to the Government and the foreign consuls. In the first note he says he will resume diplomatic relations with the Government in accordance with the instructions of Gen. Kaulbars, but condemns the Bulgarian circular, which, he says, may lead to a rupture. In the second he says Russia will declare the elections illegal and invalid, and in the third he officially protests against the attack on the Russian agency and the peasants who sought refuge there.

Reverberations.

Gen. Kaulbars has telegraphed the Czar that he must now be either recalled or furnished with troops. The failure of his mission is generally admitted.

It is reported that the Russian Government is preparing a note to the powers which will be the forerunner of decisive measures in Bulgaria.

A plot has been discovered to create revolts among Bulgarians by means of armed bands engaged by Russian consulates at Sofia, Philippopolis and Rutschuk. The ringleaders of the conspiracy have been arrested.

In the elections in Sofia for members of the great Sobranje to elect a successor to Prince Alexander all the Government candidates have been successful. M. Karaveloff, leader of the pro-Russians, received but 50 votes out of 1500 in his district.

At a meeting at Rustchuk to-day M. Stojanow read a despatch from Prince Alexander declining the money voted him by the Sobranje and saying that he was prepared to accept the throne of Bulgaria if re-elected.

All the Government candidates have been returned to the Sobranje, including Stambuloff, Radslavoff and Stojanoff.

BIG GOOSEBERRY REVELATIONS.

A Tory Paper's Opinion of the Daily News' Home Rule Salad.

DUBLIN, Oct. 11.—The Freeman's Journal describes the alleged Tory Home Rule scheme as a deliberate plan to split the National League organization and minimize the national demand.

The Irish Times pronounces the story that the present Government intends to propose a Home Rule Bill so palpable a canard that it is a wonder any journal could have been deceived by it.

The Conservative newspapers avoid a direct mention of the Daily News' statement that the Government will introduce a Bill giving four Provincial Councils to Ireland. The Standard refers to the big gooseberry revelations of important Cabinet secrets before the Ministers themselves have arrived at any decision.

The Times attributes the Daily News' story to the despair of the Gladstonian and Parnellite parties over the growing power of the Government and the Unionists' cause, on the failure of the rent war through the inclination of the landlords to offer and the tenants to accept reasonable reductions.

FAILURE OF THE FISHERIES.

Starvation Staring the People of Labrador in the Face.

PORT HAWKESBURY, N.S., Oct. 11.—Capt. Davies, of the schooner Brilliant, who has just returned from Labrador, fully confirms the reports of the failure of the fishery and the consequent distress of the inhabitants there and the people depending on that coast. He says that the ensuing winter will be a harrowing one, and that hundreds of people will inevitably die of starvation. The Newfoundland Government do not realize the true situation and are afraid to look the actual facts in the face, consequently they are not taking the steps imperatively necessary to avoid the impending catastrophe.

DRILLING IN LONDON.

One Hundred Thousand Armed Socialists Ready to Turn Out.

LONDON, Oct. 11.—The St. James Gazette says that enthusiastic Socialists declare that thousands of men are regularly drilling in London and they boast that they are able to put 100,000 armed men into the streets. The more moderate Socialists fear that the enthusiasts' nefarious secret drilling is telling dangerously on East End poverty and ruffianism.

Reported His Own Speech.

MONTREAL, Oct. 11.—The case of Dostraa against the Montreal Herald for $2000 damages on the ground that the report of Mr. McShane's speech in the City Council in which he called Donovan a "reptile" and other choice epithets was not a fair one, came up in court to-day. Hon. Peter Mitchell and a number of other men and civic officials were present. The trial was a most amusing one. It was shown that Mr. McShane and not the Herald reporter wrote the account of his speech which was published

PENSERY PRIVILEGES VALUELESS.

Americans Simply Demand Rights that Decency Demands.

LEWISTON, Me., Oct. 11.—Senator Frye says: "One of the results of the enquiry by the Senate Committee on the fisheries in the confirmation of the fact that both fishermen and owners of vessels agree that they require absolutely nothing of Canada other than the treaty rights of 1818. It is unnecessary for them to take bait in Canadian waters. All they need to enter Canadian ports for is shelter, wood, water and repairs. The privilege of fishing within three miles of the shore is valueless. The trouble is Canadians refuse us rights which their admissions we are entitled to. This must be stopped."

On the Downward Path.

HAMILTON, Oct. 11.—Lilly Davey, the Rochester young girl who was sent home by the Chief of Police some time ago, left for Rochester again this afternoon in charge of an older sister. She came back to Hamilton about two weeks ago, and has since been the companion of an Italian peanut vendor.

The boys found sleeping in the American Hotel stables were before the magistrate this morning. Three of them were sent home. The other John Murphy, was sent to the Reformatory for three years.

The Wentworth Assizes were opened by Mr. Justice Rose to-day.

Counterfeit Certificates in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—The city is flooded with counterfeits of the recent issue of ten dollar silver certificates. They were brought here from Pittsburg ten days ago by three men, who have been circulating them ever since. One has been arrested. It is thought the principal cities of the Northwest have been flooded in like manner.

Lacrosse Championship of Ontario.

The final contest for the lacrosse championship of Ontario commenced yesterday at Toronto. The competing lacrosse clubs were the Brants of Paris, Southern District champions; the Orillias of Orillia, Central District champions; the Young Canadians of Richmond Hill, Western District champions; the Thistles of Fergus, Northwestern District champions; and the Cornwall Juniors of Cornwall, Eastern District champions. The tournament was under the management of Mr. Dan A. Rose of the Ontario Lacrosse Club. It was arranged that each match should be limited in time to an hour and a half; that should any team score three games before time was up, the match should go to them at once; and that if not, the match should be given to the club scoring the greater number of games in the full time. Mr. J. Wilson and Mr. J. G. Gibson of the Ontario Lacrosse Club umpired all the games played. Mr. Rose acted as referee for the two first and Mr. J. D. Bailey of the Ontarios for the third.

The first game was called at 10.30 between the Brants of Paris and the Cornwall Juniors, and resulted in a three straight victory for Paris in 3, 3 and 10 minutes. The match was a virtual walk over for the winning team. The second game was played by Richmond Hill and Orillia, the latter winning by two games to one. This was a most interesting match, and notwithstanding the result appeared to be throughout in favor of the Hill. Their defence got right away with the Orillia home, but their home could not do likewise. The Brants of Paris then played the Thistles of Fergus. The latter team was three men short and had to fill in with some of their followers. They made a game stand, but were defeated three straight in 15, 3 and 10 minutes. The Brants and Orillia will play off at 10.30 to-day.

Each club brought along its little constituency, and money was dropped in wads. "Scraps" in the crowd gave a zest to the day's sport. Protests against players alleged to belong to other clubs were numerous. Some 500 people witnessed the games. Most of the teams complained of the roughness of the ground, but it appeared to make little difference, for the play, when stripped of some of its looseness, was of a first-class order. Really good throws, however, were few and far between.

Racing in the States.

BRIGHTON BEACH, Oct. 11.—First race, ¾ mile—Barb won, Belleview second, Suitor third; time 1.17¼. Second race, 1 mile—Revoke won, Mentmore second, May W. third; time 1.46¾. Third race, 1 mile—Grand Duke won, Bahama second, Eager third; time 1.46¼. Fourth race, 1¼ miles—Bonnie Prince won, Boaz second, Highroad third; time 2.09¾. Exhibition Baseball.

JERSEY CITY, N.Y., Oct. 11.—The Jersey City club tried conclusions with the New York League club here to-day. The giants were defeated by the better batting of the Jerseyites and the better field play as well. The game was called at the end of the eighth innings on account of darkness. The score stood: New York 4 r., 6 h., 4 e.; Jersey City 7 r., 11 h., 2 e.

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 11.—Detroit played an exhibition game with the Newarks to-day and were easily defeated. Getzein started in to pitch and the Newarks slugged him so hard that "Phenomenal" Smith, late of the Newarks, took his place. It didn't make the slightest difference, the "Phenomenal" was pounded quite as hard as the ex-Phenomenal. Seven innings were played, the score standing: Detroit, 3 runs, 7 hits, 1 error; Newark, 9 runs, 11 hits, 3 errors.

The National League Season Definitely Closed.

BUFFALO, Oct. 11.—The league season was finally closed with Saturday's games except for the odd game between Washington and Kansas City at the Capital. Kansas City won by 7 runs, 9 hits and 5 errors to 5 runs, 8 hits and 9 errors.

The clubs finish in the following order: Chicago, Detroit, New York, Philadelphia, Boston, St. Louis, Kansas City, Washington.

The American Association Season Closes.

BUFFALO, Oct. 11.—There was one American Association game to-day at Pittsburg with the Mets. The latter were beaten through their inability to hit Morris. Pittsburg scoring 4 r., 8 h., 3 e. to the Mets' 1 r., 3 h., 1 e.

The clubs of the Association finish in the following order: St. Louis, Pittsburg, Brooklyn, Louisville, Cincinnati, Athletics, Metropolitans, Baltimore.

The Henley Regatta.

LONDON, Oct. 11.—In the Consolation Race at Henley rowing regatta to-day, the first heat was won by John Teemer, who beat G. Perkins, jr. In the second heat W. East, jr., beat A. Hamm, and the final sculling handicap was won by G. Rubear, who easily defeated his opponent, J. Ten Eyck.

In the final heat of the consolation race Teemer defeated East.

Hamilton's Chief Constableship.

"Report has it," says the Spectator, "that a great many applications have been made for the position of Chief of Police, but the only application which has reached the City Clerk is one from Septimus A. Denison of Toronto, brother of the Police Magistrate, who sent in an application before Chief Stewart's resignation had been officially received."

Crowfoot Honored at the Capital.

OTTAWA, Oct. 11.—Crowfoot and the other Indian chiefs were presented with an address from the corporation this afternoon. Crowfoot made a speech in reply. He leaves for home to-night.

The Fires of Pennsylvania Workmen.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Oct. 10.—The workmen engaged in building a branch railroad at Plains Township, three miles from here, made a curious find yesterday. After making a blast in a shelly rock they found what appears to be the bodies of two well-preserved animals. They also found the petrified head of a monster snake. The specimens will weigh 200 pounds each. One of them has the perfect head and features of a bear [illegible]

A FLAG DIFFICULTY.

The Stars and Stripes Forcibly Hauled Down on a Seized Schooner.

HALIFAX, N.S., Oct. 11.—The seized schooner, Marion Grimes, had the American flag flying. Capt. Quigley of the Terror ordered it down. The order was obeyed, but the flag was run up again, and Capt. Landry refused to haul it down. Capt. Quigley with an armed crew boarded the Grimes and lowered the flag himself.

WOMEN AND MONEY.

Our Girls Should be Taught Business Principles and Habits.

"Every girl or woman," writes the author of "John Hvlifax, Gentleman," "who is now entirely dependent on her male relations—a position which, considering all the ups and downs of life, the sooner she gets out of the better—ought by the time she is old enough to possess any money to know exactly how much she has, where it is invested, and what it ought yearly to bring in. By this time she should have acquired some knowledge of business—bank business, referring to checks, dividends, and so on—and as much of ordinary business as she can. To her information of a practical kind never comes amiss, especially the three golden rules which have very few exceptions: No investment over 5 per cent is really safe; trust no one with your money without security, which ought to be as strict between the nearest and dearest friends as between strangers; and, lastly, keep all your affairs from day to day in an accurate order as if you had to die to-morrow. The mention of dying suggests another necessity—as soon as you are 21 years of age make your will. You will not die a day the sooner; you can alter it whenever you like; while the ease of mind it will be to you and the trouble it may save to those that come after you are beyond telling. It cannot be too strongly impressed upon every girl who has or expects that non undesirable thing, "a little income of her own," what a fortunate responsibility that is, and how useful she may make it to others. Happier than the lot of many married woman is that of the "unappropriated blessing," as I have heard an old maid called, who has her money, less or more, in her own hands, and can use it as she chooses, generously as wisely, without asking anybody's leave and being accountable for it to no one. But then she must have learned from her youth upward how to use it, she must not spare any amount of trouble in the using of it, and she must console herself for many a lonely regret—we are but human, all of us!—with the thought that she has been trusted to be a steward of the Great Master. Such an old maid often does as much good in her generation as twenty married women."

The Origin of News.

"What do you understand by the word news?" This is a question that was asked me the other day. "Why! something new that has occurred, I suppose," was my reply. "But do you know how the word originated?" I was obliged to confess my ignorance, and imagining my young readers may be as much in the dark, will tell them my friend's ingenious explanation, which she said she came across in an old book, printed long before you or I were born. N, you know, stands for north; E, for east; W, for west; and S, for south; so the four letters were combined together to form the word news, now used for all that is happening north, south, east, and west. A newspaper, therefore, tells us by its very name that it is a chronicler of events in all parts of the world.

Pretty Girls on the Dollar.

Some of the prettiest young lady clerks in the national treasury department are said to have been honored during Secretary Spinner's incumbency by having their features given to some of the goddesses that grace the currency; but the portrait of Martha Washington and as idealized head of Dolly Madison are the only accredited portraits of distinguished women that have been discovered.

More Boodlers Skip.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—It is rumored that ex-Ald. Kirk and Sayles, two of the indicted boodle aldermen, have left the city for parts unknown. It is said that after their trials were fixed they went to Kirk's Long Island residence, there taking a yacht which enabled them to board a sailing vessel for some foreign port. District Attorney Martine refuses to believe the report.

HOME AND FOREIGN.

The new Spanish ministry is more conservative than the preceding cabinet.

The Sultan has accepted Sir William White as British Minister to Washington.

Tammany Hall has nominated Abram S. Hewitt for Mayor of New York.

Father Galeot, who murdered Mgr. Izquirdo, Bishop of Madrid, has been convicted and sentenced to death.

Wilson Barrett appeared in "Claudian" at the Star Theatre, New York, last night, and was given an ovation.

At the unveiling of the Statue of Liberty in New York Chas. Bigot will represent the Paris press, and M. de Champs the city of Paris.

Michael Duffy, one of the New York aldermen of 34 has revealed the whole story of the Broadway steal to Inspector Byrnes.

Two hundred men and twenty-three anarchists have protested against the sentence of death passed on their brethren at Chicago.

La Republique Francaise, discussing the need of neutrality in Egypt, says that England's annexation of that country would amount to a casus belli.

Hazleton, Pa., despatch: It is reported that four Hungarians were murdered Saturday night at Buck Mountain by a crowd of their drunken countrymen.

The Republicans have split on the color line in the second and third congressional districts of Louisiana. White and colored candidates are now in the field in both.

Paddy Ryan has signed articles to fight John L. Sullivan eight rounds with small gloves at San Francisco within sixty days.

George Hazael, the once famous pedestrian, who for several years kept a saloon in Brooklyn, has gone to England, his native place, and has left behind him a large number of debts.

Monsignor Capel strongly denies the charges of improper conduct against him and has demanded of the New York Herald the name of its correspondent who formulated the charges.

The roof of the North Chicago rolling mill fell in yesterday. Edward Bevers, Michael Hoffman and Antony Smith were killed. Eight men were injured, three fatally. Loss in value only $30,000.

Gen. Jamont, in command of the French forces in Tonquin, Gen. Jamais and several officers of his staff have resigned, owing to disputes with the civil officers.

A petroleum well has been discovered under a house in Sligo. While the floor of the house was being repaired a quantity of oil suddenly burst forth. The spring is prolific.

Over 16,000 tickets have been sold for the testimonial at Exposition Park, Pittsburg, next Saturday, to Mrs. Rody Patterson, wife of the late Secretary of the Pittsburg Driving Park Association. Among the races will be a race between Jewett, Gossip, jr., and Mike Wilkes for $1000.

At Newmarket yesterday the race for the Clearwell stakes of £20 each with £300 added for 2-year-olds, distance about 5½ furlongs, 28 subscribers, was won by Mr. Manton's Lourdes, Lord Falmouth's Leonora being second and Lord Bradford's Chippeway third; time 1.12 2-5.

Death has made another call upon the ranks of Canadian horsemen in the person of Mr. John Eames, who died at his home in Hamilton Sunday, aged 26. Mr. Eames had been in delicate health for years. He was at the Glen Grove races Friday, but returned to Hamilton Saturday on account of an attack of hemorrhage at the lungs. The Hamilton Times truly says of deceased: "Straightforward and always obliging, he made friends of all whom he met. His knowledge of trotting horses was remarkable, and his memory was surely ever at fault for a date, a name or a circumstance, no matter how far remote, and the record, performances and breeding of every horse of note were as familiar to him as the alphabet."

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 12, 1886.

The Town Fathers

Become Warm Over a Discussion of the Scott Act—Chief Cooper Wants More Salary.

At the regular meeting of the Town Council Monday night the following were present:—Mayor Stevenson and Councillors Rutherford, Yelland, McNeil, McNaughton, Davidson, Cahill, Moore, Hartley and Kelly.

After the minutes had been read and approved, the following were read:—

From Richard Sheehy, asking that his statute labor tax be remitted.—Granted.

From Police Magistrate Dumble, as follows:—

PETERBOROUGH, Oct. 4.

DEAR SIR,—I understand that Chief of Police Cooper is asking an increase of salary. Now, I have carefully watched him during the last six months, and I am constrained to say that he has been a much more zealous and efficient officer than I expected. I am pleased to say that he is a good chief and a credit to the town. You know how hard it is for a man in his position to please everybody. I think your chief has been independent, and, of course, anyone who does fearlessly try to do his duty, will incur some hostility, and that especially from those who find him too efficient to serve their purpose.

It saves much trouble to have a Chief of his aptness and intelligence, and I hope the Council will pay him such a salary as will secure him from the terrible temptations a man in his position is exposed to. I am satisfied that the entire community would be sorry it he cannot be retained. A sense of duty compels me to commend your Chief.

Yours most respectfully,
D. W. DUMBLE, P. M.

The communication was referred to the committee on appointments.

A petition was read from P. C. Pidgeon, asking for a week's holidays.—Granted, providing the Chief consented.

From John Walton and several others, asking for an electric light on the corner of Murray and Aylmer streets; from W. H. Gough and others, asking for a light on the corner of London and Mill streets. Both were referred to the Fire, Water and Light Committee.

The following accounts were presented:—

George Hilliard, for lumber	$ 51 50
Copeland & McLaren, drain pipe	103 20
J. McIntyre	5 50
Mail Printing Company	26 00
J. W. Flavelle, charity orders	14 62
M. T. Butcher	5 00
Metropolitan Grocery Co	149 50
Metropolitan Grocery Co	7 50
R. White, livery	45 00
Baunell Sawyer, engrossing an address to the Lieut.-Governor	12 00

The accounts were all referred to the Finance Committee, except those of Messrs. McIntyre, White, Sawyer, and the Mail Printing Co., which were paid.

Mr. R. S. Davidson, chairman, presented the report of the FINANCE COMMITTEE.

To the Mayor and Council of the Town of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN,—Your Finance Committee beg leave to report and recommend the payment of the following accounts:

Otonabee bridge, town's share	$325 40
H. C Winch	1 00
Kingan & Co	39 38

All of which is respectfully submitted.
R. S. DAVIDSON,
Chairman.

The report was adopted.

FIRE APPLIANCES AND STREET LIGHTS.

Mr. Rutherford presented the Fire, Water and Light Committee's report as follows:

The Fire, Water and Light Committee beg to report and recommend that the offer of Fitzgerald & Stanger to build and fully equip a hook and ladder truck be complied with; also the offer of Douglass & Logan to construct salvage waggon: and also McAndrew & Noble to fully complete, in every respect, the plumbing required for firemen's bed-rooms; the tender of B. Shortly for swinging harness, be accepted.

In regard to the resolutions moved by Messrs. A. Rutherford and A. McNeil, asking for gas lamps and electric lights, referred to your committee for action, we beg to recommend the granting of the same; and the lamp at the east end of the bridge and in front of the temperance house be removed.

All of which is respectfully submitted.
A. RUTHERFORD,
Chairman.

The report was adopted.

MORE LIGHT.

Mr. Hartley moved, seconded by Mr. Moore, that an electric light be placed on the corner of Bethune and Edinburgh streets.—Carried.

Mr. DAVIDSON, moved, seconded by Mr. Cahill, that the right to straighten the course of the crack leading towards the bay be referred to the town commissioners—Carried.

Mr. MCNEIL, moved, seconded, by Mr. Kelly, that the town solicitor be requested to report as to what action he has taken in regard to the grade of the Railway on Bethune street.—Carried.

Mr. MOORE, moved, seconded, by Mr. Yelland, that the street Inspector be instructed to clean and straighten the bed of the creek at the corner of Stewart and Murray streets.—Carried.

SCOTT ACT FINES AND ENFORCEMENT

Mayor Stevenson called the attention of the Council to the matter of having the fines collected under the Scott Act flows placed to the credit of the County. He also referred to the way in which the Scott Act was enforced in Peterborough. Sunday drinking was indulged into a greater extent than he ever remembered before. He felt that the Council was doing wrong in sitting by and allowing such conduct.

These remarks led to a general discussion on the merits or demerits of the Scott Act, the remarks occasionally becoming quite personal. The police came in for a large share of censure, several of the councillors declaring that the officers of the law had not done their duty by the act. During a lull in the storm

Mr. A. McNeil moved, seconded by Mr. T. Kelly, that the Mayor be requested to interview the Dominion Government in reference to the memorial presented by this Council, asking the Government to allow the fines collected from Scott Act convictions to be placed to the credit of this municipality.

After further discussion, the motion was carried.

CRESCENT STREET.

Mr. Moore moved, seconded by Mr. Rutherford, that the town engineer be requested to make a drawing of Crescent street, showthe work required to be done to protect this street from damage from the water of Little Lake, and also furnish an estimate of the cost of such work; and that he consult with the Mayor and the chairman of the streets and bridges Committee regarding same.—Carried.

THE COMING CITY.

Mr. Cahill moved, seconded by Mr. Davidson, that a special committee be appointed to consider the advisability of applying for a charter of in corporation as a city, such committee to consist of Messrs. Moore, Davidson, Rutherford and the mayor and the mover, the first named to be chairman and that they report to this Council—Carried.

Mr. Davidson moved, seconded by Mr. Cahill, that an appropriation of $15 be made for fixing the intersection of McDonel and Mill streets—Referred to the streets and bridges Committee with power to act.

A POINTER TO THE POLICE.

Mr. Rutherford moved, seconded by Mr. Yelland, that the Chief and constables under him be and are hereby instructed to carry out in every respect the Temperance act of 1878, better known as the Scott Act, and failing to do this, the Mayor have power to suspend any officer or officers who wilfully neglect their duty.

Here the storm broke out afresh with renewed vigor, and in the midst of it a number the Councillors left the room, breaking up of the quorum. The Mayor then adjourned the Council.

The Ancheria at St. Johns.

ST. JOHN'S, N.F., Oct. 11.—The Ancheria has arrived here in tow. The passengers and crew are all well. She got in at 3 o'clock this morning. The steamer Miranda, which left St. John's yesterday in search, missed her, and she sailed to within three miles of the port when she was towed in by a tug.

A Mystery at Belfast.

His stock, fixtures and furniture were insured for $500 in the London and Lancashire Insurance Company. The building, owned by A. McCormick, was insured for $1300 in the Fire Insurance Company, which amount will cover the loss.

A Clergyman Burnt Out.

By T. WEMYSS REID.

Some one draws me back into my seat, and implores me, for her sake, to remain calm. I try to obey, and I sit trembling from head to foot, amid the dread silence which now falls upon the crowded court, while in a few fewest possible words, the man to whom hand the wielding of the awful sword of justice has been intrusted pronounces my darling's doom.

And then I wake as from a trance. Daisy is gone; the judge has departed; counsel and solicitors, jurymen, witnesses and spectators are all hurrying away, as though from the theatre when the play is ended. Some one takes my arm. It is Harding, who has had time to doff his wig and gown, and who now leads me unresistingly from the hateful spot.

CHAPTER XIV.

A RIFT IN THE CLOUDS.

Two days elapsed before I was allowed to see Daisy after her condemnation. Even then I should hardly have been permitted to have an interview with her but for certain powerful influences, which had been brought to bear on her behalf. Immediately after pronouncing sentence of death the judge had sent for Belmore, and had told him that he was by no means satisfied with the case as it stood, and that he had a strong conviction that the whole truth had not yet been learned. He found that Belmore entirely shared his views, and from him he heard of me and of the efforts which I was making to procure proof of my darling's innocence. It was the good judge who smoothed the way for me with the prison authorities and who made it possible for me to have free communication with Daisy in her cell.

But it must not be supposed that we—for Harding had formally devoted himself to my service in the task in which I was engaged—were idle during the two days of waiting before I was admitted to an interview with Daisy. Idle! how could we be idle! It was now the 6th of December, and I had already been warned that the day on which the martyrdom of my darling was to be carried out was the 28th of the same month. But three weeks were given to us, therefore, in which to establish her innocence. Even Harding—cool, kind, never-to-be-forgotten friend—desired that neither for food nor for sleep must one moment of that precious time be wasted unnecessarily. What, then, think you was my frame of mind?

Within a few hours of the passing of the sentence Harding was in London, where he secured the services of the most eminent private detective of the day. The special mission of this man was to find Gregson. My work on that dark day on which the trial ended was of a different kind. Putting all remembrance of the few weeks aside, I went to Branksome Fordyke and appealed to them to assist me in the task I had undertaken.

Dr. Branksome was just the same as he had ever been. Yes, I bitterly reflected, he was just the same; as icy, cool, pleasant in his manner, now as Daisy was lying under sentence of death as he had been on that first morning of acquaintance with him, when he did the honors of the yacht for her and for me. I could not bear the thought of this cynical selfishness. I had been angry against him when I first knew that he believed Daisy to be guilty. Now I despised him for his selfishness and would willingly have turned back upon him forever, if it had not been that I felt he might give me help in the work of saving my darling.

But very soon I found that this was not to be. I again told him my conviction that Flinter was the real instigator of Mr. Maulverer's murder, and repeated the reasons which led me to think so. It was the first time that Fordyke had heard the story of my finding the locket on "Forensic Medicine" on board the yacht, and of the way in which it opened at the pages dealing with poisoning by strychnia. I thought he seemed startled by my statement. It had no effect upon Branksome, however.

"I see what you wish me to do, Fenton. You are anxious that I should find a victim for the gallows in the place of poor Daisy, and you suggest Flinter for the purpose."

"And is that the way in which you speak of the girl whom you have known since she left her mother's arms, whom you profess to love?" I cried, my indignation.

"Dr. Branksome, if anyone had asked me what I thought of you a few weeks ago, I should have said you were one of the noblest and truest men on the face of the earth; but if anyone were to put the question to me now, I should be forced to tell him that I had found you to be as false as a friend, and mean and heartless as a man—one who can sit here in the full enjoyment of every luxury"—I had found the worst dinner—"when the child who has called you father is lying in the condemned cell! Aye, and who can even answer the prayer that he would join in the attempt to save her from her doom, with a cold sneer!"

He heard me without moving a muscle of his face, and when he replied he spoke in his usual voice. It was just as pleasant and equable in its tones as it had ever been.

"I wish you success and God-speed with all my heart, Mr. Fenton; and for the sake of Daisy I forgive your injustice towards myself. But I tell you this, sir, plainly: I have been convinced of her guilt by the evidence laid before the court; and while I am willing to join you in making every effort to obtain for her the mercy of the crown—nay, Mr. Fordyke will tell you that I am already taking steps for that purpose—I am not prepared to try to save her, whom I believe to be guilty, by throwing her sin upon another whom I know to be innocent."

What could I do in appealing to a man whose very cruelty was founded upon his love of what was right? I could not answer his logic, and I saw that it would be useless to upbraid him. But in my heart I hated and despised him.

"Then," I said at last, seeing that no help could be hoped for here, "I shall act for myself, and if I have to spend every farthing I have in the world and to devote every day that remains to me of life to the task, you may depend upon it that I shall yet confound you all by proving her innocence."

Of my interview with Daisy, when at last I was admitted to her in the condemned cell at the old Castle, I shall say nothing that does not bear directly upon the subsequent events. She was changed greatly when I saw her; but she declared that I was far more seriously altered than she was. And probably she was right; for I had nothing of that noble courage and resignation which had borne her up through all this time of agony. But I dared not speak this prompting to her lovers' talk. I had other work to do for her sake.

My first business I felt must be to get from her her own theory, if she had one, regarding the murder; and to prepare her way for that, I told her frankly all my own suspicions, and the story of my abduction, of which she had only heard for the first time during the course of the trial.

Little and Lively.

The times change and we change with them. Hardly larger than mustard seeds but composed of highly concentrated vegetable extracts, Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets" have caused the old style, large, drastic, cathartic pills to be abandoned by all sensible people. The little sugar-coated Pellets are a sure cure for constipation; for persons of sedentary habits they are invaluable. They are little and lively, pleasant and safe. 6dw41

Such a Family.

A father of three sons and five daughters was asked what family he had. The answer was: "I have three sons, and they each have five sisters." "Hey?" replied the interrogator, "such a family."

Free Trade.

The reduction of internal revenue and the taking off of revenue stamps from Proprietary Medicines, no doubt has largely benefited the consumers, as well as relieving the burden of home manufacturers. Especially is this the case with Green's August Flower and Benzhoe's German Syrup, as the reduction of thirty six cents per dozen has been added to increase the size of the bottles containing these remedies, thereby giving one-fifth more medicine in the 75 cent size. The August Flower for Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint, and the German Syrup for Cough and Lung troubles have, perhaps, the largest sale of any medicines in the world. The advantage of increased size of the bottles will be greatly appreciated by the sick and afflicted, in every town and village in civilized countries. Sample bottles for 10c. remain in the same size. eodw41tf

In a Dangerous Condition.

Any man, woman or child is in a dangerous condition when neglecting a constipated state of the bowels. There can be no perfect health without a regular action of this function. Burdock Blood Bitters cure constipation by imparting a healthy tone to all the secretions. 2w40d

The Truth Down Deep.

H. WASHINGTON, M. D., Throat and Lung Specialty, Toronto.
DEAR SIR,—When you visited me in the latter part of January of this year I had been given up to die of consumption by a consultation of Physicians, Drs. Reid and Oliver, prominent physicians of Halifax who considered that my recovery was simply impossible. I had no hope myself nor had my family. When you expressed a hope of my recovery it was received with a doubt. Confined to my bed, very low, weak, wasted, night sweat, very bad troublesome cough, raising large quantities of matter—in fact every appearance of a speedy death. After using your Respirator and Spirometer and medicine I began to recover very fast, so much so that during three hard winter months I have gained from 20 to 25 lbs., and was able to walk out on Easter Sunday. My strength is daily increasing, and I shall be able soon to be at work. To you I owe and express my gratitude, and am anxious for others who are suffering as I was to consult you. You can make what use of this letter you see fit, and thanking you for what I consider a most wonderful treatment.
I remain, yours truly,
CAPT. WM. SEATER.

From its wonderful power over this terrible fatal disease, when first offering this now celebrated remedy to the public, Dr. Pierce thought seriously of calling it his "Consumption Cure," but abandoned that name as too limited for a medicine which, from its wonderful combination of tonic, or strengthening, alterative, or blood-cleansing, anti-bilious, pectoral, and nutritive properties, is unequaled, not only as a remedy for consumption of the lungs, but for all

GO.

It is remarkable how our Ulsters, Mantles and Dolmans go.

Our success this season in these unparalleled (considering the fine warm weather) is making up Ulsters, Mantles and Dolmans from our very complete stock.

The autumn chills, the winter snow,
The heavy dew, the pattering rain,
The frosts that bite, the winds that blow,
Invade our Ulsters all in vain.

In careless folds our Ulster shows,
But, round the human form divine,
The perfect fit will still disclose
The rounding form, the curving line.

Faultless Fit, Correct Styles,
Good Variety, Excellent Work

LOCAL NEWS.

Scott Act Enforcement.

The Mayor last evening stated from the chair that there was more drunkenness in town on Sundays since the Scott Act came in force than there had been previously. Sunday last a number of men could be seen staggering about the streets, scarcely able to stand. Councillors Hartley, Rutherford and Yelland also spoke to the same effect, and stated that the police were very derelict in their duty in not seeing that the Act was properly enforced. The remarks were particularly strong on the police, who, the councillors hoped, would in future be more prompt in arresting intoxicated men. Chief Cooper was present, and emphatically denied that the officers had been backward in enforcing the law.

Mikado Social.

All arrangements have been completed for the Mikado social to be held in St. John's school room, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, 27th and 28th October. The room will be handsomely decorated in Japanese designs and illuminated with Japanese lanterns. The managing committee are saving neither trouble or expense in order to make it a success. A musical programme has been prepared under the direction of Mr. Seward. Some selections from the Mikado will be given. Several ladies (in Japanese costume) will take charge of a booth, where fancy articles, fans, etc., Japanese tea and refreshments will be sold. Do not fail to see this great novelty. Tickets, 25 cents. Doors open at half-past seven, concert to commence at eight o'clock 6d-86

High Court Offices.

R.W.H.C.R. Robert Elliott, C.O.F., Listowel, and R.W.H.S. A. E. Gammage, C.O.F., Brantford, were in town this morning. They arrived last night by the C. P. R. and housed at the Oriental. They stopped here on their way to Perth, from which place they will proceed to visit the courts of the order in Quebec. They could not arrive here in time to meet the local brethren last night, but they will stop here on their return from the East on next Tuesday evening, when a complimentary banquet will be tendered them by the local brethren.

Mrs. C. W. Sawers Condition.

Since the lamentable accident which befel Mrs. C. W. Sawers, on board the steamer, Cruiser, about two months ago, she has been apparently progressing slowly to recovery, but during the last day or two most alarming symptoms have developed. She has become delarious, with only momentary partially lucid intetvals. She may be said to be lying at the point of death, very little, if any hope being entertained of a favourable issue to her long period of suffering.

Make Way for the Crowd.

Tremendous bargains in dry goods, groceries, and boots and shoes are now waiting for the people to seize them. The immense stock of the Bon Marche in these lines must be cleared out at once. Unheard of bargains will be given as the goods must be sold. Don't miss this chance. All the goods are first-class. The stock must be cleared out. Don't neglect the great Bon Marche.

Another Hunting Party.

Last night in the gloaming a hunting and fishing party, consisting of Messrs. Tobias Fitzgerald, M. McFadden, M. O'Brien and J. Clancy, with a due proportion of dogs and other necessary equipments, set out for the back lake region. Their camp will be about two miles from the camp of the English hunting party.

Trent Valley Flouring Mills.

Last night at the village council of Lakefield, a suggestion was made that exemption from taxation be granted in case the mills, which were burned a few days ago, were rebuilt. The people recognize the importance of the mills and feel their loss, and that their re-building would be a great advantage to both the village and the surrounding country.

Fine Weather and Good Scores—The First Day's Firing—List of Those Who "Got On" Nearest the Centre of the Centres.

The annual matches of the Peterborough Rifle Association commenced at the butts yesterday. The attendance was as good as usual, while some of the scores were remarkably high. The day was bright and clear, with a scarcely perceptible haze which did not affect the accuracy of aim. An uncertain breeze from the west, combined with the smoke from a stump fire on the left hand, caused the riflemen a good deal of annoyance. Dr. Bell, the efficient and indefatigable Secretary of the Association, whose efforts in its behalf have been so successful, did the tall shooting of the day, winning the grand aggregate prize (a barrel of apples donated by W. A. Bell) by a score of 123 points, with Mr. F. Hall a very close second. Each scored 123 points, and the tie was afterwards shot off, the former winning by a couple of points.

Obituary.

On Sunday, the 10th of October, the Reverend John McCleary, incumbent of Hastings and Alnwick, died at his residence in the former village, after a very brief illness. For over ten years Mr. McCleary has fulfilled his duties conscientiously and faithfully in this mission, winning thereby the love and esteem of his flock. This was evidenced on Monday by the long array of carriages which followed his mortal remains to the grave, and by the sorrow so clearly shown by his numerous friends and parishioners throughout the mission. Mr. McLeary may be said to have literally died in harness. His illness lasted less than four weeks, during which period his congregation showed extreme thoughtfulness and attention. He was a faithful and earnest worker for the Master, and during his long experience in the ministry of the Church of England, he devoted himself to his duties with unremitting zeal and assiduity. His lot was cast in no very prominent sphere, but his was just the character, to see in "the daily round and the common task," the opportunity for practising self-denial and self-sacrifice, and for doing the work to which God appointed him, so as to win the approval of his Lord at the great day of judgment. This he did earnestly and to the best of his ability. Mr. McCleary was ordained Deacon on the 19th of October, 1862, and Priest on the 28th of October, 1863, both by Bishop Strachan, in the Cathedral Church of St. James, Toronto. His several appointments were Mulmur, Erin, Hanover and Hastings, in all of which parishes he has left abiding traces of his faithfulness and zeal. During a very severe and dangerous epidemic which raged in his first mission shortly after his arrival there, he developed a nobility of character which might be termed heroic. Few men have shown a warmer attachment to the church and to ordination vows. Mr. McCleary leaves behind him his widow and a family of six children, two girls and four boys. Of the latter, one is Rector Assistant of St. George's church, Detroit, and one is just commencing his studies at Nashotah College, Wisconsin, with a view of entering the ministry.

Among the clergy present at the funeral were the Rev. T. Walker, Incumbent, of Campbellford, the Rev. W. C. Bradshaw, B.D., of Asphodel, and the Rev. John Gibson, missionary at Norwood. A brief address was delivered on the occasion by Mr. Bradshaw, and the remainder of the service was taken by the other clergymen. The bloody hymn, "Thy Will Be Done," sung at the grave by all the clergy and an immense concourse of sorrowing parishioners, with uncovered heads, and many of them being in tears, was most affecting and had a very touching and striking effect. The congregation at Alnwick, where the funeral was held, draped the church as a token of respect, grief and sorrow, and they have members in attendance who, not only that their pastor was beloved by them, but that his efforts to instruct and encourage them in ways of righteousness have not been in vain. O si sic omnes.

FRENCH PRESTIGE.

GEN. BOULANGER'S DESIRE FOR A CONTINENTAL WAR.

PARIS, Oct. 12.—There is a vivid growth of the war feeling in France. The Boulanger party have begun the issue of two new journals, La Revanche and La Soldat Laboureur to advocate an offensive policy in vindication of the old military prestige of France. Gen. Boulanger, however, disowns any connection with the papers. Mr. Lavedon, the military critic, writes to the Figaro that Gen. Boulanger has prepared a well conceived plan in conjunction with a staff officer of high rank for a continental campaign. The critic says Gen. Boulanger desires war, not for the purpose of recovering Alsace, not to gratify personal ambition, but as a step leading to the solution of social questions. The strictest taboo of everything German is being observed. M. Lockroy, Minister of Commerce, has ordered the police to prosecute all persons selling boxes of toys imported from Germany and containing a map of France without Alsace.

SARNIA'S ALLEGED DYNAMITER.

Chas. A. Hand Arraigned and Set Back for Trial.

SARNIA, Oct. 12.—Chas. A. Hand was arraigned to-day at the Assizes here, Judge O'Connor presiding, on the charge of having hired one "Nip" McDonald to blow up J. G. McCrae's house in June. He was also arraigned on the charge of having dynamite in his possession with intent to blow up Inspector Palmer's residence three weeks ago. The grand jury brought in true bills against Hand in each case. "Nip" McDonald is represented as living at different times in Port Huron, Detroit and other cities. At one time he was suspected of the murder of Don Ewer of Port Huron at Detroit about a year ago. When arraigned Hand was somewhat nervous but recovered himself. The trial will probably not be commenced before Thursday morning. Deputy Attorney-General Johnston is here for the Crown and B. B. Osler of Toronto is expected for the defence.

LIBEL SUITS IN MONTREAL.

One Each Against Le Monde, La Minerve and the Herald.

MONTREAL, Oct. 12.—Le Monde having stated that $2500 had been offered to Mr. Lemay, shoemaker, in presence of L. O. David to induce him to get Mr. Gravel to resign his candidature and secure the workingmen's vote for the Liberals, Mr. David has taken an action for $10,000 damages against that paper. Mr. Stephens has also taken libel action against La Minerve for $10000 damages.

The case of Ald. Donovan vs. the Montreal Herald was continued to-day, when evidence was concluded and the case taken on deliberation.

THE BLOODS AND THE PIEGANS.

Precautions Against Raids on Montana Territory.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—A communication from Minister West has been transmitted by the Department of State to the War Department, calling attention to the threatening state of affairs on the boundary line between Montana and the British possessions and suggesting the adoption of measures calculated to prevent riding across the line by hostile Bloods and Piegan Indians. It is presumed by the War Department that the general in command of that section of our territory has already taken steps to guard against further raids by massing a sufficient force at the usual crossing places.

Forgiven but not Forgotten.

DUBLIN, Oct. 12.—The convention of members of the National League was held to-day at Loughrea. Delegates from twenty-two branches were present. Resolutions were adopted emphatically ordering the boycotting of all persons obnoxious to the league. Two boycotted tradesmen appeared before the convention and begged to be forgiven. The ban upon them was removed on condition that they would not offend again, which the tradesmen promised.

Altogether Too Sympathetic.

MUNICH, Oct. 12.—Herr Hutscheruter, the Bavarian Premier's father-in-law, after witnessing to-day the trial and sentence of an editor for libelling the Premier, ran out of the court room and committed suicide by shooting himself with a revolver. He had been much depressed recently by seeing numerous editors, the fathers of families, imprisoned for press offences.

French Insults to Bismarck.

PARIS, Oct. 12.—A number of "sandwich" men have been arrested in Paris for displaying placards bearing caricatures of Prince Bismarck. The police to-day entered the office of the Revanche (newspaper) wherein a number of colored placards lampooning Prince Bismarck were hanging and ordered their removal.

A West Bound Pool.

CHICAGO, Oct. 12.—The managers of the Northwestern Traffic Association lines to-day resolved to form a west bound pool including all through business from Chicago with the exception of coal, cement, lime and plaster. A committee of the general freight agents was appointed to work out the details.

KEEP THYSELF PURE

THE WHITE CROSS ARMY GATHERING STRENGTH IN TORONTO.

TORONTO, Oct. 12.—The "White Cross Army" was inaugurated in England by the good old Bishop of Durham in 1884. Since then it has grown to large proportions in Britian, but is just beginning to be felt in the United States and Canada. The army, according to the custom in England, can be made an auxiliary of a Bible Class, a Workingman's Club, or other similar organizations. Up to the present time the greater part of its members belong to the Church of England Societies, yet everyone and all are free to join. The objects of the army, which are fully set forth in a series of little books written by Miss Ellice Hopkins, can be fairly well judged of by a perusal of the pledge which a new member takes, and which is printed below. The army extends its work as far as possible to secure parliamentary enactments for the protection of young girls and the punishment of debauchers. In short, its members are supposed to do everything in their power to protect woman from every kind of wrong in every walk of life.

The central branch of the Church of England's Workingmen's Association of this city have taken up the matter, and two public meetings have been held. One took place in St. George's School House last night at which Capt. C. A. B. Pocock presided. Men only are eligible for membership and already some twenty-five, young and old, have subscribed to the pledge. A constitution was submitted to the meeting, and it will be discussed at a meeting to be held in the same place next Tuesday evening. Permanent officers will then also be elected. Last night's meeting was addressed by Mr. C. R. W. Bigger and Rev. O. P. Ford. Mr. Bigger, as a lawyer, gave the meeting several valuable suggestions about the inadequacy of the law for the protection of young girls. He endorsed the Charlton Act, as far as it went, but that was not nearly sufficient, although Mr. Charlton had made it as stringent as Parliament would let him. Rev. Mr. Ford spoke of the moral obligation that rested upon men for the protection of their wives, sisters and daughters, and the wives and daughters of others, against the vices and infamy of the world. When the meeting was declared open for public discussion one of the speakers said he was in favor of requesting candidates for Parliament pledging themselves for the enactment of laws covering the objects of the society.

Following is the pledge:

THE WHITE CROSS.

THE PLEDGE.

With the help of God I pledge myself

1. To treat all women with respect, and endeavor to protect them from wrong and degradation.
2. To endeavor to put down all indecent languages and coarse jests.
3. To maintain the law of purity as equally binding upon men and women.
4. To endeavor to spread these principles among my companions, and try to help my younger brothers.
5. To use every possible means to fulfill the command "Keep thyself pure."

All that any one who wishes to join the "White Cross Army" has to do is to fill in a paper which is distributed at the meetings.

THE KIDNAPPERS IN RUSSIA.

Arrival of Four Bulgarian Conspirators at St. Petersburg.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 12.—Four leaders of the party who were engaged in the kidnapping of Prince Alexander, of Bulgaria, have arrived here. They are M. Dimetrioff, M. Pakoff, M. Tyaukoff and M. Kovaloff. They attribute the success of the counter revolution, which restored Prince Alexander temporarily to the throne, to the faint-hearted desire of M. Grueff to avoid bloodshed. This, they say, prevented him from causing the arrest of the opponents of the Russian designs.

Newspapers are unanimously of opinion that decisive action by Russia in regard to Bulgaria is imperative. The Journal de St. Petersburg says: "Events justified Russia in urging a postponement of the elections in Bulgaria until the passions of the people had cooled from the late excitement. It can be readily understood why Russia refuses to recognize or sanction an assembly elected under such a condition of affairs as now exists in Bulgaria."

A Russian Correspondent Arrested.

SOFIA, Oct. 12—The Bulgarian authorities have arrested and sent to Constantinople a Bucharest newspaper correspondent who accompanied Gen. Kaulbars.

A correspondent of a London news organization has been expelled from Bulgaria by order of the Bulgarian Government.

Bulgaria's Bugbear.

Gen. Kaulbars, the newly appointed "diplomatic agent" of Russia at Sofia, is a member of an ancient baronial family of German origin, whose estates are situated in the province of Esthland. Like most of his Russo-German countrymen he is a Lutheran. Baron Kaulbars is now about 45 years of age; he is aid-de-camp to the czar and an officer of the general staff, of which he is considered one of the most capable members. In 1878 he accompanied the Austrian troops during their campaign in Bosnia and the Herzegovinia, and subsequently he carried out a military mission to Montenegro, much to the satisfaction of his government. Some years ago, while still bearing the title of colonel, he was appointed military attache, or "military agent," as the Russians call it, at Vienna. In this position he was repeatedly sent to Bulgaria on diplomatic missions. During the war between Servia and Bulgaria he had a long conference with Prince Alexander after the latter's triumphant entry into Pirot. The conference, which attracted much attention at the time, was instrumental in bringing about the armistice. In December, 1885, Gen. Kaulbars was selected to preside over the international military commission, which settled the boundaries of the neutral zone between the belligerent forces of Servia and Bulgaria. It was his brother who, three years ago, while acting as minister for war at Sofia attained so much unfavorable notoriety that Prince Alexander, when at St. Petersburg during the present czar's coronation, had to insist on his recall.

A Young Brute Found Guilty.

TORONTO, Oct. 13.—James McKeown, accused of a brutal offence on the person of a 7-year-old child named Lizzie Lorraine, was found guilty at the Police Court yesterday by Magistrate Denison. The young brute's guilt was established beyond doubt. Sentence was deferred until Tuesday. The mildest penalty for this crime is five years in the penitentiary.

A LOT OF WORK.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE K. OF L. CONVENTION YESTERDAY.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 11.—During the morning session the report of the Committee on Law was presented. It recommended a change in the constitution by which the Executive Board shall consist of General Master Workman and six members, no two of whom shall be from the same state. This part of the report was adopted. It was also recommended that the office of General Secretary and Treasurer be divided. No action was taken on this part of the report. Before adjournment it was stated that amendments to the constitution were in order but owing to the lateness of the hour none were presented. The Assembly at 1 o'clock adjourned until to-morrow.

The General Executive Board had a meeting to-day to hear the cases that have been presented to it, but took no action on any of them.

It has more than 12,000 cases awaiting its decision, and these do not include all that are to be brought before it. The board will meet again during the first recess taken by the General Assembly.

Mr. Powderly to-day received the following telegram from Thos. B. Barry, a member of their Executive Committee sent to Chicago to endeavor to settle the strike of the employes of the pork packers in that city.

"The packers say they have no organization, so I must treat with them as individual companies. We called on several firms yesterday and all expressed a desire for a settlement but insist on working ten hours, while the men are firm for eight. We look for a settlement this week."

HARRY PARKER DIES ON TIME.

The Popular New York Club Man Predicts the Hour of His Death.

From the N. Y. Morning Journal, Oct. 11.

"I'm to die to-night, and I want you to join me in a glass of wine," said Harry Hill Parker, a natty, esthetic bachelor known to every club in New York, as he entered the Picadilly Chop-House, kept by Emile Paul at No. 19 West Twenty sixth-street, Friday night. He was speaking to Mr. Paul.

"Nonsense!" said the jolly Paul. "I'll drink a glass with you, my boy, but the idea of your shuffling off is nonsense. Here's to long life."

Although Mr. Parker seemed to cheer up before leaving for his elegant home at No. 116 East Thirty-seventh street he had not given up the idea that his end was near. He said that before 11 o'clock yesterday morning he expected to be no more.

Soon after Mr. Parker reached home he was attacked with unmistakable symptoms of heart disease. A physician was summoned and worked over his patient all night long with little avail. At precisely 11 yesterday morning Mr. Parker breathed his last.

Mr. Parker as 42 years of age and wealthy. He was known to be suffering at times from heart trouble, but his death has occasioned as great surprise as sorrow.

A highly-educated young lady, an accomplished pianist and linguist, and of very prepossessing appearance, was locked up in the cells at Halifax, N.S., Sunday night. She was the subject of a street fight between soldiers and civilians, both desiring her company.

Recently at Windlesham House, in England, there was a cricket match between eleven ladies captained by Miss Keeling, and eleven gentlemen under Mr. Smith, the gentlemen playing with broom-sticks, which were used with the left hand. The ladies scored 113 runs, but the gentlemen beat them with 125.

Iron is now used for almost every purpose, and the latest development is the manufacture of steel cars. It is anticipated by those interested that they will rapidly supercede wooden ones, but they will have to undergo a much more extended trial than they have yet passed through before this is the case.—London Sporting Life, Oct. 2.

An interesting statement has recently been worked out, showing the distance a trotting horse goes at each second at various rates of speed. Maud S., when she covered a mile in 2.09½, traveled 44½ feet per second. At a 2.20 gait a horse travels 37 5-7 feet per second. At a 2.25 gait he travels 36½ feet; or second. At a 2.30 gait he travels 30 1-5 feet in the same time. At a 2.35 gait he travels 29 1-6 feet; at a 2.40 gait the distance traveled is 28 feet; at a 2.45 gait, 27 feet; at a 2.50 gait, 26 1-17 feet; at a 2.55 gait, 25 1-16 feet. When going a mile in three minutes he travels over 22 feet per second; at a 3.10 gait, 27½ feet; at a 3.20 gait, 26 2-5 feet; at a 3.30 gait, 25 1-7 feet; at a 3.40 gait, 24 feet; at a 3.50 gait, 23 feet, and at a 4.00 gait, 22 feet per second.

The Town Assessment for 1886.

To the Editor of the DAILY EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—A great many have been made, and justly made, to complain against the town assessment for this year, and an unusual number of appeals were taken thereon. Whatever the reason, those assessments have given rise to the opinion that our present assessors are incompetent for the duties of their offices. Their mode of procedure appears to be a mere matter of form, varying each year, here and there, the assessment for the preceding year, ever since the day of Mr. Rowe, whose book was copied by the then incoming officials and made the guide to all their valuations. According to the present mode of appointing three men, no other result could reasonably be expected. We want a more intelligent staff of assessors; men who are qualified to afford a proper value on property and whose opinions will be received with respect. I would just ask, what man, seeking to buy real estate in the town of Peterborough, would go to our present assessors to find its value, or who would be guided by their advice? I will venture to say, not one. And yet the Council, year after year, appoint these men to this position, knowing, or they should know, that they are not the best men they can select, and knowing that they ought not to be appointed at all. And in the assessment great injustice is felt, and there is a general complaint against their doings all over the town. It is high time this thing was put an end to, and there is a strong probability that before another year comes round, property-owners will have taken the matter into their own hands, and will insist upon it that a change be made. If the object is to give these men salaries, better give them the salaries and let them go, and appoint some one else in their stead. And I would venture the suggestion that one good assessor is better than two poor ones, and I might say that one is enough, provided he is competent for the office. This year the assessors appear to have been exceedingly anxious to make the assessment as high as possible. And in several instances property has been assessed at its full value. One man said he had sold his property for a good deal less than it was assessed for. And the owners of park lots have been particularly and hardly dealt by. And when a man had two or more park lots they were assessed as town lots and not as farm land. The result is to make the taxes upon these lands most oppressive and unjust. Each park lot should be dealt with separately, and that being so, and it being under ten acres, it should be assessed as farm land. Each park lot must be dealt with by itself. These park lots were surveyed, laid out and sold, and patented separately as park lots by the Government. They are as much separate parcels of land as two or more farms are separate parcels of land. The farms were surveyed, laid out and sold, and patented separately by the Government, and they are numbered separately, and the park lots are numbered in the same way. And they are all entered farms and park lots, and must be entered separately, according to the number of each, upon the assessment roll, and each lot is assessed separately; each farm and park lot by itself, and each pays taxes on its own assessment. If a man owns two adjoining farms, he is assessed separately on each farm. And so, if a man owns two adjoining park lots, he is assessed, or should be assessed, separately on each park lot. And the taxes are paid separately on each. And should the taxes on any one farm or any one park lot be in arrear, that farm or that park lot could alone be sold for these taxes. And if two farms or two park lots be sold for the taxes upon both, each farm or each park lot must be sold separately, and if sold jointly, the sale would be void, for one of the farms or one of the park lots cannot be sold for the taxes due upon the other farm or park lot. And should both farms or both park lots be sold together for the joint taxes of both, the sale would be void, because these taxes cannot be put together, and one farm or one park lot sold for the taxes of the other, which would be the case if the two farms or the two park lots were sold together. And it must be noted that the taxes on each farm or each park lot are different in amount from the taxes upon the other. All this shows that in revising the assessment on both farms or both park lots, each one is to be considered and dealt with separately, and then each park lot being under ten acres would be assessed as farm land. The assessors appear to have assessed these park lots under the late paddock and park by-law, as parks and paddocks and pleasure grounds, which shows they did not understand their duty.

Yours, etc.,
RATEPAYER.

Apsley.

Burleigh and Anstruther Township Agricultural Exhibition.

The annual exhibition of the Burleigh and Anstruther Township Agricultural Society, held at Apsley on Wednesday, October 6th, was the most successful in the history of the Society, there being nearly double as many entries as on the previous year. The weather was all that could be desired, and from an early hour exhibitors kept pouring in until all the space in the building was exhausted, and the yards were well filled. The show in live stock, especially cattle, was excellent. The exhibit of horses was good, altogether surpassing the expections of visitors. All other classes were well represented. It is doubtful if the display of roots and vegetables could be equalled in the county. The grain, also, is worthy of special mention. Great praise is due to the officers and directors for the manner in which the fair was conducted, and it is to be hoped that members will insure the success of the Society by continuing to elect men who take a real interest in it. General satisfaction is expressed at the manner in which the judges awarded the prizes. In fact Apsley had an exhibition which many a more pretentious village might well be proud of. Following is the

"And you really believe that my uncle caused you to be spirited away in that fashion? Depend upon it, dearest, you are entirely deceived. My uncle was innocent."

"Then who could have originated the plot?"

"Hinter must have done so. Let me tell you all I know about him. He has been employed for nearly eight years at my uncle's chief station at Wangoora—the place where we lived. I am told that he had been in some serious trouble, and that my uncle, who was usually one of the kindest of men, as one of the most simple-hearted men, befriended him. Very soon after he came to the station of an ordinary shepherd he saved my uncle's life when he was nearly drowned in crossing a swollen river on our run. This, you may be sure, was never forgotten by my uncle. He very quickly raised him to one of the chief posts on the estate, and at the time that I came to live at Wangoora, six years ago, he was the constant companion of my uncle in his journeys, and had evidently secured his confidence."

"But you spoke of him to me as dangerous."

"Yes; he is dangerous, and bad, too. I very soon discovered that. But I cannot for a moment imagine that he would have plotted against his benefactor's life. He had everything to lose and nothing conceivable to gain by my uncle's death."

That was perfectly true, and it was the one great stumbling block in the way of my theory regarding the murder. Hinter undoubtedly had nothing to gain by it.

"Daisy," I said, "you must forgive me for questioning you on a subject that has long puzzled me, but about which I saw that you did not wish to tell me anything. I want to know all that you can tell me about that man whom I saw in the railway station here, on the day we first met. It is necessary that you should tell me all, my darling."

She blushed slightly, and then a faint smile lighted up her worn face.

"Ah, how happy an accident it was that led me to the carriage where you were seated that day! I should have been without a friend now but for that."

"But about this man—Gregson?"

"I should have told you all about him if there had been any opportunity of doing so after you spoke to me at the hall. For, do you know, that at one time he had tried to make me believe that he was in love with me, and when he found that I cared nothing whatever about him he began to persecute me in a mean, paltry kind of way, till I positively became afraid of him."

"Where was it that he first began to annoy you?"

"At Wangoora, about three years ago. You see, he was my uncle's confidential clerk, and came a great deal to the house. He had not then given way, as I fear he has done now, to bad habits, and he was a great friend of Dr. Branksome's. I never cared for him—in the least." Dear heart! she looked up at me with the happy smile of a maiden who tells her story for the first time to the man she loves, and for a moment we forgot all about the prison bars, and the two women who sat mutely watching us at the other end of the cell.

"When he found that I did not care for him he became, as I said, very disagreeable. He would try to worry me and hint dreadful things about having me in his power, and I think that very soon he came to hate me as much as he had once professed to like me. Then he became careless and disobedient in his work, and he quarrelled with Flinter and was insolent to Dr. Branksome, and the end of it all was that he was dismissed."

"And what happened then?"

"Oh, a great deal. He professed to have discovered some dreadful plot in which we were all engaged for the purpose of imposing upon my uncle. I laughed at him at the time, for I knew of course that there was no plot of any kind; and I little dreamed of what was coming. But the man became hateful both to me and my uncle, especially when we found that he had actually followed us to England. I have never seen him, however, since that day at York."

"Tell me, dearest, who were the persons whom he charged with being in this plot?"

"Oh, I believe I was the chief sinner of all. He several times met me when I was alone, and accused me of it. Then he hated Flinter, and said dreadful things about him, and even about Dr. Branksome. But I never knew what the plot was to which he referred."

"Did Dr. Branksome know what the man was saying about him?"

"Of course he did. Why, I think that, next to me, he hated Dr. Branksome the most, and I remember his saying once that he could have put him to penal servitude if he liked."

"In Dr. Branksome's presence?"

"Yes."

I was startled by what I had heard, for I remembered how Branksome had disclaimed any knowledge of the meaning of Gregson's language to me in the railway train when I had reported it to him. Some strange fancies stole into my brain.

"Tell me, Daisy, what do you think of Dr. Branksome himself?"

She glanced up at me, and that troubled, doubtful look which I had noticed more than once at Scarborough passed over her face.

"I do not know how I can answer your question," she said, after a pause, and speaking very slowly, as though weighing all her words. Dr. Branksome is a wonderful man. I never met any one like him. When I am with him he can make me do everything he wishes—or nearly everything. It is only when I am away from him that I doubt and fear him."

"Then you do doubt and fear him sometimes?"

"Yes, when he is not near me. When he is, I hardly seem to have any will of my own. It is very strange. I cannot explain it. Sometimes I think he is a very, very good man; but there are times when I think very differently of him."

"When did you see him last, Daisy?" I asked, feeling as though I were on the brink of some great discovery.

"The day before the trial began. Did you not know? Has he not told you?"

"He has told me nothing."

"That is strange, for he promised that he would do so. He brought me my will, which it seemed that it was necessary I should sign before I was tried."

"Your will! I don't want to pry into your private affairs, my darling, but I must ask you if you left anything to Dr. Branksome?"

Anything! Why, I left everything to him, of course—that is, everything but some little things I want you—" then she stopped, blushing rosy red.

"Do you mean you left all your uncle's fortune to Dr. Branksome?"

"Yes; you see he was the trusted executor by my uncle, and he did not need to tell me that he was the only person to whom I could leave my uncle's money."

Little and Lively.

The times change and we change with them. Hardly larger than mustard seeds but composed of highly concentrated vegetable extracts, Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets" have caused the old style, large drastic, cathartic pills to be abandoned by all sensible people. The little sugar-coated Pellets are a sure cure for constipation; for persons of sedentary habits they are invaluable. They are little and lively, pleasant and safe. 6dw41

What True Merit Will Do.

The unprecedented sale of Boschee's German Syrup within a few years has astonished the world. It is without doubt the safest and best remedy ever discovered for the speedy and effectual cure of Coughs, Colds and the severest Lung troubles. It acts on an entirely different principle from the usual prescriptions given by physicians, as it does not dry up a cough and leave the disease still in the system. But on the contrary removes the cause of the trouble, heals the parts affected, and leaves them in a purely healthy condition. A bottle kept in the house for use when the diseases make their appearance, will save doctor's bills and a long spell of serious illness. A trial will convince you of these facts. It is positively sold by all druggists and general dealers in the land. Price 75c., large bottles. sodw41tf

A Lively Conundrum.

The sting of a humble bee contains only one-fiftieth part of a drop of poison, and why a boy jumps up and down and takes on so about it is more than medical science can explain.

CAPTAIN WILLIAM SLATER, No. 37 Granville Street, Halifax, N S

N. WASHINGTON, M. D., Throat and Lung Specialist, Toronto.

DEAR SIR,—When you visited me in the latter part of January of this year I had been given up to die of consumption by a consultation of Physicians, Drs. Reid and Oliver, prominent physicians of Halifax who considered that my recovery was simply impossible. I had no hope myself nor had my family. When you expressed a hope of my recovery it was received with a doubt. Confined to my bed, very low, weak, wasted, night sweats very bad, troublesome cough, raising large quantities of matter—in fact every appearance of a speedy death. After using your Respirator and Spirometer and medicine I began to recover very fast, so much so that during three hard winter months I have gained from 20 to 25 lbs., and was able to walk out on Easter Monday. My strength is daily increasing, and I shall be able soon to be at work. To you I owe a debt of gratitude, and am anxious for others who are suffering as I was to consult you. You can make what use of this letter you see fit, and thanking you for what I consider a most wonderful treatment.

I remain, yours truly,
CAPT. WM. SLATER.

Later,—Fully recovered and at work.

Helping and Strengthening the Band.

High as is the position taken by the Fire Brigade Band as a musical organization, the lack of sufficient reed instruments is generally recognized as a draw back. For the credit of the town as well as for their own enjoyment, citizens should aid in strengthening the band as much as possible in this respect. Business men can help greatly in this way by giving employment to first class musicians such as often visit the town. Mr. Arthur Bridges late of England, a first class clarionet player, if he could secure a position, to enable him to remain in town, would be a great source of strength to the band. Citizens who desire to aid the band, which exists almost solely in the interests of the public, can materially do so by giving preference to who ever take positions in the band. The band has a lively recollection of the kindness of the ladies last summer, and they have confidence that their wishes in the respect mentioned will also receive equally kind attention.

A New Town Drain.

This morning workmen began work on the construction of a new town drain on Simcoe street from the town buildings to the George street sewer. The drain will consist of 12-inch glazed pipe. The owner of the Nicholls block contributes $100 to the cost of the drain, on condition of the tenants being allowed to tap it.

And Still Another.

Peterborough's crack shots are leaving town every day for the north, where they will expect, after a few weeks' sport, to completely obliterate all traces of game. This afternoon the following party left town for Eagle Lake for a two weeks' outing:—Geo. Fitzgerald, promoter and managing director; T. Rutherford, Arthur Blade, H. Matthews, H. Evens, J. Haggert, S. Clegg, and Harry Schrader, cook; six canoes, nine dogs, and a complete camping outfit; "Moxie"—none. May the best of good luck attend them. If the gallant managing director makes a stag's-eye as readily as he does a bull's-eye, he is bound to do great execution.

Don't fail to hear Parker and MacDuff's Concert to-morrow evening. Reserved seats 50c., admission 25c.

Dairy Maid Social.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Charlotte street Methodist church have fixed upon the evening of Thursday, October 21st, as the date of their dairy maid social. This entertainment will be something unique in the way of socials, and those attending will enjoy a rare treat. The ladies are taking every pains to make it successful. The admission fee, which has been placed at 25c., includes abundant refreshments.

Fire Protection.

The recent fire in Lakefield, which destroyed the grist mill, has roused the people of the village to a knowledge of the fact that efficient fire protection is greatly needed. A public meeting has been called for Monday evening next, 18th inst., for the purpose of discussing the subject. The meeting will be held in the village council chamber.

Sneak Thieves.

Monday noon a number of boarders at a leading hotel in town discovered that a quantity of clothing had been stolen from their rooms. Everything had been left all right in the morning, and how the thieves escaped detection is a mystery. However, the clothes are gone.

All Smoke.

Tuesday evening about 10.30 o'clock an alarm bell called out the fire brigade to extinguish a smouldering heap of rubbish in the cellar of T. Martin's grocery store, in the Thompson block, Charlotte street, which was emitting dense clouds of smoke. A few pails of water "squelched" the blaze.

The Parker-MacDuff Concert.

Messrs. Parker and MacDuff's concert should be well patronized to-morrow night. The programme is a first-class one and all true lovers of music should avail themselves of the opportunity of being present to enjoy a fine concert, at popular prices.

The Newest and Best.

NOTES.

The "Banker's Cup of 77," valued at $25, with a cash prize of $15, the first prize in the Association match, fell to Mr. George Fitzgerald.

The "Banker's Cup of 81," valued at $10, with a cash prize of $3, was secured by Lieut. Dennistoun.

Dr. Bell, in the County match, with the top score, secured the "Cox Cup," valued at $30, and a cash prize of $10.

The "New York Medal" has disappeared permanently from the scene of strife, Quarter-master Sergt. Hill securing it "for keeps" last year.

The Peterborough troop of cavalry which last year took first place in the Company match, did not put a team in the field this year.

Following is a list of the winners of the various cups up for competition at the rifle matches:—Bankers' Cup, 1877, to be held by winner in the Association match for one year, and to become his property on winning it twice in succession—1877, Jas. Stothart; '78, W. A. Bell; '79, R. H. Smith; '80, Alex. Sanderson; '81, Edward Sanderson; '82, W. A. Bell; '83, Jas. Stothart; '84, F. W. Mount; '85, W. A. Bell; '86, G. Fitzgerald. Bankers' Cup, 1881, to be awarded to the second highest scorer in the Association match, and to become his property on winning it twice—1881, W. H. Hill; '82, W. Scollie; '83, A. Blade; '84, G. Fitzgerald; '85, F. Hall; 86, R. M. Dennistoun. The "Cox Cup," to be held by winner for one year, and to become his property on winning it three times, twice of which must be in succession—1883, Jas. Stothart; '84, John Foley; '85, R. M. Dennistoun; '86, Dr. Bell.

The matches this year may be regarded as most successful; greater interest is evinced and a steady improvement in shooting is shown. With the formation of a town battalion, there is a prospect of members of the corps being induced to take a more prominent part in the practice and meetings.

Police Court.

TUESDAY, Oct. 12.

J. J. Daly, charged with a first violation of the Scott Act, was yesterday afternoon fined $50 and costs by Police Magistrate Dumble.

WEDNESDAY, Oct. 13.

In marked contrast to the heavier docket of yesterday, only four cases of drunkenness and disorderly conduct were disposed of this morning, occupying but a few minutes time. Three fines of $2 and costs each were made and the other case was enlarged till Friday. One commitment to gaol was made. Officer Pidgeon "reported in" three of the deliquents, Sunday drunks, and P. C. McGinty the other.

Mikado Social.

All arrangements have been completed for the Mikado social to be held in St. John's school room, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, 27th and 28th October. The room will be handsomely decorated in Japanese designs and illuminated with Japanese lanterns. The managing committee are saving neither trouble or expense in order to make it a success. A musical programme has been prepared under the direction of Mr. Seward. Some selections from the Mikado will be given. Several ladies (in Japanese costume) will take charge of a booth, where fancy articles, fans, etc., Japanese tea and refreshments will be sold. Do not fail to see this great novelty. Tickets, 25 cents. Doors open at half-past seven, concert to commence at eight o'clock 6d-86

The Fur Trade.

Something Worth Knowing.

In writing on this subject, readers may interest themselves and turn the information to advantage, but dealers in wholesale, made-up goods will hardly thank me for any exposure made. There is, perhaps, no other trade that the public is so unacquainted with as the fur trade, and therein lies the difficulty of the manufacturer in retaining custom. There are many who pretend to know, while others may know, the difference in furs, and I far rather prefer to deal with such persons who have the knowledge to distinguish a good article from a poor one, than with those who select by chance and good looks. The exterior good looks or stitching in fancy colored linings is no guarantee, although it may catch the eye, and the same fine-looking garment may prove a total loss to the extent of the price paid. Many, in reading this, will acknowledge the truth of my statement as I can every season show ample proof by such articles being brought into my place of business for repairs.

People who have known me for the 26 years here and others who have not, will, I think, have confidence in my experience as a manufacturer of good furs, which trade I have followed up for the last 47 years.

I am not prejudiced against any race or creed, but it may interest the public, in saying that Jews in general take hold of such a trade, not as a manufacturer though, as this would involve too much hard labor, but in dealing in such articles as furs, jewelery, etc., wherein most deception can be practised. No place, perhaps, offers such exemplification of this fact as the city of Leipsig, Germany. During the fair there, where the different representatives of all nations assemble, Jew will often cheat Jew, and they are so numerous that turn where you may, a Jew will be faced, whose sole object is to make money by barter. Is it a wonder, then, that feeling runs strong against them? To come to the point, furs are not an article of one quality, and, therefore, it requires great experience, not obtainable in a couple of years, to be in a position to judge the same in either a raw or dressed state. Good furs are always in good demand and scarce, and hence my early departure every year for the European market, involving an early outlay of money, but with the object of a better selection, as later on wholesale buyers make their appearance, and it repays the disadvantage otherwise. On the other hand, with wholesale buyers it is different; competition amongst them being so keen that the most important point, that of placing in the market a good durable article, is lost sight of, and material, bought for its cheapness, substituted with the aim of making good profits. Such houses circulate their goods all over the country, and never see the persons who wear them. Retail dealers in such goods generally shield themselves behind the flimsy excuse that they buy such goods in good faith as being of the best material, when they ought to know that the prices paid by them to wholesale houses would not warrant a good article; but this is a matter of trade, as long as such trade turns out profitable, and people are willing to be duped. Different, however, is the position of a manufacturer for retail selling. His sole object in starting must be, if he wishes to make his business a success, to make profits more of a secondary consideration and devote himself to selecting such material as will give the greatest satisfaction to his customers, and, although hard for many years to compete with inferior goods, yet by hard work and closest attention to business, and keeping a good article, these will be a sure means to success.

COUNCIL MEETING.

The regular meeting of the village council was held in the council chamber, on Monday evening, the 11 inst.

Present, R. C. Strickland, Reeve, in the chair; Councillors Isbister, Moore and McWilliams.

Minutes of last regular meeting were read and confirmed.

Moved by Coun. Moore, seconded by Coun. Isbister, that the application of Donald McLean, asking a remit of taxes for 5 years on Grist Mill, if he can arrange to have it rebuilt, be received and held over until next regular meeting for consideration.—Carried.

Moved by Coun. McWilliams, seconded by Coun. Moore, that a Hook, Ladder and Bucket Company be formed in the village, and this council grant $100 for that purpose. Coun.'s Moore, McWilliams and Cox to be a Fire Committee, with power to make all necessary arrangements.—Carried.

Accounts to the amount of $66.22 were ordered to be paid.

On motion, the Clerk was instructed to procure 50 feet of hose for one of the small engines.

Moved by Coun. Isbister, seconded by Coun. McWilliams, the Clerk is hereby authorised to call a public meeting of the ratepayers for Monday evening, the 18th inst., in the council chamber, to discuss Fire Protection.—Carried.

Council adjourned to meet at the call of the Reeve.

FIRE.

One of the most disastrous fires which has ever visited our village, occurred on Thursday evening, about 9 p.m., when the splendid Grist Mill, erected last spring by Messrs. R. and G. Strickland, was leveled to the ground. When first discovered, the fire had not made much headway, being confined to a corner in the upper story, but as the village possesses no appliances for fire protection—beyond three garden engines, and it being impossible to reach the flames with pails, owing to the dense smoke, the villagers had to stand by and let it go. Baptie's Planing Mill and the Council Chamber were in great danger, but owing to hard work and a plentiful supply of water from the water works belonging to Messrs. Strickland, they escaped unhurt. At one time it looked as if the whole village would go from the shower of fire. Fires were started in a number of places, and only the vigilance of property owers, prevented the main part of the village being laid in ruins. Messrs. Strickland's loss will be about $9000, on which there is an insurance of $6000. Donald McLaren, who had the mill rented, losses about $2000, on which he holds a policy for $1000. We trust before long to see a better mill occupy the site of the old one, and also see Donald in his accustomed place.

PUBLIC MEETING.

A public meeting of the ratepayers has been called by the council, for Monday evening, the 18th inst., in the council chamber, to arrange for better fire protection. We trust some plan, which will have the support of all, will be devised, and that immediate action will be taken—unless this is done, the village will be certain to suffer some day, then the old cry "better fire protection" will again be heard, when it is too late.

CORRECTION.

Some parties who bear ill will to Mr. Mason, who keeps the North American Hotel, have been circulating reports in regard to the table and other accomodation furnished. Your correspondent has occasion to know that the table cannot be surpassed by any in the village, where all are good; especially was such the case during the show here, when many wondered how such a table could be laid for the price charged.

DEER HUNTING.

Deer hunting begins next Friday, and already our sportsmen are leaving for the back country, or preparing to do so, and we may look for "Burleigh Veal" for dinner next Sunday.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The social and entertainment given in connection with the Sabbath School of the Methodist Church, Hall's Neighborhood, on Tuesday evening, was a decided success, financially and otherwise. The evening was fine, and a large and respectable gathering sat down and partook of the good things prepared by the ladies of the Sabbath School; after which they repaired to the church, and for two hours were highly entertained by a nice and varied programme, consisting of recitations, singing and dialogues by the children; songs, recitations, dialogues, tableaux, etc., by the young people, and short addresses by the Rev. Messrs. Wilson and Adams. Miss Stevens of St. Paul's choir, sang two pieces charmingly. Mr. Miller delighted the audience for a time with mind reading. Mr. W. A. Dixon, Peterborough's ventriloquist, was unable to be present on account of illness. The meeting broke up, after spending a most enjoyable evening, the choir singing the national anthem.—Com.

CLOUDS IN THE EAST.

REPORT OF THE GERMAN AGENT AT SOFIA.

SOFIA, Oct. 13.—The Sobranje will meet in a fortnight. It is expected that Gen. Kaulbars will curtail his tour and return to Sofia about the 21st inst. The Government replying to Russian notes says it will explain the precautions taken in elections on the ground that they were justified by the knowledge that armed bands were preparing to disturb the polling.

The German Government has received a long despatch from its agent here. He describes the position of affairs as extremely critical. It is reported that Russia has notified the Powers of the necessity for the immediate occupation of Bulgaria.

Poor Russia's Honor.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 13.—The Viedomosti attacks the Bulgarian Government for deriding the envoy of the Czar and inciting mobs to assail the Russian consulates and to insult Gen. Kaulbars. It says "Russia was never more grossly affronted. A decisive word from the Czar must save the honor of Russia."

PERPETRATED BY AN UNKNOWN.

A Bride Shot Dead in Bed by the Side of Her Husband—The Murderer at Large.

HOUSTON, Mo., Oct. 13.—The most mysterious and diabolical crime ever perpetrated in southern Missouri, was committed on Big Creek, six miles east of this city, last Friday morning. On that morning, at 3 o'clock, Mrs. Ella Williams, the bride of Rolfe Williams, was lying asleep by the side of her husband, when some unknown person entered the bed room, placed a pistol against her forehead, and sent a bullet through her brain.

The report of the revolver awakened Williams, but he had been ill for some time and was unable to pursue the murderer. Two men sleeping in an adjoining room were also awakened, and they immediately went to the room after procuring a light. As they entered a most revolting scene met their eyes. The young bride lay motionless on the bed, blood streaming from her forehead, and her brains protruding from the wound. The bullet had entered just above the right eye, and that organ had been forced from its socket and was hanging by a chord upon her cheek. The men immediately made search for the murderer, but could find no trace of him, and he is still at large.

No possible motive can be assigned for the deed, except that some disappointed lover of the bride took this means of revenge. Mrs. Williams, before her marriage, was the belle of the county, and bore an irreproachable character. The couple, who were children of wealthy and respected farmers, had been married but two months.

FOOLING WITH ANARCHY.

The London Times' Opinion of Present American Politics.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—The Times publishes a leader commenting on the Henry George movement and on the torpor which it says has fallen upon American politics, and which it pronounces unexampled. "The Republican revolt," continues the paper, "which brought Mr. Cleveland into power was in its way as remarkable as the national uprising in England against Mr. Gladstone's abuse of his unequalled power and the confidence reposed in him by his countrymen. In both cases the wrench was severe and was faced with the utmost reluctance, and in both cases there was a moral emancipation, and the disappointment of the defeated parties who placed party above every other consideration was cruelly bitter. The appearance of Mr. George as a candidate for the mayoralty of New York marks the introduction into America of the characteristics of Parnellism. Americans tell us confidently that this fooling with anarchy will not be tolerated. We hope it may be so for the sake of civilization and the world's prosperity."

FOR ANOTHER TWO YEARS.

General Master Workman Powderly Re-Elected With Only One "No."

RICHMOND, Oct. 13.—In session of the Knights of Labor this morning the rules were suspended and General Master Workman Powderly and General Worthy Foreman Griffiths re-elected. Among the amendments to the constitution adopted this morning was one which extends from one to two years' tenure of all officers excepting those of the cooperative board which will remain as they are. So Powderly will be the guiding star of the order for at least another two years.

At the afternoon session it was decided to divide the office of General Sec-Treasurer. C. H. Litchman of Marblehead, Mass., was elected General Secretary and Fred K. Turner General Treasurer. Re-election of the Executive Board was postponed until to-morrow after an informal ballot had been taken. There was only one "no" on the vote for Mr. Powderly for General Master Workman. It came from a New Jersey delegate. Griffiths was re-elected General Worthy Foreman by a majority of nearly six hundred.

A Proposed Socialist Demonstration.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—Socialists are busy organizing a solemn procession of unemployed to follow the Lord Mayor's procession, playing the dead march and doing all they can to his credit the display. Leaflets have been scattered broadcast all over the city urging the people to attend. Meetings are held in the open air daily to collect money to defray the expenses of the affair. Petitions are also being signed asking Lord Salisbury to receive a deputation of Socialists on the day following the procession. The authorities as yet have taken no steps to prohibit the demonstration.

The Weapon of the German Army.

BERLIN, Oct. 13.—Germany has decided to supply her whole army with repeating rifles. Four corps, stationed on the western frontier of the Empire, have already been equipped with the improved arms. It is rumored that all the governmental factories and arsenals are to be continuously day and night on the work of converting the Mauser Rifle, the system at present in use by the army, into repeaters holding ten cartridges each.

The Strike at Chicago.

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—Delegate Barry was seen by a reporter at noon to-day and said: "The men have their minds on the eight hour rule and will agree to nothing else. We made a proposition this morning to the packers that they adopt the eight hour rule and our men will agree to work all the over time necessary. This will be practically a recognition of the eight hour question and will be accepted by the men. The packers submitted a proposition that the men shall work and be paid by the hour. This will not be accepted."

It was learned this morning that in spite of the packers' statements they have combined against the eight-hour movement and have given bonds of $50,000 each that they will stick to the ten-hour agreement.

Pleuro-Pneumonia Widely Spread.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—Commissioner Colman has received a telegram from Dr. Salmon, chief of the Bureau of Animal Industry, in which he states that investigations of the past week show pleuro-pneumonia widely scattered among the cattle of Chicago. He is perfecting arrangements to secure the quarantine of exposed animals

PRESBYTERIAN MISSION WORK.

The Executive Committee Continue Their Labors—Large Grants of Money.

TORONTO, Oct., 14—The Executive of the Home Mission Board of the Presbyterian Church of Canada were in session yesterday till 6 o'clock. The Committee on the Augmentation of Ministerial Stipends considered the claims of several presbyteries. It was decided to pay the following sums: Quebec $830, Montreal $1410, Glengarry $309, Ottawa $662, Brockville $325, Lanark $366, Kingston $977, Peterboro $486, Lindsay $213, Toronto $877, Orangeville $982, Saugeen $108, Guelph $109, London $696, Chatham $275, Sarnia $408, Stratford $138, Huron $275, Maitland $513, Bruce $487, Winnipeg $470, Rock Lake $726, Brandon $952, Regina $500; total $13,376.

A number of congregations were reported as self-sustaining, while several new ones were placed on the augmentation list.

The committee commended the propriety of equalizing salaries in the Northwest with those in Ontario and Quebec, in consequence of reduced living expenses. No definite action was taken, but the committee decided to ask the opinion of the Northwest presbyteries and of the Home Mission Committee of the Manitoba Synod.

The sum of $30,000 is required for the augmentation of ministers' salaries during the current year. This sum will be proportionately levied upon the various presbyteries.

These appointments were made for British Columbia: Rev. Alex. Dunn, Rev. Alex. Tait of Moss, Rev. F. McQuaig. Rev. Dr. Jardine of Brockville has accepted his appointment to Prince Albert, N.W.T. He will be on the ground within two weeks.

DEATH OF DAVID KENNEDY.

The Well-Known Scottish Vocalist Passes Away at Stratford.

STRATFORD, Oct. 13.—Mr. David Kennedy, father of the Kennedy family, Scottish vocalists, died at the Windsor Hotel here this morning from an attack of dysentery. He had been ailing for two or three weeks past, but kept his engagements until a week ago yesterday, when he reached here, and under medical advice decided to rest for a while. His remains will be taken to Edinburgh for interment, and, accompanied by his family, left here this afternoon for Rimouski, thence by steamship Parisian.

FROM THE PAINT BRUSH TO THE STAGE.

The dead vocalist was born in Perth, Scotland, 60 years ago, was educated at the New tow National School, in that city. At an early age he showed a talent for music and used to assist his father as precentor in Dr. Young's United Presbyterian Church in High-street. On his father retiring on account of old age, he received the appointment. Deceased was apprenticed to John Douglas, Painter, Johnstreet, Perth, and followed that business for some years. Receiving an appointment as precentor in a United Presbyterian church in Edinburgh, and having sung at a number of Scotch concerts in London with great success, he decided to leave psalmody and take to the road. He has been successful in his Scottish concerts, and has given concerts in nearly every clime. The Kennedy family a few years ago published a book called "Around the World," which had an extensive sale. Previous to leaving his native town for his last tour Mr. Kennedy sang at three concerts. None will regret his decease more than his old friends. A few years ago by a fire in the opera house, he lost a son and a daughter who were studying music at Nice, Italy. Deceased leaves a wife and a grown-up family.

ON THE LINE OF THE C.P.R.

A Few Words Regarding the Magnificent Agricultural Prospects.

SAULT STE MARIE, Ont., Oct. 13.—The annual show of the local Agricultural Society, held yesterday, was well attended by residents on both sides of St. Mary's River. All agree that the exhibit has never been equalled, and strangers expressed surprise at the size and quality of the root crops, which compared favorably with the exhibit in Toronto. The grains, especially wheat and oats, astonished people accustomed to believe that this northern region is incapable of producing cereals. Some splendid specimens of tomatoes were exhibited. The dairy products, including creamery butter, which finds a local market at twenty-five cents a pound, was pronounced equal to that of the Ontario peninsula. Our Michigan neighbors were warm in their encomiums of the whole show. The people in view of the new railway enterprise are looking forward to the era of prosperity in the near future and settlement is being rapidly inaugurated on the line of the Canada Pacific on the Mississauga River and the Goulais River, where the land is highly favorable for agriculture. There is some talk of utilizing the water-power of the Falls for lumber and pulp mills, there being an inexhaustible supply of lumber, particularly poplar, within easy reach of the river.

THE BIG CHICAGO DEFAULTER.

Neeld Visits Montreal and Gets Away to England.

MONTREAL, Oct. 13.—The cool effrontery of Neeld, the Chicago defaulter, in coming to Montreal, the headquarters of the very bank which he defrauded is explained by the fact that a lawyer whom he engaged here informed him that he was perfectly safe and could not be arrested. It appears that he has been here for some days, although the bank officials and private detectives denied it, the latter saying that he had been traced out West. Their reticence is accounted for by the fact that they expected to have him arrested every moment and now that he has left for parts unknown, although it is supposed that he is on his way to England, this reticence is no longer necessary. He stopped at the Balmoral Hotel under his own name, but the hotel officials also would give no information. As soon as the bank became aware of his presence here steps were taken to secure his arrest. C. P. Davidson, Q.C., crown prosecutor, was consulted, and it was discovered that the offences of which he had been guilty did not come under the Extradition Act, and as he disclaimed bringing any stolen money into Canada, and it could not be proved that he had done so, the bank were unable to proceed on that charge.

SUSPENDED FOR HAZING.

Disturbance at a College in Maine—The Students Refractory.

ORONO, Maine, Oct. 13.—Five students at the Maine State College having been suspended for hazing, the others cut all recitations. This morning the faculty assembled the students in the chapel and took them one at a time, beginning with the senior class and asked if they were willing to go into recitations. Those replying "not until the boys have had justice done them" were suspended and ordered to leave town.

The Ring Among the Boodlers.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—Henry L. Sayles, "boodle alderman," was not in court when called to-day and his bond was declared forfeited. It is believed he is in Montreal. Ex-Ald. Wendell evaded the police last night by sleeping in the emigrants' lodging-house. He apologized to the detectives to-day and laughed heartily over the trouble he gave them last night. His bail bond was increased to $40,000, which he and ex-Ald. Finck, Butler, Sachs, and other indicted boodlers provided for.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—At noon to-day all the boodle aldermen who are not known to have "skipped" have been either taken in custody or surrendered themselves except Wendell and Finck.

THE NORWOOD EXHIBITION.

THE EAST RIDING SOCIETY SCORES A SUCCESS.

Increased Entries—Large Attendance—New Buildings Projected.

The annual exhibition of the East Riding Agricultural Society was held at Norwood on Tuesday and Wednesday, October 12th and 13th, and it was a gratifying success. The first day was devoted to placing the articles for the inside exhibit and to judging the same. In the evening the drill shed, where this department was accommodated, was thrown open and a large number of visitors availed themselves of the opportunity of viewing and admiring the exhibition. Norwood band furnished music for the occasion.

THE SECOND DAY

was opened with rain, but the weather lightened and the exhibition went on. The judging of stock exhibits was proceeded with. In all respects the stock was good, horses, cattle, sheep and swine being well represented.

The exhibits in the drill shed were worthy of the occasion.

Mr. J. W. Crosby, of Peterborough, music dealer, exhibited the Lansdowne piano and Uxbridge organs. These fine instruments, which possess many points of advantage over the best instruments of other makers, were the object of great admiration, and the excellence of his instruments, combined with Mr. Crosby's square dealing, will, doubtless, result in several mutually profitable transactions. Mr. H. Laishley, representative of the Improved Singer sewing machines, was on hand with his usual fine and attractive exhibit. Among the unique and interesting exhibits was the display of Mr. J. S. Paterson, a gentleman about 75 years of age. Specimens of his handiwork, exceedingly creditable to a gentleman of his age, consisted of the skilful products of the turning lathe, and included a snuff box in curly ash, a stand of egg cups of the same material, red cedar newel posts, gate post ornaments, etc., all very skilfully executed. Mr. Hugh Beckett showed fine samples of red and white brick and tile. The Norwood Woollen Mills samples of their goods, Finlay & Sim a fine collection of the hubs manufactured by them. Mr. Fuller had a creditable display of photographs; Mr. P. Hamilton, of Peterborough, had substantially the same fine exhibit of agricultural implements as that made at the Central. The exhibit was in charge Mr. R. D. Hamilton and Mr. Nicholls. They were kept busy explaining and pointing out the points of merit possessed by these machines and implements, and the whole day the exhibit was the centre of interest to large groups of farmers, who were very favorably impressed, especially with the beautiful working of the Hamilton twine binder, in motion by power supplied by a portable engine. Mr. Wm. Forsyth was present with his exhibit of fanning mills, including the combined mill and bagger. Messrs. White & Co. had a good display of ploughs, creatting, etc., Mr P. W. Stevenson, of Norwood agricultural implements, and Mr. Bowie, of Peterborough, exhibited the the Cockshutt Riding Plough which is guaranteed, with less labor, to turn over three-quarters of an acre more than any other plough, and is so simple that a mere lad can use it. Mr. Robert Wilson, of Norwood, with his waggon-jitter, had a device that will save many a crick in the back.

On the second day, in spite of the lowering weather, there was a large attendance of visitors. It is understood that plans are prepared for the erection of a new building on the grounds for next year. This is highly necessary, as the present building used is 400 or 500 yards from the stock grounds and the gate receipts are, therefore, considerably lessened. At no other exhibition held in this vicinity this year has there been so plentiful a supply of fakirs and sharps of different kinds as at the Norwood show. A few fights took place in the afternoon, the result of too free imbibition of Moxie or Ouse water. The exhibition was throughout a success, everything considered. The entries were largely in excess of the last year, being 1,245 this year as against 835 the previous exhibition, an increase of 410. The prize list will be given in a subsequent issue.

South Monaghan.

(From a Correspondent.

On the night of Thursday, the 7th inst., burglars entered the store of Mr. E. Ball, Centreville, South Monaghan, by the front door, and stole therefrom postage stamps to the value of about $5 and a quantity of silk handkerchiefs, kid gloves and under clothing to the value of about $30, and attempted to blow open the iron safe, but failed. They left again by the same way, locking the door after them, and went towards the west, as two of the mitts were found on the road the next day. They drilled the safe and tried to open it with powder, but somehow the door became tighter than ever, and it took the proprietor twelve hours to open it, which he did on Saturday, and found all right, with about $26 of postage stamps. The money was all taken from the store the night [illegible], only the coppers being left, which amounted to about $3, and these they rejected taking on account of the weight [illegible] is probable they were disturbed in their work by the proprietor, as he was up and about the stable about four in the morning, and it was after two when they visited Labadie's blacksmith shop, from whence they borrowed a sledge hammer and other tools, which they did not see fit to return. No clue as yet has been found as to the perpetrators of the daring act.

EGAN'S IMPERIAL TRUSS

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 20th, 1886.

GENTLEMEN,—Being over 70 years of age, and over 30 years ruptured, looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two springless trusses made in York State, costing me $40. Nothing would retain my Hernia. I have worn your truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort; even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down, it holds me perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. H. KING.

This new Spiral Spring Pad Truss has taken ten years to make it perfect; is guaranteed to hold the very worst case during the hardest work or severest strain. It will cure every child born; and 99 out of every 100 of adults. Be warned—don't waste your money on useless appliances, but send stamp for our treatise; it contains full information, your neighbors' testimony, price list and questions for you to answer. When writing please mention this paper. Address

In an instant I saw; no wheel the stair or manner lightning illumines the wide landscape for miles at a stretch, the whole conspiracy, in the toils of which my darling had been caught. But that vivid flash of consciousness faded almost as quickly as it came, and left me once more groping in the twilight—not, however, before I had taken my bearings, as it were, afresh, and had seen that our real position was altogether different from what, up to that moment, I had imagined it to be.

"Daisy," I said, trying hard to subdue my excitement, "are you aware that the power of attorney which you signed the other day makes me for the present absolute master of all your property? You have constituted me your other self. While you are in confinement here I can go where I will and do what I please in your name, as your representative. Are you willing that I should make full use of these powers?"

"Oh, yes," she cried, "who can use them better?"

"Then, darling, I shall make my first use of them by putting a veto upon you. I want you to promise that you will on no account allow Dr. Branksome to see you until we meet again. You know they will allow no one to visit you now unless you desire it. Will you promise?"

"I will promise anything you wish."

"Then I must tell you that I shall go direct from here to Great Lorton, in order that I may search the hall from the roof to the cellars, if necessary, for proof of your innocence. The first thing I have to find is that parcel of strychnia. Can you help me?"

She shook her head doubtfully. "I wish I could; but I cannot recall what I did with it."

"By the way," I said, "do you know this?" I took from my pocket the rusted knife or dagger which I had found on my bed on the night that I slept at the hall.

She looked at it, and then the color dyed her cheeks once more.

"Where did you find it?" she asked.

"In my bedroom—the haunted chamber."

"Ah, I remember!" she cried, "I remember now where I placed the poison! It is in the secret passage leading to the haunted room."

"Do you indeed remember, my darling! Are you sure?"

"Quite, quite sure. Stay, let me tell you all. On that night when my uncle heard, after he had said good night to you, of what had passed between us in the garden, he came to my room. I had not gone to bed, for I was thinking of all that you had been saying to me. We had a dreadful scene, as you know. Some one had poisoned his mind. He told me I should never see you again, and I was in despair. Then I remembered that you were to sleep in the haunted room, and that there was a private stair leading to it from the drawing room corridor. I resolved to send you a letter, so that you might not leave the hall thinking that I was unfaithful to you. My maid and I had discovered the passage shortly before, and knew that it led up to your room, which was entered by means of a sliding panel. I wrote the note, and gave it to her to take to your chamber when she was certain you were asleep. She went with it; but returned almost immediately to say that she could not move the panel. We looked about for something by which to open it, and I saw this old knife in its sheath. It was given to me as a curiosity, years ago, by an old sailor. Taylor, my maid, took the knife, and went back to your room. When she returned she told me that she had placed the note upon your pillow, but that at the moment when she did so you had moved in your sleep; and in her fright she had left the room at once, forgetting to bring the knife with her."

"Then there was no ghost but the one you sent to me, darling! But about the strychnia; for that is about the most important thing of all now."

"I placed it on a shelf over the door by which the secret stair is entered. It was the sight of the knife which reminded me immediately of the place."

I rose breathless with excitement.

"My darling, by God's help, all will yet be well. But I must not delay a moment longer now."

I strained her in my arms, and kissed her passionately. Half an hour afterwards I was on my way to Great Lorton, having dispatched a telegram to Mr. Eastmead, begging him to meet me at the Barton railway station.

I found the chief constable waiting for me on the platform at Barton. Like other men "in the force," he was probably happier when engaged in bringing a criminal to justice than when he was saving an innocent person from an unjust punishment. But in Daisy's case he showed as much zeal as though he had been one of her personal friends, and I had no need to complain of the interest he displayed when I told him the errand upon which I was bent, and the important facts which I had elicited during my visit to the prison.

"I want you to accompany me in my search through the hall, Mr. Eastmead, both because you will be an unimpeachable witness regarding any discoveries I may make, and because I may need to appeal to the aid of the law in my task. For you will understand that I shall not do this thing by halves. This power of attorney makes me Miss Stancliffe's legal representative, and I shall use all my rights under it, not only to prove her innocence, but, if possible, to discover who the guilty person is."

"You have set your self a hard task, Mr. Fenton," he replied; "but there is some hope of success; for I am quite certain that, as yet, we do not know the truth."

We had to wait from Little Lorton station to the hall. My interview with Daisy had taken place in the early morning, and it was barely two o'clock in the afternoon when I found myself once more standing on the broad terrace in front of the quaint old house.

The first person I saw was the evil-omened Flinter. He came forward with an insolent air and demanded my business.

"My business, sir, might very well be to give you into custody for the outrage which you committed upon me. As it is, I am here on professional duty, and have nothing to say to you."

"You won't get into the hall at all events," he said, doggedly.

"Some of that nonsense," interposed the chief constable, "or I shall have to take you into my hands, my man. Mr. Fenton, I assume, is the only person who has any rights here, if it comes to that."

At these words I saw Dr. Branksome, scowling, glide across from the direction of the stables, and the hulking gamekeeper, who had been with whom Flinter was having this altercation, came forward with quickened step, and his usual air of bland gravity.

Little and Lively.

The times change and we change with them. Hardly larger than mustard seeds but composed of highly concentrated vegetable extracts, Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets" have caused the old style, large drastic, cathartic pills to be abandoned by all sensible people. The little sugar-coated Pellets are a cure sure for constipation; for persons of sedentary habits they are invaluable. They are little and lively, pleasant and safe. 6dw41

From its wonderful power over this terribly fatal disease, when first offering this now celebrated remedy to the public, Dr. Pierce thought seriously of calling it his "Consumption Cure," but abandoned that name as too limited for a medicine which, from its wonderful combination of tonic, or strengthening, alterative, or blood-cleansing, anti-bilious, pectoral, and nutritive properties, is unequaled, not only as a remedy for consumption of the lungs, but for all

LOCAL NEWS.

A Warm Welcome.

The leaves are falling; the winter winds are preparing to howl, and everybody is shuddering with the premonitory shivers of a hard winter. But winter is robbed of its terrors. Warm clothing at cheap rates can be found in stacks at Gough's, the Wonderful Cheap Man. Underclothing, upperclothing, clothing for men, youths and boys is offered at prices that simply startle. The ponderous pumpkins for the prize overcoat are tumbling in—a splendid $12 overcoat for the biggest pumpkin. Gough makes these gifts because it is a way he has—every sale he makes is a gift, compared to the prices the buyer has to pay elsewhere. Don't forget to call at Gough's when you come to town.

A Midnight Marauder.

Tuesday night about 12.30 Mr. Brault, proprietor of the Montreal house, on Aylmer street, was lying awake in bed, when he heard the noise of some one trying to effect an entrance through the barred door leading from the kitchen to the main part of the building. Upon getting out of bed the would-be burglar decamped. It was afterwards found that he had broken a pane of glass in the kitchen window, and thrusting his hand through the aperture, raised the sash, and thus gained entrance to the house. In attempting to force the door leading to the bar-room considerable noise was made, though had Mr. Brault been asleep, the burglar would probably have succeeded.

Boys Will be Boys.

On Wednesday evening a number of the "b'hoys" rode afoot on shank's horses to a "little low log cabin" a short distance from town, where they proceeded to make merry by tripping through the dizzy mazes of a "stag dance." "Parson Downs" was present in full regimentals, and scraped the fiddle with intense fervor, to the huge delight of the waltzers, who flung their heels in the air and yelled like aborigines. Refreshments were procured from a neighboring orchard, and after two hours of hard work and solid fun, they returned to town in good season, none the worse for wear.

W. C. T. U.

The regular meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union was held Monday afternoon in the Y. M. C. A. hall. The attendance was much larger than during the summer months. After the reading of the minutes, the Treasurer's report and the reports of the various committees were received. The subject of gospel temperance meetings was taken up, and it was decided that the Union hold one of these meetings every month, the first of which will be held one week from next Sunday. Further particulars will be given later.—Com.

Market Items.

The market on Wednesday was almost a dead-letter, no doubt owing to the drizzling rain which prevailed early in the day. Prices were quoted as follows:—Butter, 20c.; eggs, 18c.; potatoes and apples, 60c. per bag; green tomatoes, 50c. per bush.; ripe tomatoes, 80c. per bush.; mutton, 8 and 9c. per lb.; chickens, 35c. per pair; ducks, 65 to 85c. per pair; citrons, 10c. each; cabbage, 5c. per head; celery, carrots, radishes, etc., 5c. per bunch.

Dairy Maid Social.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Charlotte street Methodist church have fixed upon the evening of Thursday, October 21st, as the date of their dairy maid social. This entertainment will be something unique in the way of socials, and those attending will enjoy a rare treat. The ladies are taking every pains to make it successful. The admission fee, which has been placed at 25c., includes abundant refreshments.

A Local Vanderbilt.

Every week the Bon Marche presents some fresh and startling bargains to the public. There one sees a ticket of a staple line of teas marked, "6 pounds for $1," and one wonders how such value can be given for the money. This is but a solitary instance of the surprising bargains to be had at the Bon Marche. Mr. Carton must be a veritable Vanderbilt in the wholesale market, as he seems able to "bull" or "bear" it to suit the pockets of his customers.

Criminal Statistics.

From Sheriff Hall's annual report concerning Peterborough gaol, are gleaned the following interesting statistics respecting the same. At the commencement of the prison year, Oct. 1st, 1885, there were 15 persons confined in gaol. There have since been 106 committments up to Oct. 1st, 1886, comprising 103 males and 3 females. Divided into nationalities they are classed as follows:—Canadians, 49 males and 2 females; Englishmen, 17 males; Irishmen, 23; Scotchmen, 3; Yankees, 8; other nationalities, 3 males and 1 female. Denominationally they stand:—Roman Catholics, 47 males and 1 female; Church of England, 22 males and 1 female; Presbyterian, 19 males; Methodists, 13; other denominations, 2 males and 1 females. Space forbids a more comprehensive summary of the report, but the above comprises the chief items of interest contained in it.

Sporting News.

Mr. F. J. Daly has accepted Mr. A. P. Morgan's challenge to trot his mare, "Fanny B.," against the latter's horse, "Little Ned," for $100 a side. The race is to take place on Tuesday, Nov. 2nd, in mile heats, best three in five, play or pay.

A 100-yard foot race was announced for this afternoon at 3 o'clock, at the Driving Park, between Messrs. T. B. Robinson and A. W. Elliott, for a purse of $50 a side. Mr. A. Elliott is stakeholder, and Mr. F. J. Daly referee. Considerable money is up on the race.

Later.—The race has been postponed till Nov. 2d. The purse has also been increased to $100 a side. Both men are entered upon a vigorous course of training and the race is expected to be a game struggle.

Mikado Social.

All arrangements have been completed for the Mikado social to be held in St. John's school room, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, 27th and 28th October. The room will be handsomely decorated in Japanese designs and illuminated with Japanese lanterns. The managing committee are saving neither trouble or expense in order to make it a success. A musical programme has been prepared under the direction of Mr. Seward. Some selections from the Mikado will be given. Several ladies (in Japanese costume) will take charge of a booth, where fancy articles, fans, etc., Japanese tea and refreshments will be sold. Do not fail to see this great novelty. Tickets, 25 cents. Doors open at half-past seven, concert to commence at eight o'clock 6d-86

A Big Bid for the Big Town Team.

Yesterday a gentleman from Midland was in town looking over the "town team," owned by Mr. Terapee Smith, which took first prize at the Central. The team was weighed yesterday and scaled 3,220 pounds,—the heaviest team ever weighed by Mr. Doherty. $400 takes the team, and the Midland man takes a day or two to think it over.

Sold by Auction.

The stock of boots and shoes in the store formerly conducted by Mr. W. Miller, on George street, was sold Wednesday afternoon to Mr. R. Neil, who will try to give his customers the benefit of the purchase. Bids were numerous and the competition rather stiff. Mr. Chas. Stapleton acted as auctioneer.

A Novel Social.

The ladies of the George street Methodist Church congregation propose holding a corn social in the Opera House about two weeks hence. The novelty of the affair consists in all the refreshments being manufactured of corn—corn cake, corn coffee, corn starch pudding, pop corn, etc. The exact date will be announced later on.

Success of the Scott Act.

"Scott Act," the chesthut running horse, which has appeared at the Driving Park here on several occasions, owned by J. H. O'Neil, of Cobourg, scored another success at the Belleville races Tuesday, defeating "Dickie H." from Prince Edward in two straight heats. Time, 1.54½, 1.57.

Brought to Light.

Workmen engaged in digging the drain on Simcoe street, at the depth of four feet beneath the surface on George street, struck solid cedar timbers, the remains, doubtless, of some corduroy causeway of primitive and palustrine days.

George Street Methodist Church.

Mr. A. Clegg, contractor for the renovations and improvement of the George street Methodist church, is pushing his work rapidly, and it is so far advanced that the re-opening services will take place Oct. 31st.

Drain Tile Arrived.

Keene.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Take it all in all, October is, perhaps, the most enjoyable and the most beautiful month in the year. Summer's heaviest task is past, the harvest is garnered, and the winter wheat is green. Her soft, balmly breath and Indian summer haze is in delicious contrast to brawling, blustering, equinoctial September, which, as a rule, comes weeping and leaves us with a wail.

The root harvest is speeding finely and farmers generally are grateful for the delightful weather for fruit-gathering and fall fairs.

Ducks are very plentiful on Rice Lake this season, and the pulse of the sportsman beats high. Quite a few of the pleasure-seekers are from the domain of our old neighbor, Uncle Sam.

Rev. Jas. Hughes, of Colborne, was the guest of Dr. Massie from the 2nd to the 4th of this month. On Sabbath the 3rd, he preached for the Rev. Mr. Johnston in the Methodist Church here, delivering a clear, able and eloquent discourse.

H. Barnham, Esq., of Port Hope, was among us for a few days last week.

The entertainment given by the Good Templars of Allandale a week ago last Saturday, was quite a success, our young English friend, Mr. Bonnett, being one of, if not the moving spirit in the affair. Success to him!

BIRTH.

BURRITT—At Peterborough, on Wednesday, 13th October, 1886, the wife of D. H. Burritt, of a daughter.

SAM SMALL TO TALK ABOUT HIS OWN LIFE AND SALVATION.

Toronto, Oct., 14—Sam Jones and Sam Small got to work together yesterday and promise to do some heavy execution against the powers and patronage of Satan before they conclude their great revival on Oct. 24 next. From that date until they open out at Nebraska's chief city, Omaha, on Nov. 7, they propose to take a rest, which undoubtedly the twin evangelists will be much in need of. Omaha, situated on the sunset side of the great Missouri, just opposite Council Bluffs, Ia., is one of the great railway centres of the Wild West, and the two Sams will go there with their heavy artillery to preach salvation in their own peculiar style.

From this out until the end of the Toronto engagement four services will be held daily. There will be three in the Rink and an "overflow" in the Metropolitan Church. Mr. Jones will preach in the great Methodist edifice to night, and Mr. Small will discourse at 3 and at 7.30 in the Rink. There will be a morning service in the Rink at 9.30. The services in the Rink to-night will commence at 7.30, and when the building is "comfortably filled" the doors will be closed. Those that do not gain admittance can go to the Metropolitan. The subject of Bro. Small's discourse this afternoon and evening will be taken from personal experience, having for its title: "From the Press to the Pulpit, or My Deliverance from Bondage." As most people who take any interest in the revivalists are now aware, Sam Small was a reporter on the Atlanta Constitution, and was so impressed while writing up Sam Jones' salvation logic for his paper that he threw up the pencil and became a disciple and co-worker of Mr. Jones. Reporter Sam does not deny that he learned many of the vices and weaknesses which modern newspaper men are credited with being proficient in, and he will tell his hearers all about how his reformation was wrought.

Mr. Small made his opening address at the Rink yesterday morning, the building being well filled considering the threatening weather. His language and methods are entirely different from those of his colleague. He spoke of his conversion on Sept. 15 of 1885 in his native city of Atlanta, and touched on several incidents of his past life. Mr. Small makes more of an effort at pulpit oratory than Mr. Jones. His language is more polished, and almost entirely devoid of the free and easy style of Sam No. 1. He will go thoroughly into his subject at to-day's meetings.

At 8 o'clock last night the Rink was packed as full as it could hold, and many there were who could not get in at all. The choir sang "Crown Him Lord of All." Then Mr. Jones came upon the platform with a friendly twinkle in his eye. After announcing the program for to-day, and telling how hard he and his partner would have to work during the balance of their stay in Toronto, he said:

"May God bless every preacher in this town. I have nothing but Christian kindness and brotherly love for everybody. I suppose it would take a pastor much longer to fall into my methods than it would for me to fall in with his. But I have unbounded charity for all."

Mr. Jones' kindly reference to the city clergy is supposed to have something to do with the following, which appeared in the Mail of yesterday:

To the Editor of the Mail.

Sir,—Why do you permit your columns to be polluted with the reports of such revival meetings as are now taking place in your city? We have been accustomed to regard the Mail as the foremost journal and its leading articles as a credit to the journalism of the Dominion. Why spoil it all with these verbatim reports of the vulgar jokes, the slang, and the inepti-tudes of revival meetings?

I remember, fifty years ago, the indignation of a father at finding in the hands of his boys a paper—I think Bell's Life in London—which had been lent by a servant. Parents who think their family should not be contaminated must place a ban on the Mail if it continues to report the ribaldry of the revival meeting. We do not wish our children to become infidels—and such performances under the guise of religion can only make infidels.

J. B. Worrell.

The Parsonage, Oakville, Oct. 11.

"I wish to preach to-night," began the revivalist, "from Zechariah ix:

12. Turn you to the strongholds, ye prisoners of hope: even to-day do I declare that I will render double unto you.

"I intend to speak of the salvation of manhood, the salvation of the living, not of the salvation of the men and women who lived a century ago and who have passed into the cemeteries of the earth or those who are yet to be born."

Mr. Jones went on to say that there were three classes of prisoners with hope and three without hope. Every Christian man could say that he was a prisoner of hope; that he could shake the shackles off his feet and walk through the golden gates a free man. Hope to the Christian was like mile posts on a road. He could see how far he had come and how far he had yet to go. There were 1000 roads that led to Hell, but, thank God, there was one that led to Heaven. Heaven was a prepared place for the prepared.

Another class of prisoners of hope were the men and women who exhibited much concern for religion. The penitent at the altar was as much a prisoner of hope as was any Christian, and an honest penitent was as far on the road to heaven as he was.

The other class of prisoners of hope were the men who said: "I would rather be good than bad. I am not a Christian, but I want to be one." When a man's affinities were right it was not hard to get him to Christ. He might have a Christian wife, a Christian mother or a Christian daughter. These could easily sway him over to the right side. Every clergyman in the city could count over plenty of men whom they saw at church every Sunday; they came there and helped to pay the expenses of religion, and were liable to step over into the fold at any moment. They were prisoners of hope. When a man began to like a church and helped it he was mighty near Heaven.

The prisoners without hope were: 1. The angels who were cast out and who gave up their last estate. 2. The men and women who have walked and talked among us, and who now inhabit the cemeteries of earth. Who have gone there forever without going over to Christ. It might be a father. It might be a child. It might be a vacant chair at our table that told us of a prisoner without hope. "I never," said the revivalist, "preach among the tombstones; I never preach to Christ to save the dead; I preach for the living." 3. The other class was the men and women who walk and talk on the earth, but will ascertainly be damned as they live. They never knew religion and they never will. Generation after generation of them live and die without becoming religious.

"Are you of them?" asked the preacher. "You have a few hours and a few days between now and your call to prepare yourself. Any one who goes to hell from Toronto goes there with a vengeance. Look at all your great preachers and heaven-pointing church spires. Consider all your privileges. It was too late to pray for you after you are gone. It might do to pray some poor fellow out of purgatory who had never heard of heaven or hell. But not you. God help men to say: "I will make my peace with Heaven to-night—right now—to-night!" Why can you not say: "If there is one sinner saved in Toronto by the grace of God, thank Heaven I am that sinner!"

Mr. Jones illustrated his discourse with many pleasing anecdotes of his experiences in other cities where he had been hot.

Sam Jones likes nothing better than to pitch into those professed Christians who play cards, dance, go to the theatre, and attend baseball games, and he tells this story to illustrate the point: An aged negro, comparing him and Sam Small, said: "Mars Small preaches de Gospel just like anybody else. But Jones he's got sympathy with us poor culled folks. If a nigger had stole a watermelon or chicken where there's plenty more left, Sam Jones never says anything about it. He's got sympathy; but those highfalutin' sins, don't he make the devil scoot right on the slip?"

An experience meeting, at which large numbers came forward, followed the sermon.

Rowdies With the Chestnut Bell.

From the Iowa State Register.

In one of Davenport's fashionable churches the divine had arranged to deliver a temperance lecture last Sunday evening. The announcement that he would take for his subject the well-known passage, "Wine is a mocker," was greeted by the continued ringing of chestnut bells in the hands of a number of dudes. An attempt was made to arrest the disturbers, which nearly caused the meeting to break up in a row. fight.

A Musical Gale.

And the maiden shrieked in terror;
"'Tis the fierce and dread cyclone;
I can hear its dreadful mutter
And its weird, wild, woful tone!"

But the youth, through gale, was fanning;
And he said: "Oh, hear thy pain;
'Tis the village band who're practing
"When the Robins Nest Again."

Free Trade.

The reduction of internal revenue and the taking off of revenue stamps from Proprietary Medicines, no doubt has largely benefited the consumers, as well as relieving the burden of home manufacturers. Especially is this the case with Green's August Flower and Boschee's German Syrup, as the reduction of thirty-six cents per dozen has been added to increase the size of the bottles containing these remedies, thereby giving one-fifth more medicine in the 75 cent size. The August Flower for Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint, and the German Syrup for Cough and Lung troubles have, perhaps, the largest sale of any medicines in the world. The advantage of increased size of the bottles will be greatly appreciated by the sick and afflicted, in every town and village in civilised countries. Sample bottles for 10c. remain in the same size. eodw41tf

SABINE SWEPT AWAY.

A TEXAN TOWN DESTROYED BY A RIVER'S OVERFLOW.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 14.—Chief Operator West, of the Western Union Telegraph office, this city, last night received the following from the operator at Orange, Texas: The town of Sabine Pass was totally destroyed by the over-flowing of the Sabine River on Tuesday night. It is known that sixty-five lives were lost. During the overflow a hotel containing fifteen or twenty persons was swept out into the bay and all the occupants were drowned.

The captain of a schooner, which has arrived from Sabine Pass, says that not a house is left in the whole country, and that every living thing was drowned.

A party of men came from Beaumont last evening on a train with the intention of joining the people of Orange and going down to Sabine Pass with a relief boat.

A schooner picked up three men in the bay in an exhausted condition. A relief boat has gone from Orange with provisions and clothing for the destitute.

At Orange the Catholic Church was blown down [illegible] siderable other damage was done. The [illegible] wires are all down, and it is impossible to get information from the stricken town.

News from Point a la Hache and points below show that the first account of the damage done by the gale was rather under than over estimated. There has been an almost total destruction of crops of all kinds from Point a la Hache to Port Eads on the east side of the river. The schooner J. and J., lumber-laden, was driven on the levee thirty-five miles below the city, and left high and dry. Two unknown luggers shared the same fate.

What few oranges there were on the trees were blown off. The damage between Point a la Hache and Port Eads in rice, gardens, cattle, poultry, horses, houses, etc., is estimated at $200,000. No loss of life is reported.

An Awful Situation.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 14.—Three citizens who rowed in a small boat across the tossing waters to Beaumont, a distance of several miles from the town of Sabine to the railroad track, came in on an engine and gave a heart-rending account of the affairs. They say the waters began to invade the town from the gulf and lake together about 2 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon and rose with unprecedented rapidity. The citizens of the doomed place did not realize the imminent danger until it was too late to escape. When safety by flight was recognized as being out of the question, the people who were situated so that they could do it betook themselves to the upper part of houses and resorts and adjudged them to be safe. The water kept rising, and between 3 and 4 o'clock the smaller houses began to yield to the resistless force of the waves, which not only moved them from their foundations, but turned them over. A little later the larger houses began to give way, and death by drowning seemed in store for every person in the place. With the yielding of the smaller houses several persons who had remained in them were drowned, and when the residence and business places began to crumble the fatality began to double. Thirty-six white persons and about twenty-five colored persons had been drowned when the men left Sabine the list including the leading families of the place. There are others and many of them doubtless drowned without any one now living knowing anything of it. It is feared that whole families in different places have been swept away, leaving none to describe their terrible fate. It is said that the situation during the latter part of the afternoon beggared description. The manifestation of terror and agony by the people looking face to face with death, and realizing that there was no escape, the dying cries of women rendered almost noiseless by the roar of the mad sea, the hoarse voices of pallid men trying to save those dear to them, all combined made a scene too horrible to be described. The citizens of Beaumont organized at once for relief, and trains and boat were sent forward.

The Tale of Two Brothers.

ORANGE, Texas, Oct. 15.—Two brothers named Pomeroy were picked up by the schooner Andrew Baden in Sabine Lake. They had been in the water thirty-six hours clinging to their capsized yawl. The mother and sister and Mrs. Capt. Junker, her son and a little girl of the party were lost. The Pomeroys report that fifty lives were lost at the Porter House where the people had collected as the place of safety. Many persons are missing and a greater loss is reported from Johnson Bayou. Whole families were swept away. Not a house was left standing within five miles of the lake.

Fearful Devastation.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 14.—A Lake Charles special says: "The loss of property along the Cameron Parish Gulph Coast and for some distance west of Sabine Pass by the storms of Tuesday night was fearful. The mail boat from Cameron Parish reports that the water at Calcasieu Pass was eight feet deep at the lighthouse and that the entire country east and west was submerged drowning thousands of cattle and ruining the crops. The following lives are reported lost at Johnsons Bayou, La: The entire families of Alfred Lambert, Marion Lukes, George Striver, Charles Blanchet, Radford Berry and two families by the name of Transewar, besides many others whose name were not ascertained.

LOST IN THE LAKES.

A SCHOONER FOUNDERS DURING THE STORM IN ERIE.

PORT COLBORNE, Ont. 14.—The schooner Geo. M. Case of Chicago foundered about 1 p. m. when six miles off the harbor. She was bound from Chicago laden with 28,000 bushels corn. The vessel sprung a leak this morning and thinking they could make here they pointed her for this harbor, but she went down before reaching here. A heavy gale from the southwest and a terrible sea was rolling when she went down. The river tug, W. A. Moore, which was on her way to Buffalo, was in sight of the vessel when she went down and made immediately for her. Capt. Ames said he found four men clinging to the rigging and with difficulty rescued two of them. The vessel went down in about seven fathoms of water. She is owned in Chicago by Capt. McDonald, who formerly sailed her. She registered 327 tons. The names of the saved are Mate Jno. Prendergast, sailors Chas. Peterson, C. McCarthy, Ole E. Nysted. Those drowned are Capt. Wm. Daly, Sailor Ole Greene and a woman cook, said to belong in Detroit, and her christian name was Maggie, other name unknown. The last three went down with the vessel and never came up.

Run Down and Sent to the Bottom.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 14.—M. A. Bradley of this city received a despatch from the captain of the steamer Selah Chamberlain at 1.30 this morning, informing him that the Chamberlain had been run down by a New York Central boat and had gone to the bottom six miles east of Sheboygan on Lake Michigan. The despatch states that the second engineer and four deck hands were drowned. The Chamberlain was bound from Milwaukee to Escanaba and had a crew of sixteen men on board. She was owned by the Bradley heirs of Cleveland and was valued at $80,000.

Capt. Greenley, of the lost barge says he does not know the names of the men who lost their lives. The unfortunates were the second engineer, fireman, and three deck hands. The Chamberlain was struck in the port bow and was cut down below the water line. She immediately began to sink, and Capt. Greenley ordered the boats lowered. The five men who were lost jumped into one of the boats when the davits broke and they dumped into the lake and drowned. The Chamberlain lies about three miles east of Cheboygan point.

The captain of the steamer, John Pridgeon, Jr., says the boats came together during a dense fog and a heavy gale about 9 o'clock and immediately separated. He did not know the name of the steamer she collided with, nor did he know anything concerning her fate until he arrived here. He cruised about in the vicinity of the scene of the collision until 12 o'clock last night but could not discover anything, so he headed for this port. The members of the Pridgeon's crew saw the Chamberlain's Consort Fayette Brown drift off in the darkness after the collision.

STORMS ALL OVER.

The Wires Down Generally—Great Destruction of Property.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Western Union officials report that the storm which prevailed in Texas and Louisiana yesterday and the day before is now traveling in a northeasterly direction, and is cutting off telegraphic communication as it progresses.

New Orleans reports that it has no wires West and that the whole coast territory from New Orleans to Galveston is cut off. As the storm is still raging in the southeast it will be some time before any details of the disaster at Sabine Pass can be obtained.

Detroit reports that a cyclone is now prevailing in Indiana and Michigan. Nearly all the telegraph wires have been blown down.

A Yacht Race off Toledo.

TOLEDO, O., Oct. 14.—All the wires between here and Chicago and St. Louis are blown down or grounded and fearful storms prevail west of here. There is a big yacht race for $1000 on Lake Erie to-day and great fears are expressed for the safety of the yachtsmen. The judge's boat and the steamer Waite put into Monroe. The yachts have not been heard from for several hours. The wind is blowing forty-four miles an hour here and at least sixty on the lake.

9 p.m.—The four yachts have arrived safe at Munroe, Mich.

A Cyclone at Fort Wayne.

CINCINNATI, October, 14—A Fort Wayne despatch says the cyclone has unroofed many business buildings and destroyed a large amount of property. A fire broke out and five buildings had been destroyed when the despatch was sent at 3 p. m. No communication since.

At Chicago.

CHICAGO, Oct 14.—Very severe and growing in intensity. Meagre reports are being received, as the wires are down in all directions. The city streets are deserted. A number of houses in the suburbs have been torn down by the high wind.

The telegraph officials state that the storm has given more trouble than any for five years.

Destruction off Buffalo.

BUFFALO, Oct. 14.—The most terrific gale known for years set in this afternoon, and at midnight the wind was blowing 65 miles an hour. "The Island," inhabited by squatters, is completely flooded and huge waves are now rushing over it. Twenty-nine houses are wrecked, rendering 100 persons homeless. The family of Chas. Lambert were drowned before the eyes of a party of rescuers. Several others are reported missing. The people are moving their household effects to the main land. The basements of all the houses on Canal-street are flooded and the inmates are taking refuge in the saloons on the upper floors. All the lumber-yards on the Island are wrecked. The damage to shipping is very great. Barges are floating over Evans' dock. A number are reported gone to pieces. The roof of the Western Transportation house is blown off and the blocks of the Lackawana track, on Main and Michigan-streets, are flooded 700 feet from the dock. Ohio-street, is completely flooded. The damage will be enormous and it is feared the loss of life will be greater than already reported.

Notes of the Blow.

At Eastport, Me., yesterday evening, a fearful fire was raging. Five sardine factories and several dwellings and stores had been burned. The whole business part of the town was in danger of being destroyed.

EXASPERATED ANARCHISTS.

Threats Against Officers of the Law at Chicago.

CHICAGO, Oct. 14.—Judge Gary, State-Attorney Grinnell and Police-Captain Schaack, are constantly receiving threatening letters. The last one received by the State-Attorney was written in French and signed "Robespierre." In it the writer, in polite language, informed Grinnell that he would cut his throat at the first "convenience." Within the last two days Judge Gary has been favored with two particularly wicked epistles. Preceding these Mrs. Gary was sent a polite note informing her of her husband's impending death. Yesterday Mrs. Schaack received a similar letter relative to her husband. Messrs. Ingraham, Walker and Furthman, Grinnell's assistants, and Detective James Bonfield, as well as his brother, the inspector, have been given occasional promises of a violent fate. A number of arrests will probably soon be made.

A DAY AT BRANTFORD.

RAIN INTERFERES WITH CEREMONIES OF THE UNVEILED STATUE.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 14.—The celebrations in connection with the unveiling of the Brant monument were continued here this morning, but the arrangements were badly upset by the rain which fell heavily most of the day. A procession representing all the leading industries and merchants of the city took place at 10 o'clock. The manufacturers of stoves, pianos, and other articles made a good showing. In the afternoon a baseball match between Toronto and Hamilton besides other attractions had to be declared off.

The rain, however, did not interfere with a carriage drive to Joseph Brant's grave and the Mohawk Institute for the education of Indian children. The Institute is situated about one and a half miles from the city. The party was made up of the Cree and Blackfeet Chiefs from the Northwest, with their interpreters, press representatives, Father Lambert, and city guests. The walk through the Institute was instructive. There are ninety Indian children between the ages of 10 and 16 receiving a good English training. They were all assembled in the school room for inspection, and sang "Tell me ye winged winds," and other songs with a clear English accent. They are not allowed to speak their native tongue in school. The girls were remarkable for their good looks and plump figures. The first is attributable in a measure to the white blood in their veins. One of these Indian maidens had red hair, and several would readily pass for white children. The institute is supported entirely by a society in London, England. It is under the charge of Rev. Mr. Ashton, who has two charming daughters and an efficient staff of teachers to assist him.

The Mohawk Church, which is over 100 years old, and the first place of worship erected in Western Canada, was also visited. It has a plain, weather-beaten appearance from the outside, but within all is kept new and clean. The bones of the great Indian chief are interred in the shadow of the church which he erected. The stone slab covering the grave has had its edges chipped away by relic hunters, although it is surrounded by a six-foot iron fence. The country surrounding Brantford is as fine a stretch as there is in Ontario and in its autumn garb looked particularly inviting.

RUSSIA'S INTRIGUES REJECTED.

Turkey Declines to Listen to Muscovite Overtures.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—Diplomats believe that Russia has selected Prince Alexander, of Oldenburg, as her candidate for the Bulgarian throne.

General Kaulbars, the Russian military agent, has been ordered by his government to abandon his proposed journey to Roumelia.

The Austrian official journals warn Bulgaria against electing a prince until the powers have agreed upon the most suitable person to select. They also counsel her to abstain in every way from provoking Russia.

The complicity of Karaveloff and Tzanoff in the plot against Prince Alexander has been confirmed. They will be tried, but will not be punished, in view of their exclusion from a political career.

General Kaulbars left Varna this morning on a special train for Rustchuk. His departure was sudden and unexpected. Orders were sent to Rustchuk to have supper prepared for him, and to have horses in readiness for an immediate journey. It is believed he is going to Tirnova.

The Election of the Sobranje.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 14.—The Journal De St. Petersburg denounces the manner in which the elections in Bulgaria for members of the great sobranje were conducted. It accuses the Government party of terrorizing the minority with stone and cudgel, and asserts that the regency prevents the circulation abroad of news showing the true situation of affairs. This, however, and the results of Gen. Kaulbars' mission, the Journal says, will be eventually known, and it will be shown that Gen. Kaulbars has acquitted himself with a devotion and self-abnegation worthy of the cause whose triumph he seeks.

Reached an Acute Stage.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—Lord Iddesleigh had a prolonged interview to-day with the Russian Ambassador. It is undeniable that the crisis in Bulgaria has reached an acute stage.

A Pure Invention.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—Lord Iddesleigh has authorized a denial of the report published in the Journal de St. Petersburg of a public meeting alleged to have been held at Rustchuck. This report said that at the meeting a telegram from Prince Alexander was read announcing that he would return to Bulgaria if reelected. The report further said that the British consul advised the meeting to resist the demands of Russia. The British consul at Rustchuk reports that no such meeting was held and Lord Iddesleigh is assured that the report in question was a pure invention.

Russia's Intrigues Rejected.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—Turkey has rejected Russia's overtures for joint action against England and Austria. The inducement offered was the reoccupation of Bosnia and Herzegovina by Turkey and Russia to proclaim a protectorate over and to occupy Bulgaria; Egypt to be occupied by a mixed French and Turkish garrison under the superior command of a French general, and Greece to be given back her lost territory. The proposals also referred to a Russian campaign against India. France strongly supported Russia and offered financial assistance to Turkey.

SOCIALISM IN BELGIUM.

An Appeal to the German Police for Aid in Its Suppression.

BERLIN, Oct. 14.—The Belgian Government has asked the aid of the detective agents of Berlin, Leipsic and other Socialist centres in tracing the ramification of Socialist plots discovered in Brussels and Antwerp. The Belgian authorities accuse the German Anarchists of inciting the workmen in Hainaut and Charleroi to further outbreaks. The miners at Charleroi have ceased working. They demand the pardon of the workmen who were sentenced for complicity in the recent riots, and threaten reprisals.

Made Sure of Their Work.

MONTICELLO, Ill., Oct. 14.—At 1 o'clock this morning 200 disguised men overpowered the sheriff and broke into the jail and took therefrom Henry Wildman, the wife-murderer, and hanged him to a shade tree near the jail. After hanging him they shot him eleven times to make sure of their work. Wildman cut his wife's throat on July 30, and has been in jail ever since.

Killed His Crippled Father.

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 14.—Abram Hadden, who shot and killed his aged and crippled father at Byron Tuesday night, was pursued by a crowd yesterday and narrowly escaped lynching. The officers barely succeeded in hurrying him to jail at Corunna. He is a quarrelsome fellow and shot his father five times deliberately, after a dispute which he had himself provoked.

Quebec Elections.

A LIBERAL VICTORY.

The latest returns as we go to press, indicate that the Ross (Tory) Government have been defeated in the provincial elections held yesterday, the despatches giving five majority for Mercier. The breaking of the wires, by the storm, prevents the obtaining of full details. There has been a sweeping change in public opinion in Quebec. The gross corruption of the Ross Government and its Tory predecessors has worn out the patience of the people. The defeat of the Bleus in face of the strength of the Dominion Government thrown in to their aid, presages a cold welcome for the Dominion Government at the coming elections.

Business Failures.

In connection with the suspension of Mr. John W. Miller, boots and shoes, the following is a statement of assets and liabilties:

Total stock	$1,371 00
Book debts	168 60
Total	$1,539 60
PRIVILEGED CLAIMS.
Rent	$ 250 00
Taxes	60 45
Chattel Mortgage (to J. Stevenson)	550 00
Bailiff's charges	65 00
Wages	30 00
Total	$ 955 45
Unsecured liabilities	1,975 78
Realized by sale of stock, etc	871 45

It will thus be seen that the amount realized from the sale of stock, etc., comes within $87.00 of paying the secured privileged claims, leaving $1,975.78 of unsecured liabilities with no assets to meet them.

In the case of George Nelson, Ashburnham, tanner, who has also suspended, he values his real estate at $7,500, with a mortgage thereon of $6,400, leaving an estimated balance of $1,100, with $1,200 stock, or a total of $2,300 to pay unsecured liabilities of $6,930. He offers 25c. on the $ cash, which has not yet been accepted.

"Mr. Fenton! Mr. Eastmead! This is an unexpected pleasure."

"Possibly," I said, all the suspicions of the man which during the last few hours had risen in my mind betraying themselves in my face and voice. "I am here, however, Dr. Branksome, as the representative of Miss Stancliffe, and, as you will see, I am accompanied by Mr. Eastmead, as the representative of the law."

"I think, sir, you forget yourself," replied Branksome. "I have no wish to cast any doubts upon the sincerity of your interest in the unfortunate lady whose guardian I am, but I have the better to be the only person who can claim to be her legal representative."

My hot blood mounted to my cheeks, and I was about to answer him angrily, when Eastmead again interposed.

"This gentleman, Dr. Branksome, acts under a power of attorney from Miss Stancliffe. You will hardly dispute his right to represent her when you know that."

"A power of attorney! Monstrous! Impossible! She would never have signed such a document without consulting me."

"Dr. Branksome," I said, "we will not bandy words, if you please. I hold this power of attorney, and I thank God that I do so; and now I am going into this house to look for, and I believe to find, the proofs of the innocence of the girl whom you professed to shield and left to die."

"My dear fellow," retorted Branksome, with just the suspicion of a sneer in his tones, "why will you be always so melodramatic? If you had told me at first what your object was, you would not have needed any power of attorney to get admittance to this house. By all means enter and welcome."

He threw open the door in front of which we had been standing, and, bowing politely, waited till we had preceded him.

In the hall I turned and said, "I have come here, Dr. Branksome, to make a general search through the house; and although, as Miss Stancliffe's legally appointed representative, I can take any course I please, I have no objection to your accompanying me in that search."

"My good sir," he retorted, "I think you must really excuse me. You have not come here in a very friendly fashion this afternoon, and you can hardly be surprised if, under the circumstances, I conceive that it may be more satisfactory to yourself, as it certainly will be to me, that you should go about your work in your own way. At the same time, whenever you wish for luncheon you will find it on the table, and I shall be happy to join you. Of course, as Miss Stancliffe's representative, you need have no feeling of delicacy about making your wishes in that matter known."

His perfect coolness and composure had their effect upon me, and that lightning flash in which I had seen him for an instant as a villain of colossal iniquity, faded more and more completely from my memory.

But I lost no time in beginning my search. Mary Taylor, Daisy's maid, was summoned and came quickly, as did Mrs. Cawthorne, who had returned broken-hearted to the hall at the close of the trial. I soon explained to the girl that what we wanted to see was the door leading to the private staircase. She looked somewhat confused when I told her this; probably she recollected the last occasion on which she had herself made use of that door.

We found that the door was in one of the panelled recesses of the drawing room corridor. It had no handle, and any one might have passed it a hundred times without perceiving its existence. Taylor pressed the door in the middle, and it slowly opened, revealing a staircase, narrow, dirty and dusty, beyond.

"Mr. Eastmead," I said, "you represent the law, and I leave it to you to make the first attempt to verify the statement which Miss Stancliffe has made to me."

"Bring a light here," said the officer; and one of the many servants, who were watching us in wonder, darted into the adjoining room, and quickly reappeared with a lighted wax candle. Taking this in his hand, Eastmead passed through the door. I could see him moving the candle to and fro, and then he uttered a slight exclamation and closed the door upon us. Immediately afterward he opened it and came out into the corridor, begrimed with dust and cobwebs, but wearing an air of triumph on his face.

"I have found this on the narrow ledge or shelf above the door inside," he said.

He held out to me, as he spoke, a small parcel wrapped in paper that had once been white. I seized it with feverish eagerness. Pasted upon it was a label, bearing in writing the address: "Miss Stancliffe, Great Lorton Hall," and in print the word "Poison" in large letters, and the name and address of Smirke, the Little Lorton chemist. The parcel was sealed, and we saw that the seal bore Smirke's name.

The parcel was sealed.

I could not restrain the cry of joy and thankfulness which broke from my lips.

"My friends," I said to the men and women around me, "your poor mistress will not be saved"

Mrs. Cawthorne burst into tears, as did most of the women. I can only answer for myself among the men. I could not keep back the tears of joy which were welling from my eyes.

It now occurred to me that, as most of the rooms in the hall had been searched by the police under Mr. Eastmead himself on the issue of Daisy's arrest, I might begin my own investigation by exploring the secret passage in which we had already found so important a piece of evidence. Bidding the servants remain where they were, we slowly climbed the narrow winding stair. It led into a corridor equally narrow and very long, unlighted and ill-ventilated, so that more than once the candle which Eastmead carried seemed to be on the point of expiring.

At the end was apparently a blank wall of dark oak. But looking closely at it I detected the place where the girl had introduced the knife on the night when she had brought to me the note from Daisy. I had brought the knife with me, and in another instant, by means of it, I had caused the panel to slide into a recess. It revealed an opening of the depth of the wall, beyond which there was another panel. This I was able to move without difficulty. I pushed it aside with my hand. Still the way was barred, but upon this occasion it was nothing more substantial than the heavy leather hangings of the haunted room. Great ingenuity had been shown in the arrangement by which an opening could be made at will through these hangings without any evidence of its existence being afforded to an occupant of the room.

Once more I found myself in that well-remembered chamber. It looked cold and dark despite its handsome furniture. Apparently it had not been occupied since the night when I slept there. I opened the door leading into the little sitting room where I had breakfasted by myself on the morning on which I left the hall. To my surprise it showed signs of having been recently occupied. There was a book lying on the table. I recognized it instantly. It was the copy of Guy and Ferrier's "Forensic Medicine," which I had studied so intently during my imprisonment on board the yacht.

CAPTAIN WILLIAM SLATER, No. 37 Granville Street, Halifax, N.S.

N. WASHINGTON, M. D., Throat and Lung Specialist, Toronto.

DEAR SIR,—When you visited me in the latter part of January of this year I had been given up to die of consumption by a consultation of Physicians, Drs. Reid and Oliver, prominent physicians of Halifax who considered that my recovery was simply impossible. I had no hope myself nor had my family. When you expressed a hope of my recovery it was received with a doubt. Confined to my bed, very low, weak wasted, night sweats very bad, troublesome cough, raising large quantities of matter—in fact every appearance of a speedy death. After using your Respirator and Spirometer and medicine I began to recover very fast, so much so that during three hard winter months I have gained from 20 to 25 lbs., and was able to walk out on Easter Sunday. My strength is daily increasing, and I shall be able soon to be at work. To you I owe and expense of gratitude, and am anxious for others who are suffering as I was to consult you. You can make what use of this letter you see fit, and thanking you for what I consider a most wonderful treatment.

I remain, yours truly,

CAPT. WM. SLATER.

From its wonderful power over this terribly fatal disease, when first offering this now celebrated remedy to the public, Dr. Pierce thought seriously of calling it his "Consumption Cure," but abandoned that name as too limited for a medicine which, from its wonderful combination of tonic, or strengthening, alterative, or blood-cleansing, anti-bilious, pectoral, and nutritive properties, is unequaled, not only as a remedy for consumption of the lungs, but for all

LOCAL NEWS.

A Cordially Reception.

A gentleman residing on Water street is just now the laughing-stock of a few intimate friends who are acquainted with the facts of a little incident which occurred the other evening. About 12 o'clock the gentleman in question was awakened by the noise of some one trying to open the front door. He dressed himself, and going down stairs enquired who was there. "It's me," came the reply in thick, stammering accents. Not just knowing who the particular "me" referred to was, the gentleman concluded he had to deal with an intoxicated individual who had mistaken his boarding house. He quietly opened the door, let fly his vigorous right arm, and followed up his victory by hustling the unfortunate drunk across the road at the toe of his boot. Nothing more was heard of him, but on enquiry next day it was ascertained that he was intimate friend of the Water street gentleman, and had come to town for the express purpose of reviving old memories, but having fallen a victim to the wily charms of "Moxie," had reached his friend's home in an unpresentable condition. He should now be able to appreciate the old saying—"a friend in need is a friend indeed."

Opens With Bang.

The close season for deer ended yesterday, and to-day the bounding buck is legitimate game for the sportsmen's rifle. "The woods is full of 'em"—that is, if the deer are as plentiful as the deer hunters. Already from town several parties have gone out to what, it is hoped, will prove the "happy hunting grounds"—to the north of us—and there is more to follow. It is a frequent sight on the streets to see men dodging around to the back entrance with a fragmentary portion of last year's shot-gun or rifle, and if followed to their haunts, they will be found diligently engaged, up to their eyes in emery cloth and sweet oil, scrubbing up their arms to bring them into a condition to administer the "crack of doom" to some unfortunate stag or partridge, as the case may be, and whose slaughter, in the case of many sportmen, would warrant a jury in bringing in a verdict of "accidental death."

General Booth's Staff.

The following is the list of officers who will accompany General Booth during his visit to Peterborough: Colonel Dowdle, Commissioner Coombs, Major Margett, Staff Captain Vint, (the man of many languages,) Staff Captain Griffiths (the Welsh minstrel,) Staff Capt. Morton, D. O. of New Brunswick; Staff Captain Young, D. O. of Nova Scotia; Staff Captain Eadie, D. O. of Kingston division, Staff Captain Spooner, A. D. C. of Montreal and Ottawa divisions. Specials Southall, Calhoun and Philpots, eighteen field officers and delegates from Fenelon Falls, Omemee, Millbrook, Port Hope, Cobourg, Lakefield, Lindsay, Port Perry will participate in the welcome on Monday. Capts. Smith and Langtry, late of Peterborough, will also be present.

Hallow Een

The near approach of Hallow Een, (Oct. 31st) is creating a tremor excitement and anticipation among the boys. Gardens are being raided for ripe pumpkins or decayed vegetables, tallow candles are being stored away for future use, last year's pea shooter, which mysteriously disappeared during the summer, is being vigorously searched for from cellar to garret, and numerous juvenile brains are busy concocting some "racket" to work on their unsuspecting neighbors. Among the adults arrangements are being made on all sides for those little social gatherings which tend so powerfully towards bringing about "peace and good will among men"—and girls.

A New Wrinkle.

The dairy maid social in connection with the Charlotte street Methodist Church is certainly something new and unique in that line. The young ladies of the church, arrayed in complete milk-maid costume, will dispense the refreshments. The entertainment will be gotten up and managed entirely by the ladies; no gentleman having the least to do with the affair. Go and have a good time next Thursday evening, 21st inst. Admission, including refreshments, 25 cents.

A Local Vanderbilt.

Every week the Bon Marche presents some fresh and startling bargains to the public. There one sees a ticket of a staple line of teas marked, "6 pounds for $1," and one wonders how such value can be given for the money. This is but a solitary instance of the surprising bargains to be had at the Bon Marche. Mr. Carton must be a veritable Vanderbilt in the wholesale market, as he seems able to "bull" or "bear" it to suit the pockets of his customers.

Gone to Join the Band.

This morning at the ghostly hour of four o'clock Messrs. H. LeBrun and H. W. Keat started for Eagle Lake a short distance this side of the Ottawa River, to join the William English deer hunting party. May the luck of the "Golden Horseshoe" and the Club attend them. They will stay with the hunting party till the hunting season is over.

The Parker-MacDuff Concert.

The First of the Series—Held Under Discouraging Circumstances—The Tempestuous Weather Makes a Thin House—The Programme Carried Out.

Last night the first of Messrs. Parker and MacDuff's series of subscription concerts was held in Bradburn's Opera House, under most discouraging circumstances. In the first place the violent gale, which set in at nightfall, forbade all but the most venturesome from turning out. In consequence the hall contained a very small audience, quite out of proportion to the merits of the performance. During the day the reserved seat plan was well filled, but at night there were numerous vacant seats labelled "taken." A large number held season tickets, and doubtless the howling tempest that prevailed, decided them to defer their attendance till the next concert. So exceedingly unfavorable was the night to the attendance of the public, and so forbidding to the proper presentation of a programme, that it is a question whether it would not have been wiser but for the large expense already involved to have postponed the concert altogether. The gale, coming in violent gusts, poured through every crevice, chilling the audience and literally blowing the sheets of music from the piano and music stands. So great was the latter nuisance that a gentleman was detailed to hold the music down while the performer was using it. This, of course, militated against faultless execution, and had a large share in detracting from the smoothness of the performances.

The concert was opened by the Mendelssohn glee club presenting, in excellent time and harmony, Kerrison's "Canadian National Anthem." This was followed by Prof. Parker's brilliant rendition of a piano solo, Weber's "Les Adieux," which was played in his usual exceptionally brilliant style. The appearance of Rose Braniff, of Toronto, a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music, Boston, was looked for with interest, and the manner in which she acquitted herself did not disappoint the high expectations that had been formed. Her first number, Eckhart's "Swiss Echo" song, was listened to with breathless attention, and at the conclusion of it, she received enthusiastic applause and a vigorous recall, which brought her out in "Jamie Dear." In the second part she gave "Queen of the Night" with great success, and in answer to the enthusiastic encore, gave her delighted hearers a new idea of the beauty of the simple old song, "Coming Through the Rye." Rose Baniff's singing has a peculiar charm. To a sweet, rich, sympathetic voice, thoroughly cultivated, she adds excellent expression, and where the circumstances demand it, considerable dramatic force. The numbers selected last night, gave the impression that sweetness and pathos best suit her voice, but when the score demanded it, she came out strong, full and clear. Rose Baniff, on her first appearance in Peterborough, scored a decided success. Mr. MacDuff made his first appearance in violin solo, "Berceuse," played "mute," and so great was the delight of the audience that he was heartily encored. His second number, "I, Lombardi," (Vieuxtemps' arrangement) developed his great power as a finished performer on this difficult instrument. His third selection, "Scotch Airs," arranged by himself, was a masterpiece. The imitation of the bag-pipes—the sustained drone and all, necessitated the employment at once of three strings, and was capitally done. Mr. MacDuff's name on a programme will always prove a drawing card. Miss Vair gave a very happy rendering of "Your Story and Mine." She has a sweet, flexible voice of much power and compass, and with training will make her mark as a vocalist. The Mendelssohn Glee Club, which consists of Misses Strickland, Wells, Stevens, Logan and Vair, and Messrs. Budden, Dawson, Manning and Hudgins, opened the second part of the programme with the "Cuckoo." Miss Stevens, who has a rich, full contralto voice, sang "Charite" in a pleasing manner. The effect of Messrs. Parker and Jacques' pianoforte was almost spoiled by the wind tossing about the sheets of music, each having to play with one hand at times, and they would probably have been compelled to cease playing had not Mr. MacDuff "laid on" and held down the sheets. The programme closed with "God Save the Queen" by "the company."

In explanation of the non-appearance of Mrs. Martin Murphy, it may be explained that an attack of illness prevented her coming. At the last moment Rose Baniff was applied to, and fortunately an opening in the numerous engagements her superb singing secures her, enabled her to come to Peterborough on this occasion, and not only to save from disappointment, but to delight with her sweet singing.

Just What We Might Expect.

The Hastings Star, in referring to the recent repairs to the dam at that place, says: "The coffer dam was removed on Wednesday of last week and our beautiful river once more resumed its normal appearance. The repairs to the dam are now completed, and the vast quantity of work performed within such a short time, and the thoroughness of the job, speak volumes for the executive abilities of the engineer, Mr. R. B. Rogers, of Peterborough, and the foreman in charge, Mr. Wm. Kennedy, of Robcaygeon, on whom the burden of the mechanical work rested, and which was intelligently, economically and efficiently carried out to the minutest details.

A Big Blow.

Thursday night the tail end of Wiggins' great "blow" struck Peterborough and raised Cain generally. Trees and chimneys were tumbled over, windows blown in, fences blown down, while the strength of awnings and swinging signs was severely tested. Some lumber piles in Hazlitt's mill yard were scattered about. Orchards in the country were pretty well riddled, and one may expect the market to-morrow to be glutted with wind-falls. A large tree was thrown across the telegraph wires near Hilliard's mill.

A Specimen of Scott Act Fun.

A Summary Seizure and a Summary Steal.

(From a Correspondent.)

On Tuesday afternoon a vigorous attempt to enforce the Scott Act resulted in a good deal of excitement to the border inhabitants of Cavan and South Monaghan. Two constables, armed with the authority of the License Inspector of Northumberland, made a descent upon the hotel of Mr. Archibald Reynolds, Fraserville, whom they caught, it is claimed, in flagrante delicto. The result of their domiciliary visit was that they found a considerable quantity of intoxicating liquors. These they confiscated and carried away with them, not forgetting to remove the beer pump. The officers started for home with their booty, calling at Centreville for the purpose of procuring lodgings for the night. The hotel-keeper there, who had received a whisper of their official character and intentions, refused to accommodate them. Neither threats nor entreaties availed them anything, and they were compelled to jog on without supper. Proceeding to Baillieboro' they secured lodgings at Kent's hotel, looking their waggon-load of alcoholic spoil in the shed. Next morning everything was gone but the vehicle and the beer pump, the spirits evidently acting according to the habits of the ghost family—or perhaps of the "Long Swamp Ghost" of pioneer memory—decamping at daylight. Some persons had pulled off a few boards, and having once gained entrance to the shed, the work of carrying off the liquor was comparatively easy. The disappointed "peelers" were greatly chagrined at having thus been outwitted, but they have got no redress as yet. The charge against Mr. Reynolds was tried Thursday at Cold Springs, before two Justices of the Peace. It is said that he intended to admit the charge and pay the fine.

Police Court.

FRIDAY, Oct. 15th.

John Tanner, charged by P. C. Pidgeon, with being drunk and disorderly on October 12th, was tried at the Police Court this morning and discharged.

Mathew Macdonald, charged with being drunk and disorderly, whose case was enlarged from Tuesday, was this morning fined $2, and costs.

The trial of the case against Wm. Snowden, for violation of the Scott Act, was concluded this morning before Police Magistrate Dumble. The defendant, being yet ill, was not present. Several witnesses were examined for the purpose of proving that at the time of the liquor selling, the bar was not under the control of Mr. Snowden, he having leased it to another party, but the evidence to this effect was not considered decisive, and a fine of $100 and costs was imposed, this being the second offence. W. A. Stratton for prosecution; E. B. Stone for defence. The counsel for defendant has taken steps to enter an appeal against the conviction.

What True Merit Will Do.

The unprecedented sale of Boschee's German Syrup within a few years has astonished the world. It is without doubt the safest and best remedy ever discovered for the speedy and effectual cure of Coughs, Colds and the severest Lung troubles. It acts on an entirely different principle from the usual prescriptions given by physicians, as it does not dry up a cough and leave the disease still in the system, but on the contrary removes the cause of the trouble, heals the parts affected, and leaves them in a purely healthy condition. A bottle kept in the house for use when the diseases make their appearance, will save doctor's bills and a long spell of serious illness. A trial will convince you of these facts. It is positively sold by all druggists and general dealers in the land. Price 75c., large bottles. eodw41tf

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 20th, 1886.

GENTLEMEN,—Being over 70 years of age, and over 30 years ruptured, looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two springless trusses made in New York State, costing me $40. Neither would retain my rupture. I have worn your truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort; even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down, it holds me perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. H. KING.

This new Spiral Spring Pad Truss has taken ten years to make it perfect; is guaranteed to hold the very worst case during the hardest work or severest strain. It will cure many [illegible]; and 95 out of every 100 of adults. Be warned—don't waste your money on [illegible] cases, but send stamp for our treatise; it contains full information, your [illegible] price list and questions for you to answer. CELEBRITIES IN GOTHAM.

The Canadian Club Flourishing — The "Boodle" Aldermen.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—The quarterly meeting of the Canadian Club held to-night showed a satisfactory state of finances and growth of membership. A movement is on foot to introduce increased facilities for enjoyment and to extend proposals for more intimate relations with branches of the various British societies in New York.

The most interesting topic in the city is the expected trial of the remainder of the "boodle" aldermen and indictment of their seducer, Mr. Jake Sharpe. The doings of the criminal courts seem always to be the most fascinating events to the bulk of New York.

The questions involved in the mayoralty contest are a trifle too abstract to be wisely talked about. The most singular statements are heard on the cars and ferries as to the tenets of Mr. George. They excite in the majority only vague feelings of dread, and this is true even of workingmen who have all been brought up to imagine that some day they would be wealthy (all Americans do) and land owners, and they have gathered from the papers that if George is mayor he will in some way make this impossible. At first a good many semi-intelligent and half instructed fellows who had read the preface to "Progress and Poverty" and been drowned in the body of the book, declared their intention of voting for George, though they knew well enough that, as Mayor, he could not move an inch towards realizing his doctrines. They had a notion that they would be voting for an idea; and the last presidential election rather set the fashion of voting for ideas and not party names, as was the practice from the war period down to 1884. The so-called capitals movement in favor of Simmons is another example of the same thing. But they have been a little startled by the demonstrated consequences of that idea, and the number of well-to-do people who thought of casting a ballot for "Progress and Poverty" is diminishing daily.

A few divines of radical tendencies have talked and preached in favor of Mr. George; but rather to his detriment I take it, inasmuch as his political notions have got mixed up with religious heterodoxy.

Chartered boycotting and licensed striking (in the destructive sense), as the more certain results of George's mayoralty, have frightened the employers on one hand, and the impossibility of maintaining savings banks when the mortgage securities on which they rely fall with the confiscation of rents have made the employed uneasy on the other.

Apart from politics there is a good deal of cheerfulness. Preparations for social undertakings are numerous and extensive; and weddings were never so frequent or imposing. In New York weddings vary with the stock market as they do with the price of bread in England.

Mr. Paine of the observatory has been in town with his bride. Sir Wm. B. Richards is sojourning here, and Messrs. W. F. Collins, E. J. Smith, C. R. H. Warnock are other Ontario men who have been here during the week. W. A. P.

Happiness at Hamilton.

HAMILTON, Oct. 15.—Mr. Æmilius Jarvis, manager of the Traders' Bank here, and Miss Augusta Irving, were married here yesterday at the Church of the Ascension. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Hartley Carmichael, assisted by Dean Carmichael of Montreal. The bride is the youngest daughter of Mr. Æmilius Irving, Q.C. The church was filled by a large and fashionably-dressed concourse. Miss Robinson of Government House was the bridesmaid, and Mr. H. E. Gates acted as best man.

Gen. Booth in Montreal.

MONTREAL, Oct. 15.—General Booth, commander of the Salvation Army, addressed a large meeting to-night, advocating the claims of the Army. Commissioner Coombs of Toronto made an urgent appeal for funds for the barracks to be erected here.

Racing in England.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—The race for the Ninth Great Challenge Stakes of 20 sovereigns each, half forfeit, with 4500 added, was run to-day at Newmarket over the Rreiby Stakes Course (six furlongs). There were 41 subscribers. Prince Soltykoff's 3-year-old chestnut colt Mephisto won by two lengths, R. Carrington's 2-year-old bay colt, by George Frederick-Miss Belle, second, T. Jenning's 3-year-old bay colt, Exmoor, third. The last betting was 3 to 1 on Mephisto. The race for the Prendergast Stakes of 50 sovereigns each, half forfeit, with 2200 added, for 3-year-olds, about two-thirds of a mile, was won by J. A. Cravens' brown colt Hugo by half a length, the Duke of Beaufort's chestnut filly Rove d'Or second, Prince Soltykoff's colt Abad third. The betting was 9 to 1 on Hugo.

Racing in the States.

BRIGHTON BEACH, Oct. 15.—First race, 1 mile—Theodosius won, Pool Box second, Paymaster third; time 1.42. Second race, 1 mile—Bill Owens won, Meatmore second, Moonshine third; time 1.46½. Third race, 1-mile—Winona won, Petersburg second, Miller third; time 1.52. Fourth race, 1½ miles—Lancaster won, Joe Mitchell second, Supervisor third; time 1.56½. Fifth race, 1 1-16 miles—Jim Douglas won, Sexony second, Minnie Hunt third; time 1.51.

The Southern League.

The next Southern League season will begin May 1 and close Oct. 1. Umpires will be paid $200 a month and will pay their own expenses. The salary limit is abolished. John Morrow of Nashville has been elected president. S. H. Carson of Memphis vice-president. Each club will pay a [illegible] fine of $100 into the treasury for [illegible] for unbecoming conduct; Savannah was fined $100 each for three games and played with Atlanta. New Orleans was admitted to membership, offering to pay a guarantee [illegible] games instead of 40.

BY WIND AND WATER.

TERRIBLE DESTRUCTION TO LIFE AND PROPERTY AT SABINE PASS.

BEAUMONT, TEX., Oct. 15.—The relief party which went from this place to Sabine Pass are at work there succoring the destitute people. The train could not get within twelve miles of Sabine but the party had brought along a dozen boats and quickly made their way to the spot. A relief committee of seventy had gone down on the steamer Lamar on Wednesday night from Orange and Beaumont. About forty of them returned last night so worn out and overcome by the horrible devastation they had to witness that it was next to impossible to get a detailed account. The committee report that 101 persons are missing, ninety of whom are known to be drowned. Thirty-five of the victims are whites and 55 colored. The steamer brought up 91 starving and destitute victims of the flood and storm. These were quickly housed and cared for by the citizens of Beaumont. They are nearly all sick and prostrated by exhaustion and hunger. Dr. Calhoun, Mayor of Beaumont, was one of the Relief Committee. He states that of more than 150 houses in the Village of Sabine Pass less than six are standing, and they have been moved from their foundations. Corpses have been picked up at a distance of thirty miles from the scene of the disaster. Friends and relatives of drowned residents are coming into Orange and Beaumont by every train. The steamboat Lamar took on board a cargo of food, blankets and clothing, and also a fresh relief committee, and started at daylight down the Neches to succor the unfortunate. She will probably reach here on her return trip about midnight to-night. The primary damage to Sabine, including that to government works, will aggregate $500,000. Many plantations sustained serious injury. Sabine Pass is located at the mouth of the Sabine River, within half a mile of the extreme point jutting from the Texas side. The town lies only four feet above mean tide mark, and is bounded by a great swamp on the west and Lake Sabine on the north. The entrance to Lake Sabine is a mile and a half above the town. The lake is fifteen miles long by ten miles wide, with an average depth of seven feet, which is always maintained by the huge volume of water pouring into the basin from the two navigable rivers, Neches and Sabine. It was this lake, according to the most experienced navigators on the coast, that destroyed the town.

The hurricane of last Sunday in the West Indies blew the waters with great violence towards the Texas coast. This hurricane wave was first noticed on this coast on Sunday morning, making its maximum on Tuesday afternoon and was maintained at a high point by the impetus of the waters behind. The hurricane itself did not reach this coast at all, as scarcely a breath of wind was stirring when the tidal wave first touched the coast. When its maximum was reached on Tuesday afternoon, however, a fierce northwestern gale sprung up along the whole coast, and at Sabine this gale blew the waters out of Lake Sabine and drove them toward the gulf, where the lake waters were met by the great swell caused by the hurricane. This resulted in driving the lake waters over on to the little town, submerging the country for miles around without a moment's notice.

A Family's Experience on Buffalo Island.

BUFFALO, Oct. 15.—Last night's storm was most destructive, not only in the very serious loss of property but in the most awful disasters which marked its course in the sacrifice of human life and the terrible privation and suffering it has caused among many poor people in the lower districts of the city. The greatest fury of the gale was experienced on what is known as the Island, in the vicinity of the sea wall. Nearly every house was destroyed and the poor people are left in great distress. At least forty families are homeless, and at least six lives have been sacrificed. Four bodies have been recovered. One has been identified as John Edmunds, an old man employed by a family named Quinn. The family were safely housed in a tree, but the old man was unable to get up, and lost his life. The bodies of the two children of Jacob Deitsch, toll-keeper at the Inner Bay View-road, have been recovered. They were Annie, aged 7, and Jacob, aged 1. Their father related the terrible experience of his family this afternoon. He said: "About 8 o'clock a terrible wave struck the house and turned it over and over. My wife caught two younger children the two lying dead there now, and I held up Mary, the eldest. We could feel the house drifting along and every now and then a wave would strike it and it would seem as if going to pieces. My wife held the two children above the water and I the other one. We were both waist deep all the while. Once a wave came through the window and almost carried away my wife and two children. She caught a nail and was saved and then got her arm about the window sill. It was terribly cold and the poor children could not speak. About three o'clock in the morning Annie and Jacob died from the cold and exposure. They did not drown. We did all we could. When they were dead we laid them on a mattress that was floating in the room, and then we both held Mary and rubbed her body and limbs to keep her from dying. She could not speak, but we saved her, thank God. At 8 o'clock the boat came and took us all away.

The fourth body is that of Henry Willington. Besides these the colored cook of the schooner Kelderhouse went overboard and was drowned. The body has been recovered. Charles Mitchell, a cauler, was blown into the water at the foot of Commercial-street and not seen again. An old German woman named Schroeder, who is said to be nearly 100 years of age, was dragged from the debris of one of the houses while the waves were beating over it by young Farrell, who was twice thrown out of his skiff before he extricated her. It is impossible to state actually the loss of life. Relief measures for the sufferers were quickly inaugurated.

The Effect off Chicago.

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—Twenty-three vessels arrived in port safely this morning. The captain of the schooner Stafford reports sighting the schooner R. A. Richmond in mid lake yesterday in a bad condition. The Richmond was stripped clean of canvas and most of her deck load of lumber was gone. Owing to his own precarious condition, the captain of the Stafford could not render any assistance to the crippled vessel, and if she does not arrive before night search will be made for her.

The Damage Around Charlotte.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Oct. 15.—The storm at Charlotte is very severe. Several schooners have been towed into harbor with great difficulty, and at present several lie in a disabled condition off the shore. The life-saving crew are at work on a three-masted schooner east of Charlotte. The wind to-night is steadily increasing and heavy damage to shipping is feared.

On the Other Side of the Atlantic.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—The wind which began blowing a gale last night has been increasing all day, and to-night it is blowing a hurricane. The storm is extending over the entire southwest coasts of England and Ireland. Serious damage to shipping is reported at Falmouth, Cowes and Plymouth. Several buildings have been wrecked at Brighton. Thirty ships have taken refuge in Foynes' Harbor, on the River Shannon. Two wrecks have been signalled in Bantry Bay.

TEMPERANCE IN THE ASSEMBLY.

The K. of L. officers All Pledge Themselves to Total Abstinence.

RICHMOND, Oct. 15.—At to-day's session of the K. of L. Mr. Schlieber of Massachusetts and Mrs. Broughton of North Carolina were elected members of the General Co-operative Board. David R. Gibson of Hamilton, Ont., was elected Canadian Supply Agent. His duty is to procure supplies of prized documents of all kinds in bulk, and distribute them to local assemblies throughout Canada. This completed the full corps of general officers, and their installation immediately followed. Mr. Powderly, addressing the General Assembly, expressed full confidence in the men elected and pledged himself to the faithful performance of the duties entrusted to him. He urged upon the assembly the importance of temperance, and asked them to endeavor to impress the importance of this subject in the various local assemblies. He called attention to the fact that not one of the general officers elected at the General Assembly used intoxicating liquors. Each of the general officers then formally pledged himself to total abstinence from intoxicating liquors during his two years' term of office.

Minneapolis, Minn., was selected as the place for holding the next annual convention.

DECLARING WAR ON ARMOUR.

The Knights of Labor to Fight the Great Packing Monopolists.

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—Twelve hundred beef butchers employed by Armour refuse to go to work this morning. The beef departments in other houses are running as usual. This is taken as indicating that the fight by the Knights of Labor is being directed solely against Armour. The latter states, in his view, the General Assembly will not countenance this move, as he declares the situation to be the same in all houses.

Walking Delegate Barry says: "We have formally declared war on the big pork speculator, and it will be war to the knife and knife to the hilt. You may depend upon it, Armour's meats throughout the United States will be an unknown quantity in less than three months."

The Striking Switchmen of Manitoba.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 15.—The managers of all roads here decided last night that they would not grant the increased wages demanded by the striking switchmen of the Manitoba Railroad. The officials called for police protection. The officers found the strikers at the Manitoba yards had "killed" four engines and had possession of a fifth, which, however, they gave up without resistance.

MURDER IN THE WOODS.

A German Kills a Woman with a Stick of Cordwood in Renfrew Co.

OTTAWA, Oct. 15.—A brutal murder has taken place near Palmer Rapids, Renfrew County. For a good while past bad blood has existed between two German families living on adjoining lots. The other day one of the men went to his neighbor's place and was met by the other's wife. An altercation took place between them and the man finally seized a stick of cordwood and hit the woman, inflicting a mortal injury. The body was then taken into the house and the building set on fire. The two children were witnesses of the crime. The County Attorney has been informed and is taking steps to hold an inquest.

BEHOLD THY VICTIM.

Assassination of a Canon While Leaving St. Mark's Cathedral.

VENICE, Oct. 15.—Canon Bianchini, while leaving St. Mark's cathedral yesterday, was stabbed to the heart by a man who cried, "Behold thy victim." The assassin was arrested and moved to be Signor Vianelli, formerly deacon, whose conversion to Protestantism caused a flutter among Catholics a few years ago. On examination Vianelli deposed that he came to Venice with the intention of avenging himself on Canon Bianchini, whose chicanery had driven him to apostacy and ruin.

Mr. Lorillard's Stud Sale.

JOBSTOWN, N.J., Oct. 15.—The sale of the Rancocas stable, comprising the entire breeding stud of Pierre Lorillard, took place this afternoon on the Rancocas stock farm. The bidding was spirited but as a general thing the prices realized were small. The list of animals for sale comprised five stallions and seventy-nine brood mares, for which an aggregate of $142,895 was realized.

The famous stallion Iroquois headed the list. He is a beautiful bay and was foaled in 1878. He is the only American horse that has won the English Derby, and the only horse of any nationality that ever won the Prince of Wales Stakes, the Derby and St. Leger. General Jackson started him with a bid of $10,000, and finally secured him for $20,000.

Beecher on Retribution.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—Rev. Henry Ward Beecher delivered an address to-day in Rev. Dr. Parker's City Temple on "Pulpit Work." He dwelt upon aid the newspaper rendered to preachers. A number of questions were asked Mr. Beecher as to his idea of the doctrines of retribution and his answers caused intense excitement, several divines rising to their feet and loudly protesting against his views. Mr. Beecher retorted that any man believing in retribution who married, entered society or smiled was a monster. He preferred working through fear, springing from love rather than through fear of the barbaric doctrine of retribution.

The Mayor of Belfast Testifies.

BELFAST, Oct. 15.—The Mayor appeared before the commission investigating the recent riots yesterday. He attributed the outbreaks to the reports about Mr. Morley and his hired assassins, meaning the county police, who were drafted in as rumored to shoot down Protestants. He feared that the roughs were stimulated to house wrecking by the knowledge that owners of the higher classes of property would have to pay the losses. Justice Day strongly deprecated bolstering up the delusion that Mr. Morley had selected the obnoxious constables.

Progress of the C.P.R.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—There appears to be good foundation for the report that the Canadian Pacific proposes to build from St. Thomas, Canada, to some point on the St. Clair River to meet a line to be built to connect it with the Wabash, and so get a direct line through from Montreal to Chicago, St. Louis and Omaha. The Canadian Pacific has also made arrangements with the Boston and Lowell and other roads for running its cars through from Boston to all the western and northwestern points.

The Crisis Arriving.

SOFIA, Oct. 15.—The Sobranje has been summoned to meet on the 27th inst. a Tirnova. Nine suspected officers have resigned their positions in the army. Several others have been transferred to a Roumelian regiment. Gen. Kaulbars is expected to arrive here to-morrow. The Russian consul also has announced Montenegrenas and Macedonians to assemble and put themselves at the disposal of Gen. Kaulbars.

Acquitted on the First Indictment.

SARNIA, Ont., Oct. 15.—Hand has been acquitted on the first indictment charging him with having caused the explosion at McCrae's house. The trial of the other indictments is postponed and the prisoner has been admitted to bail in the sum of $6000.

THE QUEBEC ELECTIONS.

The Provincial elections are over and the result is a great victory for Liberalism. The latest and most authentic returns show that the Liberals have carried 37 seats, and the Government party 28 seats. Hon. Mr. Mercier will, therefore, have a majority of 9 in a House of 65 members. This change in political sentiment is a most sweeping one, and the only parallel Canadian history affords is the revolution effected in the Dominion elections of 1873. This is shown by the fact that when the last Parliament dissolved the Conservatives (or Bleus) out of a total of 65 members had 48 supporters, and the Liberal leader only seventeen. In the parliament elected last Thursday the Liberals will have 37 members and the Opposition 28.

This represents a change of political front in 57 constituencies. In the whole province, so far as ascertained, the Bleu gains only amount to two—Montreal West, where the Liberal member was gerrymandered out of his seat, and Arthabaska.

The cause of this remarkable result of the elections is not far to seek. A tidal wave of public opinion set in and swept away the most corrupt, extravagant and venal ministry that ever held office in Canada. For several years this judgment has been ripening, and a sentiment of public hostility against political methods that threatened to ruin the country, if allowed much longer sway, has been gaining ground. The fall of the Ross Government has involved the fortunes of the Central Government at Ottawa. In the late elections the latter made the cause of the Quebec Conservatives its own. The whole strength and weight of influence of the Dominion Government was placed at the disposal of the Ross Taillon combination, and in condemning the latter, the electors have also condemned Sir John. To give additional emphasis to the Liberal victory, it may be pointed out that the latter party had to face fearful odds. A local authority warrants the statement that besides an overwhelming majority to start with—nearly three to one—"the Ross-Taillon ministry had the active influence of the Dominion Government, and the immense army of employees, contractors, place hunters and boodle baggers who follow in their train. Three members of the Dominion Cabinet, Messrs. Chapleau, Pope and Sir A. P. Caron were in Quebec Province working for the Ross ministry; and a swarm of Government employes left Ottawa for the various counties. Besides all this, a corruption fund of $100,000 had been raised by contractors and others to purchase votes for Tory candidates."

The victory in Quebec presages the speedy triumph of Liberal principles in the Dominion. Quebec makes the fourth province solidly Liberal, the four being Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

A CLEAR CASE.

The public statements of a public man, especially a representative man and a Cabinet minister, are public property and matters of public interest. Hon. Thomas White, previous to the Haldimand election, was charged with exhibiting, at Cayuga, a portrait of Riel with a rope around his neck, and of saying at the same time, "Here is one of the new saints of the Roman Catholic Church." Hon. Mr. White was leading a crusade against the Canadian French and Roman Catholics, and acted and spoke thus to rouse the race and religious prejudices of his hearers with a view of influencing them against the Liberal candidate, with the object of advancing the cause of the Tory candidate. He calculated that his most insulting remarks would not be reported, but they found their way into the press and naturally raised such a storm of indignation that Mr. White hastened to deny that he used the action and language ascribed to him. Hon. Mr. White made the remark as a politician, as a politician he denied that he did so. The value of his denial is at once weakened when it is remembered he originated the vicious morality that it is permissible to a Tory politician to lie to gain a political point. But the following declaration renders it absolutely worthless:

Dominion of Canada,
County of Haldimand.

To Wit:—

In the election in Haldimand for the House of Commons, held September [illegible]nd September 8, A.D., 1886.

I, William Thomas Anthony, of the [illegible]ship of North Cayuga, in the county of [illegible]aldimand, farmer, solemnly declare:—

Firstly, That I am an elector of the electoral district of Haldimand, and I voted at the election held here on September 8, A. D. 1886, and that I have also voted at each election since confederation.

Secondly, That I am the owner of 125 acres of land about three miles from the village of Cayuga, in the county of Haldimand, and that I have resided all my life on a part of the said land:

Thirdly, That I was present at a public meeting held in the village of Cayuga, in the County of Haldimand, at the court house of the said County of Haldimand, the thirty-first day of August, A.D. 1886, at which meeting the Hon. Thomas White, Minister of the Interior, was the principal speaker on the Conservative side; and at which meeting the said Hon. Thomas White, in the presence of all those, there and then assembled, in the midst of his speech, did show a picture of Louis Riel with a rope around his neck, and did there and then say, publicly:—

"Here is one of the new saints of the Roman Catholic Church!"

And I make this solemn declaration conscientiously believing the same to be true, and by virtue of the act passed in the thirty-seventh year of her Majesty's reign intituled "an act for the suppression of voluntary and extra-judicial oats."

(Signed) W. T. ANTHONY.

Declared before me at the village of Cayuga, in the county of Haldimand, this 28th day of Sept., A.D., 1886. (Signed) JAMES MITCHELL, J. P.

Here is the truth of the matter, for that the above deponent would, unless his declaration were true, take such an oath, when hundreds of witnesses could disprove his assertion, is to the highest degree improbable. Hon. Mr. White is trebly convicted—convicted of publicly and grossly insulting a large proportion of Canadian citizens, convicted of attempting to excite race hatred and rouse religious rancour, and convicted of deliberately falsifying facts.

A Parting Presentation.

CHATHAM, Oct. 13.—Mr. Harry Mercer, who is leaving here to assume the agency of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway at Detroit, was presented by his fellow-citizens with a handsome silver water service, accompanied by an address expressive of esteem for him as a citizen and wishing him success in his new calling.

Mr. Beecher's Church Standing.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—The Congregational Union assembled at Norwich to-day. During the proceedings the Rev. John Hunter moved a resolution expressing the regret of the assembly that it had no opportunity to welcome the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher. An amendment that Mr. Beecher be invited to address the assembly was negatived. After a warm discussion the resolution was carried.

A Suit For a Million.

MONTREAL, Oct. 12.—The case of D. N. Stanton and A. B. Bautch, who are suing the Canada Atlantic Railway Company for $1,000,000 for non-fulfilment of contract, was argued in the Superior Court to-day. The plaintiffs were awarded contracts for two sections of railway, and claim that it was illegally taken from them, and they have suffered damages to the amount of the action. Ex-Governor McDonald of Ontario and others were examined.

Erastus Wiman's Punishment.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—The Star states that if at the forthcoming election of directors of the Western Union Telegraph Company, Erastus Wiman is to be omitted from the board, it is because of Mr. Wiman's alliance with the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company, who have a telegraph system of their own in competition with the Western Union, and for having afforded another trunk line entrance into the harbor and City of New York through his Staten Island enterprise, thereby enlarging the facilities of the harbor by ten miles of water front and creating a large additional means of communication for the interior of the country. The Star remarks that the punishment proposed to be inflicted is very slight for an offence of such magnitude.

Aid for the Evicted.

DUBLIN, Oct. 12.—At the regular meeting of the National League to-day Secretary Harrington said many landlords were making generous reductions in rents, but a large number of writs of eviction continued to be issued. The executive of the league, Mr. Harrington said, would supersede those branches which failed to give aid to evicted tenants.

A Postmaster's Defalcations.

TROY, N. Y., Oct. 12.—Assistant Postmaster Burrage has not been seen at the postoffice since Saturday, when he sent word that he was confined to his home by illness. Yesterday the New York postmaster called for a receipt of $3,700 and then it was quickly seen that Burrage must have taken the amount in bulk. It is reported that he is now in Canada. Whether any additional sums will be found missing on investigation of his accounts remains to be seen.

The '84 Aldermen of New York.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—Ex-Aldermen Cleary and Kirk were arrested and taken to the District Attorney's office. Judge Cowing, after listening to arguments, increased the bail on each from $25,000 to $40,000. Bench warrants are in the hands of Inspector Byrnes for the remaining members of the '84 board who are under indictment and awaiting trial.

The Pleasantries of French Journalism.

PARIS, Oct. 12.—A duel with swords has been fought between M. Bauer, editor of the Echo and Count Dion, a well-known Flaneur. The trouble was caused by comments on Count Dion's coming marriage with an actress of the Theatre Francais. M. Bauer was wounded in the arm.

Why He Preached.

"Do you preach from notes?" asked the deacon of an up-town church, during the examination of an applicant for that pulpit.

"Well, no—not exactly," hesitated the applicant; "I preach for notes—bank notes."

He was summarily expunged.

Killed While Cutting a Log.

WOODSTOCK, Oct. 15.—Yesterday afternoon two Germans from Welland, named John Heysel and Anthony Deitrich, were cross-cutting a log on Aylmer Townsend's farm, 3d Concession, Blandford, when the forks of a tree, blown down by the wind, struck both of them, killing Heysel instantly and terribly injuring Deitrich.

"If you be the lawyer I supposed, I said to Hardinge. And I bade him take the cab himself and see where it opened. He did so with the result which I expected.

He shook his head gravely. "I think, Mr. Denton, we shall be justified in taking a very close look at anything we can find here."

There were several books on the table. They were for the most part old account books, some of them bearing Flinter's name. They consistently related to transactions which had taken place some years previously in Australia. One volume was of a different kind. It was a cheap metallic memorandum book, such as a man like Flinter might very well have used for the purpose of keeping notes of incidents of importance. Eastmead took it up and opened it. For some time he appeared to be examining it with a look of bewilderment on his honest face.

"I can't make anything of this, can you! Is it?—eh?"

He handed the open book to me, and to my disappointment I saw that, whatever might be the nature of its contents, I was none the wiser through possessing it. Every page was covered with cabalistic marks who nothing I had ever seen before.

"I think we may as well leave that behind us," said the chief constable. "But I am going to take these other books to examine at my leisure."

I acquiesced for the moment in his proposal to leave the little note book in cipher where we had found it, but before we had completed our close examination of the two rooms I had changed my mind, and without any scruple regarding the robbery I was committing upon the unconscious Flinter, I slipped the volume into my pocket.

It would be tedious to tell of the long hours which we spent in examining the other portions of the hall. Nowhere did we find any evidence that seemed to bear on the crime of which the place had been the scene. Indeed, Eastmead warned me beforehand that this would probably be the result. The one part of the hall which had escaped his notice on his first visit had been the secret staircase. The other articles which he had found, and which might possibly be of use against Flinter, had evidently been brought to the hall after our party had landed from the yacht, and consequently after Daisy's arrest.

When our tedious task was completed, we went to the dining room, where we found Dr. Branksome awaiting us. Cold meat and wine were upon the table; and we were so thoroughly exhausted by our labors that we were glad to make a hurried meal before departing to catch the last train to York. I did not care to talk much to Branksome. He had heard of the discovery of the strychnia, but said very little about it. I thought, indeed, that for once something must have occurred to stay the flow of his brilliant conversation.

CHAPTER XV.

JAMES GREGSON'S STORY.

It was late at night when I got back to York, excited and elated by the great discovery I had made. A letter from Harding awaited me, in which he told of the steps he was taking for the purpose of finding Gregson. Through the celebrated detective Max Bielski he believed that he might at last get on his track, though the chase would undoubtedly be a difficult one. I did not go to bed until I had answered the letter and given Harding a full account of my visit to the hall. I concluded by imploring him to come to me at once, if that were possible, as that we might advise as to the next measures to be taken.

"A gentleman is waiting to see you, sir, down stairs." It was early the next morning, while I was at breakfast in my private room at the hotel, that I received this intimation.

"Do you know his name?"

"No, sir; he would not give me his name, but he said I was to tell you that he came from Mr. Harding."

"Show him up at once."

The stranger was a short man, with powerful frame, clean shaven face, and bright eyes that seemed to see everything at once.

"Beg pardon, sir, for intruding," he said, addressing me with a business like air; "I thought you might not wish to have my name spread over the house, for you see it is rather a well-known name now, sir; I am the detective Mr. Harding has been employing on your account I believe."

"Mr. Bielski?"

"Yes, Max Bielski at your service, sir." He pulled a note book out of his pocket and opening it continued: "I understand you want to meet with a party of the name of James Gregson, and about thirty, tall and fair haired. Well, Mr. Fenton, don't be offended, but I must tell you at once that that description won't give me any help in finding the man. You see, sir, there are thousands of tall, fair haired men of thirty walking about the streets; as for the name, you may be sure that Mr. Gregson is not Mr. Gregson now, if he has any reason to wish to keep in hiding. You will have to tell me something more."

"But I am afraid that is just what I cannot do."

"Well, well, sir. You must excuse me putting you through your catechism, Mr. Fenton. It must be done if I'm to lay hold of your man."

And in a surprisingly short space of time Mr. Bielski had made himself the master of all the particulars, good, bad and indifferent, which I knew about Gregson, including even the story Daisy had told me. When I told him of the photograph of Daisy I had picked up in the railway carriage after Gregson left it, he at once asked me for it; and—very reluctantly, for it was the only portrait of my darling which I possessed—I parted with it to him.

At the end of an interview of three-quarters of an hour the detective pulled out his watch, and rising hastily said: "I must be off, sir. I've just time to catch the express back to town."

"But are you going to London to find Gregson? My own opinion is that you'll find him somewhere about here."

"That is my opinion also, sir; and no doubt if I had three months to spare I could lay a heavy wager that I should find him in the very city of York before the end of that time. But you see, sir, it is a matter of life and death; and a single day might make all the difference; so I must follow the cab clew you have given me, and not the uncertain one."

"And what is the cab clew?"

"The news about which Gregson landed in England from Melbourne. This is all I have to go upon. I must get to London and find how to the present Gregson, if that be not his name."

And in another instant he was hurrying off to catch the ten o'clock express to town.

Little and Lively.

The times change and we change with them. Hardly larger than mustard seed but composed of highly concentrated vegetable extracts, Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets" have ceased the old style, large drastic, cathartic pills to be abandoned by all sensible people. The little sugar-coated Pellets are a sure cure for constipation; for persons of sedentary habits they are invaluable. They are little and lively, pleasant and safe. 4dw41

CAPTAIN WILLIAM SLATER, No. 37 Granville Street, Halifax, N.S.

N. WASHINGTON, M. D., Throat and Lung Specialist, Toronto.

DEAR SIR,—When you visited me in the latter part of January of this year I had been given up to die of consumption by a consultation of Physicians, Drs. Reid and Oliver, prominent physicians of Halifax who considered that my recovery was simply impossible. I had no hope myself nor had my family. When you expressed a hope of my recovery it was received with a doubt. Confined to my bed, very low, weak wasted, night sweat, very bad, troublesome cough, raising large quantities of matter—in fact every appearance of a speedy death. After using your Respirator and Inhaler and medicine I began to recover very fast so much so that during three hard winter months I have gained from 20 to 25 lbs., and was able to walk out on Easter Sunday. My strength is daily increasing, and I shall be able soon to be at work. To you I owe a debt of gratitude, and am anxious for others who are suffering as I was to consult you. You can make what use of this letter you see fit, and thanking you for what I consider a most wonderful treatment.

I remain, yours truly,

CAPT. WM. SLATER.

LOCAL NEWS.

Almost a Fire.

This morning about twenty minutes to six Mr. Jas. Hickey, living on north George street, on looking from his window, noticed a fire in progress in Mr. W. Wilmot's cooper shop on the other side of the street. He informed Mr. M. O'Brien, residing in the next house, who, with his son, assisted Mr. Hickey in extinguishing the blaze, which was accomplished after about a quarter of an hour's work. The building is a frame one, filled in with sawdust, and the fire, which was on the outside of the shop next the street, could only have been started by an incendiary. The damage was slight.

A Vicious Canine.

On Friday, Oct. 8th, Mrs. John Brackenridge, of Westwood, was walking up Aylmer street towards the G. T. R. station, when, in passing a house, she was attacked by a large black dog, which caught her hand inflicting an ugly wound. A smaller, yellow cur joined in the attack, and the lady was in great danger of being torn to pieces, when, fortunately, the owner of the dogs appeared and called them off. Dr. Ford, of Norwood, cauterised the wounds, from which no serious consequences are feared. The owner of the animals will be made to suffer for harboring such vicious brutes.

An Elopement.

In the tent shows exhibited at the Peterborough Central Fair last week, there were, says the Port Hope Times, a woman mermaid and a Circassian lady. On Thursday night, the manager of the woman mermaid show eloped with the Circassian lady, and so quietly was it done that nothing was known of it until next morning. Efforts were made to capture the runaways, but without avail. They were quietly married, and coming to Port Hope, took the boat for Rochester.

A Local Vanderbilt.

Every week the Bon Marche presents some fresh and startling bargains to the public. There one sees a ticket of a staple line of teas marked, "6 pounds for $1," and one wonders how such value can be given for the money. This is but a solitary instance of the surprising bargains to be had at the Bon Marche. Mr. Carton must be a veritable Vanderbilt in the wholesale market, as he seems able to "bull" or "bear" it to suit the pockets of his customers.

Further Damage.

Thursday night's big blow lifted the summer kitchen attached to Mr. H. Grundy's house, Hunter street, and deposited it on another man's lot. It also blew off the eastern pinnacle of the Baptist Church, and flattened out the large bill-board at the corner of London and George streets.

A Bridge Gone.

Thursday night's storm proves to have been one of the most severe that ever visited this section. The floating bridge at Bridgenorth was broken up by the fury of the waves, and the mails have been hoisted across Mud Lake by Mr. Kelly. The damage will be repaired as soon as possible.

Shipments of Cheese.

On Thursday Mr. B. Green shipped from the G. T. R. here to Mr. Dingwal, at Morrisburgh, two cars of cheese from this county. One car from Lindsay was shipped the day before. On Friday Mr. W. Clurton shipped two cars east by G. T. R. The total of the three shipments amounted to over 150,000 lbs.

Grinding and Chopping.

Mr. John King, of Young's Point, is now prepared to give the best satisfaction in gristing and chopping. He will also exchange 40 lbs. of first class flour for a bushel of good wheat. Oats will be chopped for 6c. a bag; peas, 7c. Mr. King solicits the favour and patronage of the farmers of that vicinity.

A Dip.

The thermometer took a tumble last night and went away below freezing point. This morning shallow water was covered with a thick coating of ice, and everybody wore a blue, pinched expression of countenance.

The Newest and Best.

For the best teas Morrow & Tierney cannot be beaten. They have just received a large stock of new season teas, in which they are offering special inducements. Camping parties' supplies and fancy groceries a specialty.

Big Bargains in Boots.

The stock of boots and shoes purchased Wednesday by Mr. R. Neil will be rushed off at wonderfully low prices at the store lately occupied by Mr. W. Miller, in the market block. Go there for bargains.

At the Rink.

The Fire Brigade Band was in attendance at the Lansdowne roller rink last night, and furnished excellent music to a large number of skaters.

Sudden Death of Dr. McCrea.

An Attack of Heart Disease Causes a Rapid Closure of Three Active and Busy Lives.

On Thursday morning the village of Keene was startled by the announcement of the sudden death of Dr. James McCrea, who died suddenly of [illegible]. During the [illegible] health, in fact, [illegible] vermilion with friends [illegible] better spirits and [illegible] Shortly after, he went [illegible] through the house, took a seat on the verandah. In a few minutes he dropped from his seat unconscious. He was carried into the house and Dr. Shaw sent for, but the latter arrived only in time to catch the last few beats of the venerable physician's pulse. Within twenty minutes from his leisure life was extinct. The deceased gentleman was aged sixty-five years. He was a graduate of Queen's College and has passed thirty-five years (excepting the two and a half years spent in Peterborough) in the practice of his profession in Keene and the surrounding country, his practice, especially in its early days, extending over a territory reached by a radius of twenty or thirty miles, and in this district there is, perhaps, no man so well known and respected. His quiet, unassuming manner covered a high degree of medical skill and a character of unbending integrity. He leaves behind him a widow and four children, one of whom is Mr. J. R. McCrea, engaged in the [illegible] business in town. In politics the late Dr. McCrea was a pronounced Conservative, and in religion a Presbyterian. His high personal and professional qualities won him the respect of a very wide circle of friends, who will learn with sincere regret of his sudden demise. The funeral will take place on Monday afternoon.

Police Court.

SATURDAY, Oct. 16.

A tramp from Port Hope occupied a cell last night, and was sent on his way this morning.

Geo. Reynolds was fined $2 and costs for being drunk in a public place.

On Monday the following Scott Act cases will be tried: T. Cavanagh and R. N. Roddy, for a second offence; W. Kennedy and W. H. Chamberlain, on a first offence.

ROSSITER vs. R. B. HAMILTON.—The defendant was charged with a second violation of the Scott Act. E. B. Edwards appeared for the prosecution, W. A. Stratton for the defence. The case was tried before Police Magistrate Dumble this morning. The Chief of Police testified to having found a demijohn containing about a pint of rye whiskey while searching the premises of the defendant yesterday, while another witness swore to having procured whiskey on the premises about two weeks ago. The defendant was fined $100 and costs.

ROSSITER vs. WM. COLLINS.—The defendant is a grocer in Ashburnham, and the breach of law consisted in his giving a regular patron some whiskey without the customary physician's order. Fined $50 and costs. E. B. Edwards for prosecution; W. A. Stratton for defence.

Arrangements for the reception of Bros. Elliott and Gammage next Tuesday evening were completed. The supper to be tendered the Hight Court officers is to be given at Snowden's hotel.

Always to the Front.

Almost every other business has its fluctuations and dull periods, but these are unknown to the furniture business of D. Bellegham. The superiority of his stock of furniture, both imported and made on the premises, and its great extent and comprehensive variety furnish facilities for meeting every demand of the public, and his prices are so reasonable that, taken in conjunction with the high quality of his wares, there is no difficulty in completing transactions. When he first started in business in town, Mr. Bellegham rapidly forged to the front. He has since kept that position with an ever increasing lead, and now his place is known far and wide as the foremost furniture establishment in the Midland District.

At Rest at Last.

The public, who have been aware of Mrs. C. W. Sawers' recent condition, will not be surprised to learn that this morning at about eleven o'clock she passed away to her rest—after nearly two months of prostration on a painful bed of illness. From the time of her accident she received the most unremitting attention and care, but all of no avail. The deceased lady leaves behind her three infant children to know the loss of a kind, affectionate and prudent mother. The funeral takes place from the family residence, Rubidge street, to-morrow (Sunday) afternoon, at 3 o'clock.

Prizes for Porter Bros.

At the Cavan and Manvers exhibition at Millbrook Messrs. Porter Bros. secured four first prizes and one second on the vehicles shown. The directors stated that it was the finest collection of vehicles ever shown there. Among the collection was the fine phæton shown at the Central, and purchased by Mr. A. L. Davis. At Millbrook, to show how highly the work of this firm is appreciated, it may be stated that they made sale of one vehicle and at the Central for seven, besides several orders to build vehicles.

Appreciated Abroad.

According to the Lindsay Post:—"Mr. A. F. Hoover, of Peterborough, teacher of the pianoforte and harmony, has formed a class at Lindsay for tuition and will visit Lindsay once during each week. Mr. Hoover comes highly recommended as a clever musician and pianist, having studied at the Royal Conservatory of Music, Leipsig, Germany."

Queen vs. Martin.

Yesterday the last of the Lakefield Salvation Army cases, appealing to quash the conviction of Mr. James Colborne, Justice of the Peace, came on for argument before Chief Justice Wilson, in the Common Pleas Division of the High Court of Justice, at Toronto. Judgment was reserved.

Mr. [illegible] of the Department of Railways and Canals, was in town to-day. He has been employed in shifting pavements on north of the Trent Navigation works. This afternoon he left, in company with Mr. Superintendent Rogers, for Hastings.

Market Items.

The market this morning was what is called a "whopper" and no mistake. Vegetables flourished in abundance, and there was a large supply of meats, butter and eggs. Prices remained about the same as quoted for Wednesday, butter selling at 22c. per lb.; chickens and geese, dressing, to 20c. per pair and 50c. each respectively.

An Appointment.

At a meeting of the Committee on Appointments at Police Magistrate Dumble's office yesterday afternoon, Mr. T. H. Rowan, an honor graduate of Toronto University, was appointed a teacher in the Collegiate Institute, pending the recovery of Mr. Barton Earle, English Master.

An Exchange of Pulpits.

Rev. Mr. Taylor, of Port Hope, will preach in the Baptist church here to-morrow. Rev. R. Duff, the pastor, occupies Mr. Trotter's pulpit at Port Hope.

Firm Words.

The reduction of Internal revenue and the taking off of revenue stamps from Proprietary Medicines, no doubt has largely benefited the consumers, as well as relieving the burden of home manufacturers. Especially is this the case with Green's August Flower and Boschee's German Syrup, as the reduction of thirty-six cents per dozen has been added to increase the size of the bottles containing these remedies, thereby giving one-fifth more medicine in the 75 cent size. The August Flower for Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint, and the German Syrup for Cough and Lung troubles have, perhaps, the largest sale of any medicines in the world. The advantage of increased size of the bottles will be greatly appreciated by the sick and afflicted, in every town and village in civilized countries. Sample bottles for 10c. remain in the same size. eodw41tf

Mikado Social.

All arrangements have been completed for the Mikado social to be held in St. John's school room, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, 27th and 28th October. The room will be handsomely decorated in Japanese design and illuminated with Japanese lanterns. The managing committee are saving neither trouble or expense in order to make it a success. A musical programme has been prepared under the direction of Mr. Seward. Some selections from the Mikado will be given. Several Ladies (in Japanese costume) will take charge of a booth, where fancy articles, [illegible], Japanese tea and refreshments will be sold. Do not fail to see this great novelty. Tickets, 25 cents. Doors open at half-past seven; concert to commence at eight o'clock. 2d-86

Heavy Damage.

Mr. Isaiah Best's new brick foundry at Mount Pleasant was badly damaged by the gale of Thursday night. The iron roof was blown off, and portions of the wall falling in, some of the machinery and implements were broken. The damage will amount to about $800.

EGAN'S IMPERIAL TRUSS

Read the following extract from a letter of a well-known citizen of St Catharines,—hundreds like it:

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 20th, 1886.

GENTLEMEN,—Being over 70 years of age, and over 30 years ruptured, looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two spring-less trusses made in York State, costing me $40. Nothing would retain my Hernia. I have worn your truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort; even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down, it holds me perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. S. KING.

This new Spiral Spring Pad Truss has taken ten years to make it perfect; is guaranteed to hold the very worst case during the hardest work or severest strain. It will cure every child sent; and 9 out of every 100 of adults. Be warned—don't waste your money on useless appliances, but send stamp for our treatise; it contains full information, your neighbors' testimony, prices and questions for you to answer. THE CHICAGO STRIKE.

BUSINESS ALMOST SUSPENDED AT THE STOCK YARDS.

CHICAGO, Oct. 16.—"It is war now for sure," said a stockman as he stood on the Transit House steps after his 6 o'clock breakfast. At this hour, usually so marked by the crowds of men on their way to work, there was little sign of life on the streets. Where a week ago thousands of men trooped through the big gate leading to the yards scarcely a dozen at a time could be seen. Nearly 200 men were secured by Armour & Co. to-day.

The precautions for guarding the property of the packers have been greatly increased. In the Town Hall are a score of cots on which the regular police sleep. Telegraph wires lead to each of the packing houses and night and day an operator is on duty. The watchmen at the packing houses report by signal to the telephone office every half hour, and the patrol wagon crew is ready for duty at a moment's notice. Electric lights have been hung throughout all the alley-ways and illuminate every nook and corner, turning the darkest night into the brightest day. Last, but by no means least in the protective measures, is the Pinkerton force. Their barracks in Washington Butchers' Seas packing house presents the appearance of a military camp. All through the day and night sentinels armed with their Winchester rifles paced up and down the alley ways and tracks which surround it. The strikers have extended the boycott until it is now an absolute impossibility for a Pinkerton to purchase anything in the neighborhood.

The usual crowds of idle men remained in the vicinity of the packing houses to-day and besought all men who could be reached not to go to work. Many applicants for work, however, went out on the regular and special passenger trains and were landed at the doors of the packing houses, which were guarded by armed patrolmen. Strikers stopped a wagon containing clothing and bedding for the Pinkerton men just outside the city limits to-day and handled the driver roughly, throwing the clothing in the street. A wagon loaded with bread for the Pinkerton guards was stopped outside the city limits and when the police arrived the wagon had disappeared.

Work of the K. of L. Commission.

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—Acting under instructions from General Master Workman Powderly, T. B. Barry will remain here and continue his efforts to bring about an amicable settlement of the stockyards strike. Fully 1000 Knights of Labor met this afternoon in Germania Turner Hall in secret session. Mr. Barry made a report giving an outline of the negotiations which have been conducted by the committee of which he is chairman. The meeting passed a vote of confidence in the committee and pledged itself to obey all orders which might be issued.

The present status of the strike is given by Mr. Barry as follows: "I have explained to the packers, especially Mr. Kent, that mere technicality is all that prevents a settlement. The men want simply a formal recognition of the eight-hour day and do not object to working over-time on that basis. They only ask that all hours over eight shall be known as overtime, wages for which shall be at the same rate as regular time. The packers refuse to concede this one point, as Mr. Armour says they have counted the cost and the shedding of a little blood will not stop or influence them in the least. I have all confidence in the strikers. If they remain quiet and peaceable and stick together Victory is sure and speedy."

STORMS IN BRITAIN.

MANY SHIPPING DISASTERS WITH GREAT LOSS OF LIFE.

LONDON, Oct. 16.—The great hurricane which has just passed over England and Ireland was accompanied by the heaviest rainstorms within memory. During last night there were many collisions and wrecks and a number of channel fishing boats were stranded. The beach at Brighton presents a spectacle of destruction. A torpedo gunboat at Portsmouth dragged its anchor and drifted into the mud, but was afterwards rescued by tugs. The glass roof of the Ilfracombe Hotel was broken and the bath houses were washed away.

The storm was very furious on the Irish coast. The streets in many of the towns were flooded. Corn stacks were blown away and the corn standing in the field was destroyed. The damage was immense. There have been destructive floods in Wales.

The gale and floods which began Thursday night along the south and west English and Irish coasts continue, having extended far northward. Many reports of bridges and buildings being swept away are constantly coming in. In Ulster, Ireland, the storm and floods seriously impede railway traffic. Many small vessels have been wrecked. The loss of life ashore so far caused by the storm has not been great.

Shipping Disasters.

LONDON, Oct. 16.—The troopship Tyne, which is thirty hours overdue at Plymouth, has been sighted off there, labering terribly in the storm. The greatest anxiety had been entertained concerning her for the past twenty-four hours.

The British ship Teviotdale, which sailed from Cardiff, Wales, on Thursday last, was wrecked during the storm on Carmarthen Bar. There were on board at the time twenty-eight persons. A lifeboat rescued nine of them from the wreck. The nineteen others, among whom were the captain and officers, left in a boat, and but two of them succeeded in reaching the shore alive. The other seventeen perished in the waves.

The British bark Bellaport has been wrecked off the Skelligs Islands, on the southeast coast of Ireland. She was being towed by the tug Gamecock, when the hawser parted and the bark was thrown on the rocky shore and destroyed. All of her crew perished.

To Connect With the G. T. R. and C. P. R.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—Several meetings have been held this week in this city for the reorganization of a syndicate which has been formed for the purpose of building a line of road on the south side of Lake Superior from Duluth, Minn., via Superior and Ashland, Wis., and Marquette, Mich., to Mackinac and Sault Ste. Marie and by a bridge over the Sault to connect with the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific, the length to be 455 miles, including a branch of fifty miles to Mackinac. The money required has all been subscribed and the parties are now engaged in letting the contract for the work, which is to be completed November 1.

A Norwegian Bark Foundered.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—The latest reports show that the effects of the recent storm in the south and west coasts were terrible. A Norwegian bark foundered off Tintagee, Wales, and her entire crew consisting of 15 persons perished. Ten bodies have been washed ashore on the Glanmorgan coast.

Upwards of Sixty Persons Drowned.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—Reports have been received from all points of the Kingdom telling of the disastrous effects of the hurricane. The British ship Mallery was wrecked in the British channel and twenty persons were drowned. The shore is strewn with wreckage. The bodies washed ashore have been stripped of valuables by wreckers.

The Norwegian bark Fredrekstad, from Musquash, N.B., for Swansea, was wrecked off Padstow, and nineteen persons were drowned.

The bark Alliance was also wrecked off Padstow and four lives lost. The other persons on board were saved by a life boat.

Another large bark was seen to be in terrific distress. The crew were huddled together on the deck. The vessel foundered this morning, and it is believed that from a dozen to twenty persons were drowned. The gale prevented the people on shore from rendering assistance. The cries of the doomed men were heard distinctly by those who were watching the vessel from shore.

In Ireland.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—A Belfast despatch says the low lying lands of Ulster are submerged. The gale on the Irish coast continues unabated, compelling all vessels to seek shelter. Limerick advices say the Mulcair river drainage works burst, flooding the adjacent district and destroying valuable crops.

SOUNDING A REVANCHE ALARM.

England Charged with Endeavoring to Bring About a France-German War.

PARIS, Oct. 16.—Le Temps refutes the statements that France is seeking war. It says that the army represents the democracy, which errs rather toward peace than toward war. It regrets that the relations existing between England and France are not of the best, and counsels the press of both countries to endeavor to fraternize instead of embarrassing their relations, both being condemned to isolation from Europe unless they go hand in hand.

The Journal des Debats lectures the London press on seeking pretexts to embitter relations between France and Germany, and ridicules the assertions that France is desirous of provoking war with Germany. The principal German papers also deride the news of the English press, denying that there is any fear of war and charging England with wishing to profit by sounding a revanche alarm.

Sir Arthur Sullivan's Success.

LONDON, Oct. 16.—Sir Arthur Sullivan's new cantata, "The Golden Legend," was rendered to-day at the Leeds Musical Festival and fairly enraptured the audience. At the close the chorus and auditors called the composer out and pelted him with flowers, obliging him to return and receive similar ovations many times. His very appearance was hailed with prolonged applause.

The Result of a Domestic Broil.

LONDON, Oct. 16.—Mrs. Leader, wife of a butcher doing business in Camberwell, a suburb of London, after a quarrel with her husband left her house taking her five little children with her. She went to the Thames River at Fulham and threw herself and the five children into the water. All were drowned but one of the children.

Movements of British Politicians.

The Marquis of Salisbury arrived in London Saturday afternoon and proceeded to Hatfield House. He is in capital health and spirits.

Mr. William Henry Smith, British Minister of War, arrived at Prague on Saturday. He is going to Berlin.

Lord Randolph Churchill left Vienna City for Paris on Saturday.

Joseph Chamberlain and Jesse Collings have arrived at Constantinople.

A Meeting of Landlords.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—At a meeting of South of Ireland landlords at Cork on Saturday a resolution was adopted declaring that while they would deal with every rent case on it merits, they would not submit to mob law or the dictates of secret committees.

THE KNIGHTS AT RICHMOND.

Adoption of the Revised Constitution—A Woman's Appeal.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 14.—At the session of the Knights of Labor to-day the consideration of the revised constitution was continued. Section 1, relating to name, jurisdiction and membership, was passed without action. Section 2, treating of the meetings of the General Assembly and representation, was amended so as to change the basis of representation from one delegate for every 1000 members to one for every 3000, and to make an allowance for mileage payable by the General Assembly. It was then adopted. Section 3, treating of the General Assembly, was adopted after two clauses had been amended so as to read: "Any general officer, whether a representative or not, is eligible to a re-election," and "any representative or past representative to this General Assembly, or past general officer, is eligible to election for any office in the General Assembly except that of General Master Workman." In the clause of section 4, relating to duties of officers, an amendment was made by which in case of the death, resignation or removal of the General Master Workman the General Worthy Foreman shall succeed to and perform all the duties of and become General Master Workman until the next session of the General Assembly, when there shall be an election to fill the position. In section 9, relating to State assemblies, amendments were adopted by which the formation of State assemblies is made optional instead of compulsory. Further amendments were adopted by which the jurisdiction of existing district assemblies remains unchanged unless they themselves consent to change.

The General Assembly also resolved not to interfere with national trade districts, and an amendment in the sections relating to them was adopted, providing that no local assembly shall be compelled to join a district assembly, thus permitting trade local assemblies to retain their independence. Another amendment which was adopted provides for an interchange of working cards with trade unions agreeing to reciprocate by receiving Knights of Labor cards.

The General Assembly adjourned until Monday, when such portions of the revision of the constitution as it is determined to act on at the present session will be disposed of. Business was transacted with such dispatch in the afternoon that some of the delegates entertain hopes of an adjournment Monday evening.

A fire occurred in the Armory, where the convention is being held, this evening. As the place is wanted for other purposes and the repairs must be made at once, it is probable that the adjournment of the knights will be hastened. The loss is $2000.

A Woman's Appeal.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—Mrs. Charlotte Smith, President of the Woman's Industrial League, has sent to the Assembly a long petition in which she says that within the past year more than fifteen wives of Knights of Labor have come to her, charging that their husbands have deserted them and refuse to provide for them or their children, although earning good wages. She asks that the Assembly adopt, as a part of the constitution, a clause providing that, "whenever any Knight of Labor shall be charged with leaving his wife, or wife and children, or failing to provide for those naturally dependent upon him for support, the said Knight being then employed in his trade, and receiving pay regularly therefor, he shall be tried by the assembly to which he belongs, and, if found guilty, shall be expelled by a majority vote, or compelled to give security for the support of those dependent on him, at the discretion of the assembly." In her petition she also calls the attention of the Knights to the workings of the United States Labor Bureau, and asks the assembly to take action on the subject of the bill introduced at the last session of Congress to provide for the appointment of colored special agents of the Labor Bureau.

AN EXILE'S RETURN.

The Appropriator of Upwards of a Quarter of a Million Surrenders Himself.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 16.—Dixon R. Thurston, the absconding bookkeeper of Dryden & Palmer, of this city, surrendered himself to Police Marshal Frey yesterday morning. Thurston is charged by the firm with appropriating $264,307 belonging to them. His peculations had been suspected for some time before he disappeared last July, and experts examined his books and discovered that he had robbed the firm of a large amount. His employers were about to have him arrested when he disappeared, and nothing further was heard from him until he reached Canada. It was rumored that a certain young lady, the daughter of a well-known telegraph superintendent, had accompanied Thurston on his trip. When he became cognizant of these reports he wrote a letter from Canada to a newspaper stating that the lady was not with him, and that while his relations with her had always been honorable he rued the day he ever became acquainted with her. Thurston is a married man, and when he left Baltimore his wife had just given birth to a child, and for a long time her life was despaired of. Thurston's father is very wealthy, and has helped his son repeatedly, but he says the law must now take its course.

FIRE LITERALLY IN HIS EYE.

A San Francisco Boy Creates a Blaze by Looking Upon an Object.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—A strange story comes from Stockton, which to-day is apparently confirmed by a preliminary investigation. Willie Brough, a boy of 12 years, is reported to have an eye which sets fire to whatever object he looks upon. He is held responsible for the destruction of much property. He has been expelled from school because of his sinister faculty. Five fires were reported by him in one day, and it is believed he caused them all. The people are greatly excited. Leading business men testified to the alleged facts. Threats against the boy are heard. No one there seems to regard the matter as the work of superstitious imaginations.

By Order of the Czar.

BUCHAREST, Oct. 16.—A large number of long cipher despatches between the Czar and Gen. Kaulbars has passed through here; also many despatches between Gen. Kaulbars and the commandant at Odessa. There is evidence that Gen. Kaulbars is instructed directly by the Czar. Gen. Kaulbars continues in retirement. He is engaged in preparing for the Czar a report of the Bulgarian situation.

Bulgaria Will Not Yield.

SOFIA, Oct. 17.—Russia has presented another note to the Bulgarian Government declaring the recent elections illegal and demanding the postponement of the meeting of the Sobrange. The Government refuses to yield. It is rumored that the Russian consul Neklidoff is about to quit Sofia.

A Schooner Missing.

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—Grave fears are felt concerning the safety of the schooner H. A. Richmond. She was last seen Thursday noon by the captain of the schooner Stafford with her deck load and rigging gone, and drifting east at the mercy of the terrible gale of the day. That was about fifty miles out. Her owner is here from Muskegon considerably worried.

Anti-High Church at Gananoque.

GANANOQUE, Ont. Oct. 17.—The Eucharistic and Vesper lights which have created so much contention in Church of England circles here during the past two months were forcibly ejected from Christ's Church just before the commencement of the morning service by about twenty of the anti-Ritualistic members of the congregation. The reinstance offered by the clergyman and choristers present was elicited.

A FALSE ALARM.

The final count and allotment of the candidates elected in Quebec last Thursday, shows, without doubt, that Hon. Mr. Mercier has been sustained in Quebec, and the corrupt Ross-Taillon combination crushed and rejected. While reluctantly conceding this victory, those Conservative organs which have been most industrious in sowing dissension between races and rousing religious antipathies, are ready with the shout that, with the return of Mr. Mercier, the era of race and religious domination has set in. This is absolute rubbish, for Mr. Mercier's appeal to the country was not made on this narrow platform. The following is the platform upon which Hon. Mr. Mercier went to the country, and it is one to which no Ontario Liberal, nor honest Ontario Conservative, can object:

1. An energetic maintenance of the principle of Provincial autonomy against all attacks, direct or indirect.

2 Complete decentralization and extension of municipal powers.

3. The maintenance of all the religious and other guarantees upon which our present system of public instruction is founded. The practical direction of education in the direction of agriculture, technical, and professional studies.

4. Respect and protection for all the rights of the minorities.

5. The immediate adoption of energetic and practical measures to improve the financial situation of the Province and to prevent direct taxation.

6. Economy in the public expenditures and suppression of the expenses of immigration and administration which are not strictly indispensable to the public service in order to increase to a corresponding extent colonization grants; reform in the system of ministerial book-keeping, which has given rise to so many abuses.

7. The amendment of the laws and regulations respecting Crown lands in a sense favorable to colonists, to the protection of our forests, and to their proper development by merchants in good faith.

8. Electoral reform in its widest sense, with a view of making the ballot accessible to all classes of society, especially teachers, sons of farmers and mechanics, clerks, students, etc., etc.

9. Reform in the laws respecting masters and servants and the better regulation of the work of women and children.

10. Judiciary reform, with a view to making suits less protracted and less expensive.

The bogus cry alluded to is raised for a purpose, and not because there is anything in it. The hypocrisy of the Blues is shown by the fact that, in order to retain a finger in the Government pie, they are ready and anxious to form a Government with so pronounced a "Rallite" as Judge Mathieu as leader, and four or five other Tory "Rallites" as the remaining cabinet ministers. This shows that in their anxiety to keep a grip on power they are ready to stultify themselves to the uttermost. Besides, Hon. Mr. Mercier has publicly committed himself to fair treatment of the Protestant minority in Quebec. In concluding a speech on the occasion of his enthusiastic reception in Montreal last Friday, he said that "he had been maligned by the Tory press as opposed to the Protestant minority. He would refuse to accept office or sit as member if the Protestant minority were not as securely protected as in any part of Canada. The Liberals were here for justice to all, and he would always stand by his policy in our mixed community." This is a pronounced public utterance which Mr. Mercier cannot, even if he so wished, go back upon. With a narrow majority in the house he cannot, if he would, play fast and loose with such a pledge. The Mail and other unscrupulous organs who raised the false alarm of danger to the Protestant minority in Quebec, did so without any reason and for a specific political purpose. That purpose will fail of its aim, as it has already largely done, when it is shown that the grounds of alarm cited are no grounds at all. Such patent hypocrisy will deceive nobody.

What True Merit Will Do.

The unprecedented sale of Boschee's German Syrup within a few years has astonished the world. It is without doubt the safest and best remedy ever discovered for the speedy and effectual cure of Coughs, Colds and the severest Lung troubles. It acts on an entirely different principle from the usual prescriptions given by physicians, as it does not dry up a cough and leave the disease still in the system, but on the contrary removes the cause of the trouble, heals the parts affected, and leaves them in a purely healthy condition. A bottle kept in the house for use when the diseases make their appearance, will save doctor's bills and a long spell of serious illness. A trial will convince you of these facts. It is positively sold by all druggists and general dealers in the land. Price 75c., large bottles. eodw41tf

FIVE MILLION POUNDS.

By T. WEMYSS REID.

The remainder of that day I spent in consultation with our solicitor, and in awaiting the arrival of Harding. He came to York by the evening train, and pressed my hand affectionately when we met upon the railway platform.

"What do you say, Harding; shall we apply to the home secretary at once on the strength of the discovery of the strychnine?"

"No, we must wait. Don't look disappointed, my dear fellow. As soon as I received your letter this morning I hurried off to Belmore's chambers and was fortunate enough to get five minutes of his precious time. Indeed, I believe he gave me fully fifteen minutes if the truth must be told. I read your letter to him and asked him his advice. 'I should like to consult Grange before I say anything,' was his answer."

"You mean the judge."

"Precisely. Our one hope, you know, is in the judge. It will rest with him in the end whether there is to be a pardon or not; and Belmore, who knows that all his sympathies are on our side, is anxious to take him along with us in every step."

Accustomed as I had been to see in a judge only the awful being clothed in a mediæval costume, who dispensed life and death, liberty and slavery, from the judgment seat, I could hardly realise the fact that such a man should be full of active human sympathy, even on behalf of a fellow creature whom he had just doomed to the gallows. So it was, however.

"Well," continued Harding, "I had a note at four o'clock from Belmore to say that Grange was very much pleased to hear of this discovery, which would of course need to be properly authenticated; but that something further must be obtained—something if possible tending to break down the evidence as to motive—before any steps were taken at the home office. You see it is not a commutation of the sentence that we want—it is a free pardon."

"Yes," I answered, feeling depressed and disappointed, for I had thought that all our troubles were at an end now that we had discovered the strychnia. "I suppose we must go on, but I confess that I seem to be at the end of my resources."

"Now, my good fellow, you must not give up in despair. Let us wait until we have caught Gregson. Who knows what he can tell us?"

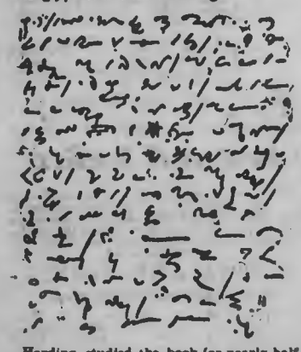
I sat in gloomy meditation. Four precious days had already passed. It is true that they had not been wasted; but Daisy still lay under her awful doom, which was hourly drawing nearer to her. A heavy sigh broke from my lips.

Harding, evidently anxious to divert my thoughts, asked me to tell him all the particulars of my visit to the hall, and I complied with his request.

"Have you got the memorandum book you picked up in the room Flinter had been using?"

"Yes," I said, and threw it across the table to him.

He opened it and looked at it long and carefully. Alas! Nothing was to be made out of it. Page after page was filled with hieroglyphics like the following:



Harding studied the book for nearly half an hour, often making jottings on a sheet of paper and referring again and again to particular pages. He laid it down wearily at last.

"I can do nothing with it," he said. "It is evidently some very intricate form of cipher. Such things are to be read, however, and we must have this read. We cannot afford to lose any chance of hitting upon a clew."

"But whom can you get to read it?"

"We must think that over. Perhaps Bielski may be able to give us some assistance."

The next day was spent in a journey to Barton at the request of Eastmead. From Barton we went with Eastmead to Little Lorton for the purpose of seeing Smirke, the chemist. That person immediately recognised the parcel found in the secret staircase at the hall as being that in which he had wrapped the strychnia sold to Daisy. But he was able to afford additional proof of the identity of the parcel. On removing the sealed outer wrapper he showed us an inner covering, on which the label was repeated, with the address, and, in addition, the date, "Oct. 7," in the chemist's own handwriting. There was, therefore, no longer any doubt that, so far as the mere possession of strychnia at the time of the murder was concerned, the evidence given against Daisy at her trial had been absolutely neutralised. Affidavits describing the discovery and identification of the parcel were duly made on the same day by Smirke, Eastmead and myself before one of the Barton magistrates.

Two days passed without any further progress being made. It was a whole week since Daisy's condemnation, and only two more remained to us in which to save her. My impatience was at fever height, and Harding had a hard task to keep me in any degree calm or self-possessed. I had not dared to seek another interview with my darling. Until the question of life and death was settled in one way or the other, I felt that to see her once more would only be to torture her unnecessarily, and to rob me of the little strength which I still had left. But through the chaplain of the jail I was in constant communication with her. Every day I wrote to her, and she knew that I was living for her sake and her's alone.

The first week, I say, had gone by, and before we heard anything more of Bielski. It was Sunday evening, and I was sitting by myself, wearily seeking for some fresh clew which might hitherto have escaped my attention, when the detective was suddenly ushered into my room.

CAPTAIN WILLIAM SLATER, No. 37 Granville Street, Halifax, N.S.

N. WASHINGTON, M. D., Throat and Lung Specialist, Toronto.

DEAR SIR,—When you visited me in the latter part of January of this year I had been given up to die of consumption by a consultation of Physicians, Drs. Reid and Oliver, prominent physicians of Halifax who considered that my recovery was simply impossible. I had no hope myself nor had my family. When you expressed a hope of my recovery, it was received with a doubt. Confined to my bed, very low, weak, wasted, night sweats very bad, troublesome cough, raising large quantities of matter—in fact every appearance of a speedy death. After using your Respirator and Spirometer and medicine I began to recover very fast, so much so that during three hard winter months I have gained from 20 to 25 lbs., and was able to walk out on Easter Sunday. My strength is daily increasing, and I shall be able soon to be at work. To you I owe a debt of gratitude, and am anxious for others who are suffering as I was to consult you. You can make what use of this letter you see fit, and thanking you for what I consider a most wonderful treatment,

I remain, yours truly,
CAPT. WM. SLATER.

Later.—Fully recovered and at work.

LOCAL NEWS.

Two Days of the Campaign.

The Salvation Army three days' jubilee opened Saturday night. The C. P. R. express from the East brought a detachment of officers and the Toronto Salvation Band, who were met on the road from the station by the local corps. When the meeting took place there was a clash of cymbals and amens, while the thunders of the big drume and joyous hallelujahs rent the air. At eight o'clock the band paraded the streets, and, playing Salvation tunes, marched to the Opera House, where a fervid experience meeting was held. The hall was about half filled. The experiences related were varied —some amusing, some sad, some absolutely revolting in their wickedness. Staff-Captains Morton and Young, and Specials Philpot, Calhoun and Southall were on the platform and addressed the meeting, the latter being especially eloquent in a vivid and tragic exposure of the blackness of his own heart previous to conversion. The Captain is from England and possesses remarkable histrionic powers. Sunday afternoon there was a good attendance, and in the evening the hall was filled to its utmost capacity, some having to stand throughout the whole service. This evening at 6.35 General Booth will be accorded a reception at the C. P. R. station, after which a meeting will be held in the Opera House.

Special Excursion to New York.

A grand special excursion to New York will take place on Tuesday Oct. 26th per G. T. R., Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburg, and Hudson River Railways. Tickets will be on sale at T. Menzies, Agency Peterborough, on Oct. 25th and 26th. The tickets from Peterborough are $11.15 and are good to return, on connecting roads till November 1st inclusive and on the Grand Trunk till November 3rd inclusive. Parties of 40 and upwards can have a special day coach reserved from Ogdensburg to New York, by applying to Mr. T. Menzies before Oct. 21st. All trains have first class coaches. The scenery along the route of this excursion is exceptionally grand. The trains land at the Grand Central depot. The city is now at its full height of commercial and amusement activity and altogether the excursion in its unparalleled cheapness, is one well worth taking in. Secure your tickets at Mr. T. Menzies' agency, George street.

Shipping a Bridge.

The Central Iron Works Company shiped to-day, by G. T. R., an iron bridge 110 feet long. It is to be erected over a stream on the boundary between Perth and Waterloo counties, near the town of Bruner. This makes the seventh iron bridge shipped from the Central Iron Works this summer. The works have under course of construction at present a bridge of the cantilever pattern, designed by Mr. Lan himself, for Dresden, Kent county, Ontario. Orders for four more bridges are booked, the iron for two of which is expected this week. The company are making rapid progress with the large gasometer being erected at the gas works here.

First of the Season.

Sunday morning a slight fall of snow, which was soon succeeded by a drizzling shower of rain, cast its white mantle over everything in this section of the mundane sphere. The "oldest inhabitant" says our Indian summer will now make its appearance, bringing in its train the customary fogs and smoky hazes.

A Large Funeral.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Sawers took place yesterday at 3 p.m. from her late residence, Rubidge street, to the Little Lake Cemetery. Despite the inclement weather a large procession of mourning relatives and friends followed the remains to their last resting place. Much sympathy is expressed for the bereaved husband and orphaned children.

Directors' Meeting.

A meeting of the Directors of the West Riding Agricultural Society was held Saturday afternoon in the Council Chamber. A statement of the total receipts from the exhibition was presented, amounting to $2,923.50. All accounts in connection with the exhibition and the list of prizes were ordered to be paid.

Robbery at Fraserville.

Goodfellow's General Store, "Stock Up" —Clever Capture of the Culprits—The Spoil Recovered.

This morning Mr. Alfred E. Goodfellow, who keeps a general store at Fraserville, discovered that his shop had been burglariced during the night, a quantity of boots, ready made clothing, underwear, etc., having been taken. Suspicion at once rested upon a disreputable looking man and woman who had been in the store Saturday making purchases. Mr. Goodfellow and several others at once commenced a search for the suspected parties, with the result that the man was traced to town, where after buying some bread and other provisions, he started down the G. T. R. track. A small boy was placed on the trail, with instructions to keep him in sight, who was in turn followed at a respectable distance by Mr. Goodfellow, Chief Cooper and Cons. Pigeon bringing up the rear. The man entered the bush about two miles from town, where it seems the woman was in waiting. Here they were found surrounded by a lot of the stolen goods. They were at once brought to town and to taken police headquarters, where they gave the names of Charles and Carrie Reynolds, of Lancashire, Eng. Their examination will take place to-morrow morning. This is the second time Mr. Goodfellow's store has been burglarised recently, the same thing occurring a few months ago.

A Narrow Escape.

This morning two laborers, employed on the new post-office building, had a narrow escape from being seriously hurt, if not killed outright. The scaffold on which they were, gave way, and one of them, known as "French Joe," fell through, but, fortunately, caught on one of the lower ledges, and escaped with slight injury. The other man saw his peril in time and avoided all danger.

An Unbrotherly Broil.

Saturday night two brothers in Ashburnham became involved in a quarrel, the younger lad biting his elder brother near the eye, inflicting an unpleasant but not dangerous wound. The latter then in a fraternal spirit administered a severe drubbing to his younger brother who afterwards had to be assisted home. His face was cut and bruised in a shocking manner.

A Speedy Cure.

As a speedy cure for Dysentery, Cholera Morbus, Diarrhœa, Colic, Cramps, Sick Stomach, Canker of the Stomach and Bowles, and all forms of Summer Complaints, there is no remedy more reliable than Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. Dealers who sell it, and those who buy it are on mutual grounds in confidence of its merits. 2w42&d

The Cholera at Corea.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—Advices received here state that cholera is still raging fiercely in Corea. The scourge has more than decimated the capital, where, out of a population of 200,000, the death rate rules at the frightful average of 1000 per day. About as many Coreans as there are people in the State of California have been swept away already, and it is hard to say where the plague will stop. Corea is described as "an appalling pest spot." Never was there a more frightful record of the ravages of disease on mankind. The story of the plague of London is bespeared by what is now going on at Seoul. They are beginning to give over the task of burying their dead, and the city is threatened with positive extinction.

EGAN'S IMPERIAL TRUSS

Read the following extract from a letter of a well-known citizen of St Catharines,—hundreds like it:

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 20th, 1886.

GENTLEMEN,—Being over 70 years of age, and over 30 years ruptured, looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two spiralless trusses made in York State, costing me $40. Nothing would retain my Hernia. I have worn your truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort; even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down, it holds me perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. H. KING.

This new Spiral Spring Pad Truss has taken ten years to make it perfect; is guaranteed to hold the very worst case during the hardest work or severest strain. It will cure every child sure; and 80 out of every 100 of adults. Be warned—don't waste your money on useless appliances, but send stamp for our treatise; it contains full information, your neighbors' testimony, price list and questions for you to answer. When writing please mention this paper. Address, EGAN'S IMPERIAL TRUSS CO., 23 Adelaide St. East, Toronto, Ont.

I would specially call attention, to my Boys' and Mens' Balmorals, warranted to keep out wet and snow; Ladies' and Childrens' Boots and Shoes, Rubbers, Overshoes, etc. Altogether the best and cheapest stock of boots and shoes ever placed on the local market. Everything guaranteed first-class. Give me a call at my shop, corner of Sthune and Sherbrooke Sts. and you will save money thereby.

CANADA'S OPPORTUNITY.

Proposed Shipment of Goods to Cuba and Porto Rico.

Ottawa Despatch to U. S. Press.

OTTAWA, Oct. 18.—The Dominion Government regard the abrogation of the flag treaty between Spain and the United States by President Cleveland as likely to prove of benefit to Canada, and are preparing to take advantage of it. The treaty which was signed between Great Britain and Spain on the 26th of April did not go into effect in the United Kingdom and Spain until the 15th of August, and in the British and Spanish colonies, October 15. Arrangements are now being made for the shipment of large quantities of fish, lumber, cotton and woolen goods from Canada to Cuba and Porto Rico during the coming winter under the conventional tariff, which in these items is far below the ordinary Spanish tariff.

BANK OF ENGLAND FORGERIES.

Two American Thieves Arrested at Oporto, Portugal.

LISBON, Oct. 18.—Two Americans named Austin and Stafield have been arrested at Oporto for uttering forged Bank of England notes. They both have made confessions, stating that they have been supplied with the notes by an agent of a large syndicate in London engaged in the business of manufacturing and circulating them. From this agent the prisoners obtained sixteen £50 notes and six £500 for one-fifth of their face value, and managed to get rid of them at their face value by making payments with them intermingled with good French notes.

A PYTHON AND A PANTHER.

The One Gets Loose in Boston and the Other in a French Town.

BOSTON, Oct. 18.—The twenty-nine and a half-foot python which recently got away in City Hall Park, New York, again escaped this morning while being transferred from his box to a cage at Austin & Stone's Museum here. Crawling under the stage the snake broke away several boards, entered the cellar, got into the cold air box of the furnace and burst open its sides, the bricks flying in all direction. Four men seized him, and after a terrible struggle lasting an hour and a half succeeded in caging him. During the fight the python wound himself around two thick joists and snapped them as easily as if they were pipe stems. He bit one man in the wrist and squeezed another severely by jamming him against the walls.

PARIS, Oct. 18.—A panther escaped from a menagerie in Chambery, the capital of Savoy, to-day and ran through the streets creating a great panic. The beast bit many persons and scalped and killed a policeman before he was captured.

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—The strike of the packing house workmen was finally ended this afternoon. The strikers held a mass meeting on the prairie about 3 o'clock, at which between 12,000 and 14,000 were present. A proposition to return to work on the ten-hour plan was carried almost unanimously, and the strike was declared at an end. Shortly afterwards Mr. Barry, the Knights of Labor delegate, waited on Mr. Armour and said the strike was at an end, and that the men would return to work to-morrow without making any conditions. The packing house owners will keep all their new men and expect to be able to retain nearly all the old men.

A Better Feeling.

BERLIN, Oct. 18.—A more hopeful peace feeling prevails in official circles. There was animated buying on the Bourse to-day and a reaction in favor of Russian securities.

The North German Gazette has a bitter article assailing Prince Alexander as the cause of the present European crisis. HE MADE A LITTLE SOMETHING.

How a Tramp in Two Months Became Worth Half a Million.

ISHPEMING, Mich., Oct. 18.—John T. Jones, who was generally supposed to be a tramp, appeared here two months ago, and, after working for a while about different mines, offered twenty-five cents a ton for a pile of refuse rock at the Winthrop Hematite Company's mines, the money to be paid as the rock was removed. Jones said he thought he could make a little something off the rock.

The company was surprised one day when Jones set a force of men at work sorting the rock and sorting off the ore. Jones also bought other piles of rock at the same figures. It now transpires that the rock pans out one-half good ore, for which Jones received $5.00 a ton. The Winthrop pile alone contained 500,000 tons of rock and netted Jones over $100,000. Other piles have netted him about $400,000. The work has been conducted under the very eyes of the mill-owners, who have regarded the rock piles as worthless and paid no attention to Jones.

THE RANKINS HAVE A RACKET.

George Barricades Himself and Defies His Uncle and Four Policemen.

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 18.—George Rankin, a brother of McKee Rankin, the actor, living at Sandwich, Ont., across from Detroit, had a quarrel with Thomas McKee Rankin, an uncle, and the two came to blows. George knocked Thomas down, and then, retreating to the house, secured an axe and successfully kept Thomas at bay until he could barricade the doors and windows. Thomas then secured a warrant against George, charging him with assault, and four policemen were detailed to bring him to Windsor for trial. George refused to leave his house, and kept the officers off as he had Thomas. He has a stock of provisions, and since Thursday he has not left the house and the officers have not ventured to break in.

For the last three days hundreds of inquisitive people have visited the place to see four officers marching at regular intervals around a house from which no sign of life is manifested. The siege bids fair to end in the starvation of Rankin or the exhaustion of the police.

Winding Up the Port Perry Fair.

PORT PERRY, Oct. 18.—The directors of the Ontario Central Agricultural and Live Stock Association were tendered a banquet by the citizens Friday night as an acknowledgment of their zeal and enterprise in launching the Central Fair. Reeve J. W. Curtis occupied the chair, on his right hand being Jas. I. Davidson, President, and on his left John Adams, one of the vice-presidents of the Association. The vice-chair was filled by Mr. Wm. Jones. The toasting was done in cold water, and there was no lack of enthusiasm or of mirth. The president was presented by Mr. Adams, on behalf of the directors and other members, with a handsome gold-headed walking stick, Mr. McMurtry reading an appropriate address, to which the president replied in feeling terms.

A Canadian Girl in New York.

From Sunday's New York Sun.

Flora Mutzner, a bright-eyed little French Canadian, about 17 years old, was found by Policeman Murphy wandering about Ninth-street, near Avenue B, and talking in an incoherent manner. She was attired in thick clothing trimmed with furs and wore a sealskin cap. At Essex Market yesterday she told Justice Gorman that a debt of $100 was owing to her in Canada. She was committed to the care of the Commissioners of Charities and Correction on a charge of insanity.

Lord Garmoyle's Rejected.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Miss Fortescue tonight made her first appearance in America at the Lyceum Theatre, when was produced for the first time in this country W. S. Gilbert's play of "Gretchen." The house was crowded with a fair representative first night audience, whose applause was liberal. Miss Fortescue, who is of petite stature, with a very pretty face and sweet voice, was a favorite before the first act was half over. The play was well received.

The Chicago Stock Yard Strike.

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—There was no change in the situation in the packing-house district this morning. The armed guards now number 500. The Armour firm has 800 men at work, and began slaughtering cattle this morning in a small way, but has not yet attempted to commence operations in its pork-packing branch.

A French View of Mr. Beecher.

From the Paris Figaro, Sept. 26.

Henry Ward Beecher, pastor of Plymouth Rock, Brooklyn, the most eloquent, the most entertaining and the most original preacher in the United States, arrived in Paris this morning. He comes to us after a six weeks' sojourn in England, where our neighbors, under the delightful spell of his eloquence, forgot their traditional antipathy for the nephews of Uncle Sam. The excellent Reverend Beecher in no wise resembles the typical Puritan pastor, with lean, long, dry face, mournful as a rainy day. He is a small, stout man with a laughing, rubicund face, a lover of good cheer and an incomparable story-teller and conversationalist. He is an orator of the first order, one of the most curious personalities of the new continent, and he deserves a better reception from us than even that which we extended to M. Daly's troupe.

M. Ward Beecher settled in Brooklyn in 1847, and has retained the same parish since. At first his salary was but $400 a year, to-day it is $25,000, and with his lectures, newspaper articles, and the gifts of his flock, he makes another $20,000. But would you believe it? the Rev. Ward Beecher never has a cent, and you could not listen to anything more amusing than the tribulations of the pastor with his $50,000 a year income in trying to make ends meet with his creditors. The reason is that the excellent man does not understand anything about money. On the first of January, every year, he gives his wife $20,000 for the household expenses of the year, and then pays no more attention to money matters. As to the other $30,000 they remain in his pocket, or rather they go out of his pocket to pass into the tills of sellers of bric-a-brac, bibelots, and so forth. But it is not the good man's fault if he buys everything, whether valuable or worthless, of this kind.

Paragraphs on Peterborough.

The Richmond County Democrat, published at Tompkinsville, New York, in a recent issue contained the following contribution respecting this town:

A representative of the Democrat recently made a pilgrimage beyond the confines of this country and into the very teeth of the country which gives the United States almost as much, if not more, trouble than that little place down at our feet, called Mexico. Peterborough was the objective point of our traveler and on arriving there he found a lively settlement of about 12,000 souls, enjoying all the modern improvements such as the electric light and prohibition. * * * There are three daily papers in the place, all lively, spicy, and well edited, and it is, perhaps, due to the efforts of these public educators to say that the prosperity of the town is, in a great measure, due to their efforts. Every well-regulated community has its punster and this town is not lacking in that respect. The absence of the festive goat was remarked by the visitor and the punster, Mr. Thomas Cahill, who is also a public official, replied that there were no goats but plenty of goatees. (This is an imperial pun.)

The big saw mill at this place is an interesting sight. To see great logs drawn up the river on an endless chain and coming out of the mill a short time afterward perhaps made up in packages of shingles, is a novel sight. The machinery of this great institution is under the supervision of Mr. John McGrath, who is a courteous, obliging and jolly good fellow. Then the Canadians have excursions to Idylwild Grove just like Staten Islanders, only that the Idylwild Grove of the Canadians is not on the Hudson. The genial Capt. Calcutt, who owns an ale brewery in Peterborough, runs his boat, Golden Eye, from that place to Idylwild. Amusement is also afforded in the town itself by concerts in the Botanical Gardens, where the citizens listen to excellent music twice a week. Here one evening while the band was winding up the evening entertainment in the usual way by playing "God Save the Queen," an individual who must have been an Irishman, began singing in a voice trembling with patriotic emotion, "God Save Old Ireland, that's an Irishman's Toast."

The town has a beautiful cemetery called Little Lake. In this place is a receiving vault, in which the owner has caused to be placed a box tarred on the outside and containing a blanket. The wish of this eccentric personage is that upon his death his body shall be placed within this box and buried after the sun has sunk behind the hills of Peterborough town. The cemetery is in charge of Mr. John Kelly, who takes pride in keeping the place in excellent condition. When Canada is annexed to the United States the town of Peterborough will give some of the other cities a few pointers on loveliness and enterprise.

The Poet of the "Rockies."

A genuine, live poet is stopping at the Grand Central. He breathes, eats, walks, talks—and recites poetry. This rival of Shakespeare is of no mean order, having graduated from following the plow and stoning fields on a farm a few miles from Omemee. Sunday night, in the sitting room of the hotel, he held a large audience spell-bound for an hour or more with the flowery eloquence of his own productions. A collection was lifted for his benefit, amounting to the handsome sum of three tobacco stamps, a shirt-button and a bucketful of promises. This magnificent donation was tendered him on an empty pie-plate, the orchestra playing "Sweet Violets" in mournful discord, after which the assembly adjourned sine die. Anyone desiring an antidote for mirthfulness can get an infallible remedy, in the shape of one of Mr. Blank's poems, for a penny only.

Parties of 40 and upwards can have a special day coach reserved from Ogdensburg to New York, by applying to Mr. T. Menzies before Oct. 21st. All trains have first class coaches. The city is now at its full height of commercial and amusement activity and altogether the excursion in its unparalleled cheapness, is one well worth taking in. Secure your tickets at Mr. T. Menzies' agency, George street.

An Excited Official.

A gentleman who holds several local inspectorships, and is a landmark in the town, was, yesterday morning, as "mad as a wet hen." It seems that his horse got loose through the night, and in wandering around the street, was sighted by a lynx-eyed "cop," who forthwith proceeded to place the equine in "durance vile"—in the town pound. Of all the angry men ever seen the town official holds the banner, and it is not safe for the "cop" to Beavis-ible un' is enemy regains his equine-imity.

"Good evening, Mr. Fenton. I'm afraid you think I have been a long time over my work; but it has been as stiff a job as I have had for some time. The fellow has done nothing but double and take fresh names. If it had not been for that photograph you lent me I should have been baffled at last."

"And you—have you found him?" I cried eagerly.

"Yes, sir, he's here at your service; but before I bring him in to see you I should like to give you a hint. I don't know whether you'll find him a willing witness or the reverse; and if the latter, just ask him if he remembers Smith & Sharp, of Gracechurch [illegible]. That will fetch him, I reckon, sir. You see he got into trouble there ten years ago, and has been wanted ever since. I'll wait outside till you have had your talk with him."

He was leaving the room, when Harding, who had just heard of the detective's arrival, entered, and in a few words was informed of the situation.

"Let Bickiki make himself useful while he is waiting," said Harding; "give him that memorandum book."

I handed the little notebook to the detective. He looked at it gravely.

"I wonder if I can crack this nut? It's a hard one; but I'll try."

We withdrew, and in two minutes the door was opened, and Mr. James Gregson entered with the impudent smile upon his face which I knew so well. Bowing with an air of familiarity, which was not without a distinct touch of insolence, he looked from me to Harding, as though inquiring the reason which had led us to take so much trouble to find him. Beneath this outward assumption of self confidence I thought I could catch signs that the fellow was not quite so much at his ease as he wished to appear. I invited him to take a seat, and gravely stated to him the object I had in seeking him out.

He looked at me with a satirical smile on his lips when I had finished my statement.

"So you think I can clear your friend Miss Stancliffe, do you?"

"I hope you can throw some light upon the mystery that surrounds Mr. Mauleverer's death."

He laughed outright. "Of course I can do that; but you have come to the wrong man for information that will clear Miss Daisy. Have you forgotten what I told you in the railway train when you were on your way to the old man's house?"

"It is precisely because I have not forgotten it that I have desired to see you again. You spoke then of a conspiracy to commit murder. I want you to be kind enough to tell me frankly what you meant by your words. You remember that you charged not only Miss Stancliffe, but Flinter and Dr. Branksome, and myself as well, with being in some plot. What did you mean by it?"

"O, don't be afraid on your own account, Mr. Fenton. I know now that you were not in the plot. You were only the dupe, and a very simple one, too."

I was determined that, come what might, I should not lose my temper during this interview of such vital importance to my darling. The more I saw of the man the more certain I became that he did not speak without knowledge, and when I observed the growing gravity of Harding's face I felt sure that he also entertained the same conviction. I took no notice, therefore, of Gregson's sneer but repeated my question.

"Tell me, if you please, what was the nature of the plot of which you spoke?"

"Is it possible," he retorted, "that you are so dull as not to see the nature of the plot for yourself now? I should have given you credit for being not quite so stupid as you appear to me. Good Lord! The whole thing has been carried out under your nose, and now that it is finished you come to me to tell you what it means."

"Pray take pity, then, on my stupidity, and tell me all!"

"Oh dear, no!" he said with a mocking laugh. "My secret is worth a good deal more to me than it can be to you."

"Is it money that you want for telling the truth? If so——"

"Yes, it is money; but I don't want any from you. You are a very clever fellow, I dare say, in your own opinion, and a very knowing one; but you must not think you can buy me."

"Well, kindly say what you are prepared to tell me without being bought."

"Just this, Mr. — Mr. — I declare I forget your name. What I told you would happen when I saw you in the train has all come true. Mauleverer has been murdered by the gang who have been plotting against his life for years, and who are now going to get clean off with the swag—all but one of them; and thanks to some stupid blundering on their part—or perhaps I ought to say on your part, mister, for I'm told you have meddled a good bit in the business—she'll be hanged. That's all."

The malice of the man revealed itself in the tones in which he spoke. I kept my temper, however, but I saw at the same time that the moment had arrived when I ought to use the weapon intrusted to me by the detective.

"Mr. Gregson," I said, "since that is the name by which you choose to call yourself, you are making a great mistake in supposing that I am quite so helpless as you imagine. I have the means of making you speak, and by heaven, sir, I'll use them, and quickly, too, or make you pay dearly for your silence."

He looked up at me with a startled air. The fellow was a cur, and at the first straight blow he appeared to be more than inclined to succumb. But he recovered himself after a momentary pause.

"I don't know what you are talking about. First of all you want to bribe me, and then you try bullying. I've not come here to be either bought or sold."

"Then, perhaps, as you don't want to be sold, you will tell me your story without compelling me to summon the detective who is waiting in the next room, in order that I may make a communication to him about yourself and Smith & Sharp, Gracechurch Street."

The stroke told even more quickly and completely than I had dared to hope. A ghastly pallor overspread the fellow's face, and he sat for more than a minute speechless, staring at me with eyes full of terror.

"You don't mean to bring that up against me after all these years! Good God! how have you got to know anything about it? After a pause he continued: "Well, I'll tell you as much as I can if you'll promise not to give me up."

"If you tell me everything, you will be quite safe so far as I am concerned. If you do not, then you must take the consequences."

(To be Continued.)

Electricity to Take the Horse-Car.

From the New York Evening Post.

"If these people can do half what they say they can do," said an officer of the road today, "we shall have them equip the Third-avenue road north of Eighty-sixth street with electric motors at once. We can double our present speed, and as soon as trucks and wagons find that they are constantly overtaken and have to turn out they will stop using the tracks. Then we shall have full swing. I need scarcely say that the cars will be exceedingly handsome and comfortable, and that everything will be done to contribute to the convenience of passengers.

"The day of the horse car and public vehicles drawn by horses is over. They cost an immense deal to maintain and the results obtained are, nowadays, insignificant. Years ago they were all right, but to-day they are useless. These electric motors will not cost half as much to operate as the horse-cars. We will be able to dispense with a large number of men. It will require two men for each car just the same, but we will have no immense stables to keep going, with a thousand or more horses to feed and with stablemen to pay for feeding them. I believe that, with handsome cars, increased speed and the ability to stop at every block if necessary, the Third-Avenue surface road will be able to keep all its present patronage."

New York's Death Rate.

During August the deaths in New York city averaged one every fifteen minutes. During July the average was one in every ten minutes.

CAPTAIN WILLIAM SLATER, No. 37 Granville Street, Halifax, N S

N. WASHINGTON, M. D., Throat and Lung Specialist, Toronto.

DEAR SIR,—When you visited me in the latter part of January of this year I had been given up to die of consumption by a consultation of Physicians, Drs. Reid and Oliver, prominent physicians of Halifax who considered that my recovery was simply impossible. I had no hope myself nor had my family. When you expressed a hope of my recovery it was received with a doubt. Confined to my bed, very low, weak, wasted, night sweats very bad, troublesome cough, raising large quantities of matter—in fact every appearance of a speedy death. After using your Respirator and Spirometer and medicine I began to recover very fast, so much so that during three hard winter months I have gained from 20 to 25 lbs., and was able to walk out on Easter Sunday. My strength is daily increasing, and I shall be able soon to be at work. To you I owe a debt of gratitude, and am anxious for others who are suffering as I was to consult you. You can make what use of this letter you see fit, and thanking you for what I consider a most wonderful treatment,

I remain, yours truly,

CAPT. WM. SLATER.

Later,—Fully recovered and at work.

Wedding Bells.

At St. Peter's Cathedral this morning Mr. Thomas Ryan, of Toronto, was married to Miss Bridget, daughter of Mr. M. Halpin, of the American hotel. The ceremony was performed about 10.15 by Rev. Father Conway, assisted by Rev. Father O'Brien. The bride was dressed in white satin, with pearls and orange blossoms. A handsome bouquet and a pearl fan completed her toilet. The bridesmaids, Misses B. and N. Halpin, cousin and sister respectively of the bride, were dressed in pink and white. The groomsman was Mr. Sullivan, of Toronto. The ceremony over, mass was said, after which Rev. Father Conway addressed a few words to the newly married pair, impressing upon them the solemnity of the marriage sacrament. About thirty guests sat down to a recherche repast at the American House, which reflected the highest credit on the culinary ability of the caterer, Mr. Bowman. The five-story wedding cake was furnished by Mr. Wm. Ruth. An unusually large number of beautiful and valuable wedding gifts filled two tables to repletion. The happy young couple leave to-night for the west at 6.42, via C. P. R., taking with them the best wishes of their numerous friends.

Hymeneal.

The Brantford Expositor says:—"The marriage was celebrated Saturday of Mr. S. Fuge, of the Hamilton agency of the Bank of British North America, and Miss Mary O. Rubidge, daughter of W. B. Rubidge, Clerk of the High Court of Justice, (a former resident of Peterborough) here. The ceremony took place at 8.30 a.m., in the presence of the family, being a very quiet affair indeed. After the usual wedding breakfast, the newly married couple left on the 10.43 train for Toronto. They will take up their residence in Hamilton immediately. Mr. Fuge is a young man of excellent parts, and the bride's lovable disposition and unselfish nature has always surrounded her with warm friends, who will wish them all happiness." Mr. and Miss Rubidge spent several weeks in Peterborough this summer, and will receive the congratulations of the many who met them on that occasion.

Compliment to the Builders.

THE SALVATION SOLDIERS.

GRAND WELCOME TO GENERAL BOOTH.

The Great Mother of the Salvation Army Arrives at Peterborough—A Gala Time for the Salvation Soldiers—The Opera House Crowded to the Doors.

As the C. P. R. train from the east rolled into the station about 6.45 last evening, everyone of the immense crowd assembled was on tiptoe with excitement, all eager to catch a first glimpse of General Booth, who was expected to arrive from Kingston. The Salvation band and a small army of soldiers were present to welcome him. With great difficulty the General and his staff forced their way through the mass to a cab which was waiting for them, and being once comfortably seated, the party was driven to the residence of John Douglas, Esq., the band and about 200 soldiers escorting him to the intersection of George and Brock streets. There were in the party besides the General, Commissioner Coombs, Col. Dowdle, Major Margetts, and Staff-Captain Eadie, D.O. While here the General is the guest of Mr. Douglas. Meanwhile the band and soldiers had returned to the Opera House, which, by the time the General and his staff arrived there, was crowded to the doors, standing room being at a premium. Before the meeting was opened Revs. Tovell, Wallace, Davis and Torrance were invited to and accepted seats on the platform.

As General Booth and the officers appeared on the stage loud shouts of welcome rang through the hall, and fervent hallelujahs were uttered by the soldiers. Commissioner Coombs opened the meeting with a short prayer, after which a hymn was sung, during which the General urged everyone to sing and took occasion to say: "You have only come here to criticise the Army and see what we were like. Look to the Lord and get your soul blessed. Look here, I'll tell you a secret, and you will be better able to understand the Salvation Army. Get your soul saved, and you will see things as we do." Col. Dowdle and Commissioner Coombs also offered up brief but heartfelt prayers to the Creator. Staff-Captain Vint, the man of many languages, who has been at the head of the Italian work in London, sang a solo, after which Col. Dowdle, who is a rather military looking gentleman—large, robust and hearty—was introduced by Commissioner Coombs, with the remark that "he does not belong to the Starvation Army." (Laughter.) After a few remarks from the Colonel and a chorus by the soldiers, stepped off the stage to a lower platform. He is a venerable looking man, about 70 years of age, tall and slightly stooped, and though his iron grey hair and wrinkled countenance betray the ravages of time, his flashing eye or elastic step have lost none of their youthful vigor. He was dressed in dark blue clothes, with a red shirt underneath the coat. He is a remarkably fine speaker, and secured the rapt attention of the vast audience during his oration of an hour and a half, which was interspersed throughout with interesting anecdotes connected with his experience in the Salvation Army.

After the prolonged applause had subsided, he said in substance:—"I mean that we shall all be friends before we part to-night, and I want to try to explain to you what the Salvation Army is, for the reason people are not friendly to the Army is because they do not understand it. Well, you say, 'General, that is a tremendous blast from your trumpet to begin with.' Well, I know it. I believe in the Salvation Army, but I am never angry with people in it until they have an opportunity of understanding it. I am never surprised that clergymen and people who are always mixed up with churches don't believe, because it is hard to understand. You have not much trouble in making a drunkard or a heathen understand it, but it is these people who have been brought up in connection with the churches and religious matters that are hard to make believe. I think by showing you some of the good works of the Salvation Army, I'll be able to do you a great deal of good. I commence by saying that a great deal of this apprehension arose from beholding us at a distance. We all agree as to the need of something being done to relieve this poor sorrowing world of a portion of its load of sin and misery. You must believe this before you can understand the Salvation Army. The population of the world is about fifteen hundred millions of people, two-thirds or more of which are, at this hour, actually heathen, and although something has been done to convert these heathens by the Christian churches, while twenty millions have been converted, the kingdom of idolatry has grown and expanded to the extent of two hundred millions. Look at Europe with its infidelity. Come to the United States. They tell me that in Chicago with over one hundred thousand population, ninety-five out of every hundred of its inhabitants never cross the threshold of a church. Its hotels and saloons are more numerous than its lamp posts; its theatres and gambling dens run on Sunday the same as on any other day. But here I take my stand. When I first started in the east end of London, they told me that within a mile of the spot on which I stood, there were a million people who never read the Bible, or were concerned about their souls. The Salvation Army has attempted to do something with these. Supposing they might fail, they were making an honest effort to grapple with this misery of sin. I said, God helping me, I'll try, and I went to work and tried. People have a notion that General Booth sat down and said, 'Here is a plan—I'll make an army, and I'll be a general, and have majors and captains and bands and music, and all this and that.' Nothing of the sort. In the greatest of simplicity I said, 'If I can ring the bells of the gospel in the ears and the hearts of this poor ruined world; if I can only get a message from the dying lamb on Calvary to their ears; if I can get them to hear the distant rumblings of the car of justice which is hastening this way; wretched, ragged, blasphemous, infamous and devilish as they may be, they have got hearts that can feel, they have got souls that can be inspired with better things. So I rung, and rung, and rung until they did hear, and tens of thousands of those people now belong. Our bands and our music and all those contrivances are the outcome of this. If we could catch the fish with a naked hook we would not need these. I say, therefore, we have seen the need, and have

BECAUSE THEY DON'T BELIEVE

NEVER WENT TO CHURCH

who have shared my feelings, and are racking their brains for contrivances to make the people think, for it is because they don't think that they go to hell. Now, I say the Salvation Army is worthy, and I claim the sympathy of every man and woman in this house, because it is an honest effort. Look how a little while ago the world was ringing with acclamations of General Gordon because he went to Khartoum to make a rescue. We watched and waited for news from him. He failed—and yet because he made an honest effort was almost canonized; his picture you will see in almost every home. We have made an honest effort. We have faced the mockery and the ill will of the world. If a minister or any one got up to say a word for us, you laughed at them. We have endured all this. I say, we have faced all this, we have made an honest effort to save the souls of the people. The

SALVATION ARMY IS A GREAT SUCCESS.

It has succeeded in a remarkable way. If you just look at the progress of this work I am sure it will strike you. I say sometimes if I could make pass before you in a procession the hundreds of thousands of little children—because if you want to save the children, save their fathers and mothers, and they will save the children—who once were homeless and running around the streets in great destitution, who are now comfortably clothed and going to school, and who have been brought up not only for good citizens but for good saints also; if you could see the thousands of women now happy and beloved by their husbands; if I could show you the tens of thousands of men who were drunkards, who are now not only good citizens but laboring for the salvation of others; if I could show you the long rows of men who were criminals and came out of prison with the absolute certainty of going back again, who are now working contentedly at their trades, I am sure if I could show you these, you would say, General, God bless the Salvation Army! (applause). There are hundreds of thousands of men and women blessing the day the army turned up. Oh, how many I have heard say, My house used to be like a hell on earth, but since the Salvation Army came this way it has been

LIKE A LITTLE HEAVEN.

You say we have some oddities and peculiarities. So we have, but I say again we have been successful in opening the eyes of the blind. I have heard it said that the only hope for the drunkards was to let the present generation die out. Nothing of the the sort. Let the Salvation Army have them, bless the Army. Last July it was 21 years old, and we celebrated the event by a series of jubilees at which there were present, Chinese, Red Indians, Swedes, Swiss, Singhalese. Eight years ago we had 25 corps, today 1060. Eight years ago there were 35 officers; to-day over 4,000. Our colors are floating over 19 different countries and colonies. We are ready to make attacks upon Holland, Zululand, Italy, Jamaica and other countries which are waiting for us. The circulation of the War Cry is a million copies a week. With regard to the statement that we are running in opposition to the churches, I would say it is not our fault. I asked them to take charge of us when we were in our infancy, but they refused. They have always been blessed by us. I say we are friends and all godly people trying to benefit mankind. Some people say we must not wear what colors we like and have what music we choose. Well, we won't we?" (Loud shouts of 'yes' from the soldiers.) In referring to the drum, the General made some amusing remarks, comparing it to the bells on the churches, which were used for the same purpose, viz., attracting the people. The statement that he (the speaker) lived in luxury off the army was a falsehood. He never took a cent from the funds of the Army. The property of the Salvation Army is all settled on trust, with the General the trustee. There could be no perversion or diversion of the property from the purpose for which it was got. In conclusion he urged everyone in the hall yet unsaved to cast their souls at the bleeding feet of Jesus, whose love and forgiveness were unquestioned. Upon retiring volley after volley was fired by the soldiers.

WILL DO WHAT WE LIKE,

A song and prayer closed the meeting, after which the General addressed the soldiers on the platform, speaking to them in a kind, fatherly spirit, encouraging them to still greater effort on behalf of Salvation.

The General and staff left this morning for Bowmanville.

BLOOD AT CHICAGO.

PINKERTON'S MEN RASHLY FIRE UPON THE CROWD.

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—This morning it looked as though every locked out man in the stock yards was ready to go to work. All around the larger houses the alleys were filled with hundreds of men, waiting for an opportunity to talk with the bosses. Owing to the scarcity of hogs, however, very few men were being engaged. Armour & Co. will start tomorrow, but will not be ready to cut up hogs until Friday, and it will probably be Monday before the full force of men is required. The Chicago Packing and Provision Company are a little behind Armour, and they have very few hogs on hand. Fowler Bros. will probably begin killing to-morrow or next day, and the other houses as soon as they can get hogs. The price of hogs on 'Change at the yards advanced twenty-five cents per 100 pounds this morning.

Bloodshed by Pinkerton's Men.

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—The stock yards strike, which promised to pass into history as a bloodless one, has been attended by a sacrifice of human life. Terry Bogley and another man were mortally wounded by Pinkerton men this afternoon, and some hundred and fifty of the latter were arrested to await disposition on a charge of murder. All but six were afterwards released.

Armour & Co's imported workmen, three or four hundred in number, went out this morning. They had made up their minds that they did not care to remain any longer if the old hands were to come back. The report of their fears was communicated to Mr. Cudahey, who assured them of protection if they desired to stay. They had concluded, however, that the other butchers would ultimately make it so unpleasant for them that they had better quit at once. A train was telegraphed for and before 12 o'clock the last non-union man had left the premises. The men were in a Lake Shore train, the butchers on the front cars, the guards in the three at the rear. The latter had their rifle muzzles pointing out of the windows. There was a stop at Halsted and Fortieth-street to attach other cars, and the train was switched back some little distance. A crowd of curious people had assembled, and as the inmates of the train were recognized there were some jeering remarks made. As the train repassed this point a Pinkerton man pushed his rifle out, aiming at the crowd and fired his weapon. Terry Bogley fell mortally wounded. The noise of the explosion caused excitement in and outside of the cars. In a moment it was followed by a regular volley from the other riflemen and the crowd which was largely composed of school children fled in a panic. In the flight a man fell and was hastily carried away by his friends. He was also wounded. The train then steamed on.

When the train reached Twenty-second street it was boarded by a detachment of Chicago police who placed all the specials under arrest.

Bogley, who was taken to his home at Emerald avenue and Forty-second-street, was still living late this afternoon, but his death was almost momentarily expected. He is an employing teamster engaged about the yards, has a wife and family and took no part in the strike. The Pinkerton men say the strikers made the assault first with stones and then with revolvers and that they made no attack until they had been fired upon. Capt. Markey says, however, that the Pinkerton men did the first shooting and without any provocation. Capt. Markey, three boys and a man who were present all declared they could identify the man who shot Begley. The specials were made to march before them and two were picked out as participants in the shooting, then the whole force was filed back into the court room, where Lieut. Ripley and a central station detective examined their rifles and revolvers to see if there were any empty shells to indicate that they had been recently discharged. One was found to have an empty shell in it and the bearer was told to stand inside in the court hall.

After all the men had piled into the benches Wm. A. Pinkerton said: "Those of you who fired out of the car step here." One young fellow with a blonde mustache arose and walked up to his chief. No one else moved. "He as manly as the brave fellow here," cried Pinkerton, and the man within the railing said, "I shot." No others volunteered. Jos. Hill and Walter Andrews, the two men who had first been picked out by the boys, stood under guard of two police in the outer entry to the court room. Richard Lodes, G. Silvers, R. J. Partram and S. Rayner afterwards confessed to having shot into the crowd of strikers. These six men are held. The remainder of the Pinkerton men and the workmen who were on the train were let go.

Captain Joy was in charge of the Pinkerton men when the shooting occurred. He was standing on the rear platform. He said the men picked out by the police were not the guilty parties. He also said the strikers gathered about the car 400 strong just as they were about to start and began pelting them.

Thomas Burns Killed at Guelph.

GUELPH, Oct. 19.—Thomas Burns had a wood-cutting bee at his house on Inkerman-street last night. He and three or four friends imbibed whisky rather freely. Burns and his friend, John Morrisey, afterwards went to a hotel and drank more. [This is a Scott Act city.] They separated at 11.30. At 4.30 this morning the mangled remains of Burns were found in the cut between Yorkshire-street and Edinburgh-road. He had gone to sleep, it is thought, on the track, and was killed by a passing train.

A Cool Robbery on a Railway Track.

NAPANEE, Oct. 19.—Charles Gibson, aged 18, and Thomas Henry yesterday started to walk from here to Deseronto on the railroad track. They had gone but a few miles when Henry asked Gibson if he had any money. Gibson told him he had, when Henry knocked him down, and, drawing a knife, threatened to kill him if he did not disgorge. Gibson became frightened and gave Henry his pocketbook containing $25. They walked on to Deseronto together and the highwayman was arrested.

MR. GLADSTONE.

THE BEST DEFINITION HE HAS YET PUT FORTH.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—Mr. Gladstone publishes an addendum to his pamphlet on the Irish question in the new and cheap edition just issued. In this he says:

I tried to explain to the Irish deputation at Hawarden that the history of years preceding the union and the manner in which it was brought about were relevant to the present demand for Home Rule. It is not a matter of rhetoric, nor of sympathy, nor of contested expediency, but one of strictly constitutional and judicial argument. Had the union constituted a morally valid covenant, Ireland would have been morally bound by it. If it proved injurious Ireland could only urge her claims to relief upon general grounds, such as are applicable to contested legislative improvement, or if the union had not been at the time of its institution a morally binding compact it might have become such, as Goldwin Smith has justly shown, by subsequent ratification. Neither case occurred. Instead of arguing what does not require argument, I have put into the witness box two determined opponents, and their declaration is that unless acts which were in the nature of a treaty were absolutely wanting in the conditions which alone confer moral validity. If possible it is yet more plain that there has been no subsequent ratification of the union. A forcible effort against the union failed in 1800. The legal pacific movement of 1810 was treated with silent scorn. The military suppressed the county meetings of 1830. From the time of the first reform act there has been no acceptance of union by Ireland which could ratify an act morally invalid at the outset. With increased political privilege and power Ireland's attitude has become more pronounced, and she is now in the highest constitutional sense demanding, not repeal, but important and profound modifications of the incorporative act of Parliamentary union. If all this be so, Ireland's demand is not grounded on mere political expediency, but it is the exercise of the constitutional and juridical right which she possessed in 1782, and has never lost.

SOCIALISM MUST BE SUPPRESSED.

So Say all the Principal London Daily Papers.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—Champion, the Socialist leader, in an interview, declared that the democratic federation would not abandon its intended counter-demonstration to the Lord Mayor's show unless the Government promised to institute an enquiry into the condition and needs of the London poor and unemployed. A similar enquiry was made last winter after the rioting. If the police prohibited the demonstration the leaders would stay at home, but the people would be sure to make a demonstration anyhow, and he asked: Who will be able to control them?

The Times, commenting on the request of the Chief Commissioner of Police to the social democratic federation not to follow out its proposal to have the workingmen of London follow the Lord Mayor's show says the head of the police is not a spiritual or moral adviser. When he speaks to those plainly meditating mischief he should compel and not entreat them to yield obedience. It is quite possible that the Socialists may be enabled to boast that they can prevent the annual Lord Mayor's show. The outlook is very disagreeable. They offer the public the alternative of a risk of serious disturbance or the sacrifice of the ancient pageant.

The Standard says it is a total mistake to reason with the Socialists, and vigorous measures should be taken to prevent their procession on Lord Mayor's day.

Cheeky Mr. Champion.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—The Executive Committee of the Socialist Federation has decided to hold the contemplated procession on Lord Mayor's Day, Nov. 9, in spite of the warning of the police. The leaders estimate that 10,000 persons will take part in the demonstration. Champion, one of the leaders, has written a letter to the Chief of Police saying that if he cannot guarantee peace the Socialists themselves will be prepared to maintain order provided they be given control of the police.

THE GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY.

An Encouraging Showing for the Past Half Year—Receipts and Expenditures.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—The report of the Grand Trunk was issued yesterday. There has been an increase in the gross receipts for the half year of £138,000. After providing for deficiencies in the net revenue, a credit balance of £35,000 remains. A dividend at the rate of 1 per cent. per annum is recommended.

The traffic has increased 8½ per cent. in the passenger department, the receipts there amounting to £196,000. The receipts in the freight traffic show an increase over the corresponding half year of 120,000 tons, being the largest ever recorded in the June half year. The charges to capital account amount to £44,000, including £25,000 for the Jacques Cartier Union Railway. The balance at the renewal account is £20,000. The subsidiary lines have also shown better results.

The directors rejoice that the depression has greatly passed away. There is some difficulty in maintaining reasonable arrangements for securing remunerative fares and rates, but great material progress has been made and business is apparently reviving both in the United States and Canada. The harvests have been satisfactory though the price of wheat in Europe is very low, leaving little profit on wheat transported from distant regions. Altogether the results for the half year are reassuring and satisfactory.

THE CRISIS IN FRANCE.

M. de Freycinet Invites Another Vote Before Resigning.

PARIS, Oct. 19.—Prime Minister de Freycinet at a cabinet meeting to consider yesterday's defeat of the Government, explained that the adverse vote affected the responsibility of the whole ministry. Thereupon M. Sarrien, Minister of the Interior, and M. Sadel Carnot, Minister of Finance, withdrew their resignations. The cabinet decided to await a fresh debate and vote in the chambers to ascertain distinctly the feeling of the majority toward the Government.

All a Misunderstanding.

PARIS, Oct. 19.—The Chamber of Deputies to day began discussing Minister Goblet's Primary Education Bill. A proposal to initiate a fresh debate in order to secure a vote of confidence in the Government was abandoned, a majority of the Cabinet agreeing to regard yesterday's vote as a misunderstanding.

A New York Broker Gone up.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—W. R. Whitmore, the former partner of H. H. Powers, brokers, of No. 24 New-street, to-day notified the Stock Exchange that he was unable to meet his contracts. The street estimates Whitmore's losses at $80,000. Powers says the firm dissolved on Saturday last on account of transactions that came to his notice on that day. The firm was very prominent on the street, on account of Powers' heavy dealing in Reading in the recent advance on that stock.

A Boom in Iron.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—There is an excited boom in the Middlesburgh pig iron market. Thirty-two shillings and six pence per ton is freely offered but refused, 33s 6d being firmly asked. This is a rise of five shillings on the late minimum for warrants. Steel is stiffer owing to an advance in hematite.

A Section Man's Sad Death.

GUELPH, Oct. 19.—Thomas Burns, a section man on the Grand Trunk Railway, was found dead on the track here this morning. His body was terribly mangled. He evidently was run over during the night, and all night trains passed over him until discovered at daylight. How he came to be there can only be conjectured. He leaves a wife and five small children.

EAST HURON.

THE LIBERALS OF EAST HURON RECEIVE THEIR LEADER.

WINGHAM, Ont. 19.—The Reform demonstration held here this afternoon was, without doubt, the most successful political gathering ever held in East Huron. The fact that Hon. Edward Blake was to be present sufficed to bring out the farmers and others from far and near, and the weather being fine the town presented quite an animated appearance. On the arrival of the 11 o'clock train from London a procession of carriages and people on foot, headed by the Town Band, escorted Mr. Blake and party to their hotels.

The meeting was to have been held in the Skating Rink, but in consequence of that structure having been demolished by the recent wind storm, the hay press building had to be utilized. It was nicely decorated, and seating accommodation was furnished for 2000 people. The building was jammed full, and many hundreds had to be turned away. The chair was occupied by Mr. Thomas Gibson, M.P.P., and about fifty of the Reform lights of the county were accommodated with seats on the platform.

Short addresses were delivered by the Chairman, Dr. McDonald, Reform candidate for East Huron, James Somerville, M.P., Dr. Sloan and Hon. Wm. Ross. M. C. Cameron, M.P., spoke for half an hour and showed how kindly the Government had treated Tory newspapers and lawyers. How the timber limits had been disposed of to members and their friends, and he boldly asserted that there were not twenty Tory members who were not in some way interested in timber limits. He raked the Government over for their Northwest policy, their Indian policy, their Gerrymander Bill and concluded with a short discourse on the demerits of the Senate and advocated its abolition.

Dr Macdonald then read an address from the Liberals of Wingham to Mr. Blake, who on stepping forward to reply, received a perfect ovation. He spoke for two hours and a half and every word he uttered seemed to carry conviction with it. After returning thanks for the kindly expressions of confidence contained in the address, he referred to the attacks that had been made upon the character of the Hon. Alex. Mackenzie in years past by Sir John Macdonald. How more recently since the hon. gentleman had lost his health the leader of the Government had eulogized Mr. Mackenzie as an honest and upright man; yet when it came to the matter of Mr. Mackenzie returning to Parliament Sir John was inconsistent enough to endeavor to gerrymander and misorganize his constituency to prevent his re-election if possible. He condemned the present system of Civil Service superannuation, whereby the country is compelled to pay $150,000 yearly to assist in keeping retired civil servants who should have saved sufficient from their salaries to keep them the balance of their lives. The national debt, rate of taxation and the alarming yearly increase in our public expenditure were presented at great length and seemed to wonderfully affect the farmers especially in the audience. He also spoke of the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railroad and the additional burden it had placed on the country. The North west policy of the Government was most thoroughly analyzed and Mr. Blake boldly asserted that the Government was responsible for the late rebellion. He denied the allegation that the Reform party had no policy, and concluded by asking their support for the party of retrenchment and reform.

The meeting broke up with cheers for the Queen and Mr. Blake.
